GENERAL.

Fort William, the 3rd January 1871.

It is with feelings of the deepest sorrow that His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council announces the death, on the evening of the 1st instant, of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab from injuries received by a fall from his elephant at Tank on the previous day.

By this unhappy event Her Majesty has lost a true and faithful servant; the Viceroy an able and experienced comrade; the Punjab a just and energetic ruler; and the Indian Service one of its brightest ornaments.

His Excellency in Council feels assured that the sad intelligence of Sir Henry Durand's untimely end will be received in every part of the Empire with feelings of the keenest regret, not only among his brethren of the Services and his many friends, but by thousands of his Native fellow subjects, whose interests and whose welfare it was the main object of his life to promote.

As a mark of respect for the memory of Sir Henry Durand, His Excellency in Council directs that seventeen Minute Guns be fired from the Ramparts of Fort William at noon to-day, and that the Fort Flag be lowered to half-mast high. The same course of procedure is also to be observed at the seats of Governments in India on receipt of this Notification.

By Order of the Viceroy and Governor General in Council,

ADVERTISEMENT.

'he Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and rticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has ived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an ensive trade in the fibre of Rheea or China-grass is the want of suitable achinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem and the fibre from the ark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

The demand for the fibre is now large, and no doubt might be extended with duced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where e plant could be grown.

The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a uality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English arket, at a total cost, all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear cluded, of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture, to the completion of the manufactu quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, d and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the ma that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Arrangements will be made by the Government of India carefully dried stems, and specimens of fibre separated from the jected to no other process, to mechanical firms and others desir on application to the Secretary to the Government of India in the H

7. All machinery, &c., must be brought by the competitors at to a locality which will be notified hereafter, probably in the North-V or the Punjab, and there worked under the supervision of their ow for a sufficient time to enable the judges appointed by Governm whether all the conditions named have been complied with. T is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. a the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if requ ment, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. o of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. One year from the date of this advertisement will be allowed for of the machines and their transport to the locality named for t and the trials will then be made and the decision of the judges ann invention of sufficient merit is received in the above-named period to offered, the Government will continue to allow machines to be tende the end of two years from the same date, after which, or on the awa the offers herein made will be withdrawn.

Para. 2.—An Officer directed to officiate in an appointment the pay of which is less than that of his substantive appointment in his Regiment is not entitled to any portion of the Staff salary of the less paid appointment, but he will draw the charge, contract, or Office allowance attached to it. In such cases the arrangement for carrying on the duties of the appointment is a matter of Regimental detail, which should be directed in Regimental Orders, and does not require the confirmation of Government or of the Commander-in-Chief. Thus, a Second in Command and Squadron Officer being directed to take charge of another Squadron in addition to his own, or an Adjutant being ordered to assume charge of a Squadron, or a Squadron Officer or Adjutant acting for a Doing Duty Officer, would only be entitled to the allowance for the payment of the Squadron or to the Office allowance of the Doing Duty Officer, in addition to his own Staff salary and Office or other allowances. In like manner, in the Infantry, a Wing Officer being ordered to assume charge of the other Wing in addition to his own, or of the Adjutant or Quarter Master's Office, or an Adjutant being directed to assume charge of the Quarter Master's Office, would simply draw the Office, contract, or charge allowance of the appointment.

10. No person administering any Local or Municipal Fund who is not authorized by some special law to borrow money on the security of such Fund shall borrow money on such security otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Government of India has recognized the importance of facilitating to the utmost the prosecution of local works of improvement, and has come to the conclusion that a system somewhat similar to that established under the English Public Works Loan Acts may be introduced in India with much advantage. The Government would make advances, to be repaid with interest in a term of years, for works of certain classes, the public utility of which was duly ascertained. A certain maximum sum would be placed at the command of the Local Governments, to be applied in making such advances, on which they would operate, the power of extending the advances to new objects being limited by the obligation not to exceed that sum, so that, when the whole authorized sum was once advanced, the earlier loans must be paid off before fresh ones could be made.

It has been ruled, however, more than once recently, that it is not desirable to give the local bodies who deal with local or municipal revenues independent powers of borrowing, and that, when for any special reason it may be expedient that funds should be borrowed for local objects, the Government itself should lend the money. This course has been followed in several cases.

But in most of these cases there is no means of giving the Government a legal lien on the revenues on the security of which the loans are made. A municipal body or a person administering local revenues has no power to do more than deal with the revenue as it is received, and cannot give any valid pledge that the income of future years shall be applied in a particular way, unless under express legislative authority, which certainly has no existence in the case of most of the Local Funds in India. When the last law regarding municipalities in the North-Western Provinces, Act VI of 1868, was passed, the power of borrowing was deliberately rejected by the Government of India and the Legislative Council.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared in the Public Works Department in order to provide for the making of advances of public money for works of public utility to local or municipal bodies, obtaining at the same time valid security for their repayment from the funds at the disposal of such bodies.

LAND IMPROVEMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STRACHEY moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to advances of money by the Government for the improvement of land. He said that a system of advances of this description, under the name of takkávi, had been in force in many parts of India almost from the commencement of our rule, and there were in several old Regulations passed at the end of the last century and the beginning of this, some seventy or eighty years ago, many provisions bearing on the subject. These old laws authorized, under certain conditions, the advancing of Government money for agricultural improvement, and in some parts of India the system had been acted upon to a very considerable extent. The security on which these loans were made was complete, because the security was the land itself on which the improvements were carried out, and the advances were declared by law to be recoverable by the same processes as were applicable to the recovery of arrears of land-revenue. The provisions of these old Regulations had, however, been found to be very incomplete, and, as might have been expected, they were hardly suitable in many respects to the circumstances of the present times, and besides, it was thought very desirable to consolidate the whole law on the subject. This would be a further step towards the carrying out of the great scheme of the consolidation of the statutes of this country which his hon'ble and learned friend Mr. Stephen had in progress.

The Government believed that the principle of giving the assistance of the State to private persons for the purpose of carrying out works of permanent agricultural improvement was one that might with great advantage receive a much wider and more systematic development than had hitherto been given to it. The works for which these advances would be made were not at all great works requiring engineering skill, but works of improvement within the capacity of the proprietors and occupiers of the land themselves, with such little help from the authorities as might be necessary. These works would be for the most part such works as wells and small drainage-works, the reclamation of waste land, and so forth. There was another class of works at the present time for which advances of this kind might be made with special benefit, and for this class of works, through imperfections in the existing law, to which he need not now more particularly allude, advances had hardly been made at all. Northern India was being gradually covered with a system of great canals for irrigation; but the State could only construct the main channels for these works. All subsidiary works, such as the smaller channels for bringing water into the fields and the preparation of the land for irrigation, must be done by the people themselves, by the local proprietors and occupiers of land. Although these subsidiary works required really little skill, and were for the most part inexpensive, still the cost of them was often greater than the small proprietors and cultivators in possession of the land were able to bear without difficulty; and the necessity of incurring this expenditure had been found very often to be a serious obstacle in the way of obtaining full advantage from the irrigation-canals constructed by the Government. Without these subsidiary works of which he had spoken, it was impossible that full benefit could be derived from the canals. It rested with the occupiers of the land themselves to take water or not as they pleased; and the result of the present state of things was that there was frequently extreme delay, after the main channels were made, in taking the water. Thus there was delay in protecting the country against famine, and obtaining for the country the vast accession of wealth and prosperity which was offered to it, and at the same time, necessarily, delay in obtaining for the Government an adequate return on the vast sums of money that it had expended. The Government believed that there could be no object to which portions of the loans which it was proposed to raise for reproductive works could be more advantageously and properly devoted than this; and in making loans for works of this kind there could be absolutely no risk, for the loans would be given on the security of the land itself, and under a system already known to the people and highly appreciated by them. In a very few years all advances of this kind would be repaid, without the slightest doubt, with interest; nor would any elaborate or expensive machinery be required for the carrying out of this system under any development we were likely to see given to it. He believed there could be no doubt that the existing revenue and other public establishments would be quite sufficient to do every thing which was likely to be required.

He need not now enter into the details of the measure he proposed to introduce A more fitting opportunity for doing so would be found on the introduction of the Bill, if the Council would give him leave to proceed with the measure. Provisions would of course be required in detail, to regulate the purposes for which these advances of money might be made, and for defining the conditions under which advances should be given and under which they would be repayable, and, in cases of failure in repayment, for defining the manner in which the money should be recovered. The Local Governments were all consulted regarding this measure in a letter which was published in the Gazette of India some six months ago. Answers had been received from all the Local Governments in the North of India; and although many suggestions had been made, many of which were very valuable, and would require careful consideration in detail, he might say generally that the proposed measure had been generally approved by all the authorities consulted.

This system, which had long been in force in India, though in a very undeveloped form, was identical in principle with that which had been carried out on a large scale in many parts of the United Kingdom under the Land Improvement Acts, with results which were most encouraging, and the nature of which was well known to His Excellency the President, and to which he need not refer more particularly. He thought it might be safely said that there was perhaps no country in the world to which a system of this kind was more properly applicable than India; for in India at the present time there was one great industry, and one only—the agricultural industry. The one great source of wealth in India was the land. It might be safely said that the whole present and future prosperity of this country, and he might add the future financial position of our Empire in India, depended on the development of the vast and practically unlimited, though too often neglected, agricultural resources of the country. If advantage were taken of the means which science and wealth had placed at our disposal for the improvement of the land, and, he might add, if we abstained from putting into operation theories which ignored the only really great and progressive source of wealth which India possessed, it might be safely predicted that the increase of agricultural prosperity in India would be rapid and immense: and he believed that at no distant period the twenty millions of annual income which the land now yielded to the State might be expected to form, he might really say, an insignificant burden on the agricultural resources of the country. The present measure would be a step in this direction, and, he thought, a not unimportant step. He believed that if it were worked intelligently it might produce really great results, and he thought that this measure would also be valuable at the present time as a fresh recognition of the fact that the Government of India was not only a Government, but the receiver, as the representative of the public, of that portion of the rent of the land which had belonged from time immemorial to the State, and that, in its capacity of chief landlord of the country, duties devolved on the Government for the improvement of the land, and for the advancement generally of agriculture, beyond the ordinary duties of a Government, and similar in kind to those duties which a good landlord had everywhere to perform.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ABKÁRÍ BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkárí Revenue in Northern India. He said that the law under which the Abkárí Revenue system was administered in the Bengal Presidency was contained in Acts XXI of 1856 and XXIII of 1860.

By Acts X and XXVIII of 1864, the Government was empowered to extend the operation of the Bengal Acts to any part of the territories under the direct administration of the Governor General in Council, and to the Panjáb.

Through the combined operation of these enactments, the same law was now in force in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and the Central Provinces, and was also practically followed in Oudh, though the precise legality of its operation in that province was open to question.

In British Burmá the Abkárí administration was conducted under local rules which had been legalized by Act XXIII of 1868, and which, so far as they went, were not widely dissimilar to the provisions of the Bengal Act.

The object of the Bill which he was now asking leave to introduce was to substitute for the five Acts just mentioned one consolidated enactment, which would have operation within the same local limits as the recently passed Prisons' Act, namely, all the territories in respect of which this Council discharged the functions of a local legislature.

It was not proposed to apply the Bill to Lower Bengal; for, although the Abkárí was a branch of imperial revenue, the details of its administration could be more conveniently dealt with by local legislation; and in fact, in the Madras Presidency, the law relating to Abkárí was contained in an Act of the local legislature.

The present law in Bengal having been enacted previously to the passing of the Indian Councils' Act of 1861, might be amended, as occasion required, by the local legislature; the effect of applying this Bill to Lower Bengal would be to deprive the Local Council of the power which it now had of making such alterations in the law as might from time to time be found necessary.

For this reason it was thought expedient to leave the present law, so far as its application to Lower Bengal was concerned, to be consolidated by the local legislature, as had been done in the Madras Presidency, and as, it was hoped, would be done at no distant date in the Bombay Presidency, where the law on this subject was at present in a very disjointed state.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ARMS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Robinson introduced the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the manufacture, importation and sale of Arms and Ammunition, and the right to keep and use the same, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in six weeks. He said that this was at present a mere measure of consolidation, and would be referred to the Local Governments and Administrations for their views.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTHERN INDIA CANALS AND DRAINAGE BILL.

Colonel the Hon'ble R. Strachey moved that the Hon'ble Messrs. Inglis and Robinson be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate the construction and maintenance of Public Works for Irrigation, Navigation and Drainage. He intended to proceed at once with the consideration of this important Bill; he hoped that it might be disposed of before the Government of India left the Presidency.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Strachey be added to the Select Committee on the Bill for regulating the procedure of the Courts of Criminal Judicature not established by Royal Charter.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committee was named:—

On the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the manufacture, importation and sale of Arms and Ammunition, and the right to keep and use the same—The Hon'ble Messrs. Stephen, Chapman, Cockerell and Inglis and the Mover.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 6th January 1871.

AGRICULTURAL MACHINERY.

No. 5858, dated 28th November 1870.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of Bombay in the Revenue Department.

Read the following papers :—

No. 871, dated 11th October 1870.

From—T. C. HOPE, Esq., Collector and President, Local Fund Committee, Surat,

To—The Revenue Commissioner, Northern Division.

I have the honor to report on the disposal of the machinery which was purchased by the Surat Local Fund Committee at the Broach Exhibition. It was in the first instance all sent to Bulsar, but eventually two or three articles were transferred to Soopa, as affording a better chance of disposal.

2. The churns worked well, and were at once bought by the Bulsar people,—an experience contrary to that recently reported by the Collector of Ahmedabad. The flour mill and chaff-cutter were also readily disposed of, and appear to have been very good of their kind.

3. The Crosshills' clod-crusher was tried at Bulsar before a large assemblage with two pair of bullocks, and completely pulverised in one hour clods of the largest size which covered a field of ten "wussas" (or 12 goontas) in extent. Manual labour would have occupied two days, and cost Rs. 6 or 7 to produce the same result. The machine was at once bought by the Patel of Waguldhura.

4. The threshing and dressing machine was similarly exhibited and approved of by the public, and was purchased by seven cultivators, who intend to use it jointly.

5. The sugar mill and portable steam engine to drive it could not be tried till the sugar-cane season at the close of 1869. It was then set up at Umulsar. Great difficulties were at first experienced in obtaining cane to crush, as the prejudices of the cultivators were very strong in opposition, and a very low rate was adopted. The result was that the juice was expressed at the rate of 36 maunds per hour, and altogether 564 maunds of juice were expressed and packed in 99 jars of the usual size. The sum received from the people for the work was Rs. 33, at 5 annas 4 pies per jar. It was evident that under special arrangements for fuel the work could be done cheaper, and that the juice would bear a much higher charge for expression. The juice itself also was remarkably clear, and of course obtained rapidly and simply, without the ruinous waste and delay which are inseparable from the Native process. The engine and mill, which I consider to be most complete and satisfactory in every respect, were sold for full price to a party of influential persons resident in the district.

6. The chain pump was during the first season let out to some cultivators in the Bulsar Talooka for Rs. 250, and worked exceedingly well. In fact it is the best pump which has yet been seen in these parts. But the price is such as to place it beyond the reach of ordinary cultivators, and I regret that I have not yet got a purchaser for it.

7. The centrifugal pump is also still on hand. In 1869 it was attached for a short time to the steam engine of the sugar mill, and raised water well; but of course it could not be profitably worked by so large an engine. It was afterwards set up in the village of Moonsar, in Soopa, with the bullock gear belonging to it, but never could be got to work satisfactorily. Mr. Jones, the Municipal Engineer, was good enough to examine it, and reported as follows :—

> "I found the pump fixed at a well, the depth of which was about 22 feet to the surface of the water.
> "The pump and bullock power were fixed by the maistree in a very intelligent manner. I at once had two pair of bullocks attached, and found that they could not get up the required speed to cause the water to flow. I then had the bullock power taken apart, and examined, and found all correct. I again attached the third pair of bullocks, but with no effect, and again four pair; then the speed was increased, and the water commenced flowing, but unsatisfactorily. I then had the bullocks taken away, and applied 40 men, when the proper speed was obtained, and the pump worked very satisfactorily, throwing a large quantity of water. I find that it requires horse-power 2·125 to work a centrifugal pump of the same diameter, which is 4″ with a 22 feet lift; in addition to which it requires two pair of bullocks to work the power independent of the pump. These pumps are very effective when driven by steam power. Although my experience with pumping machinery of every description is very great, I never saw an attempt made to work a pump of that class by bullock power from that depth. It may be done for a lift, say of 8 or 10 feet, and then not effectually, as the least loss of speed on part of the bullocks, the water instantly would stop flowing. Any attempt to raise water above 10 feet with that pump and bullock power will prove a failure."

The pump must therefore await some purchaser who can apply steam power.

8. The fibre machine, I regret to say, has never worked at all. It was sent out from America in the first instance without plans and explanation as to how to set it up and use it. Afterwards, Mr. Ansell of Bassein and the American Consul, Mr. Kittredge, were so good as to give me some information; but it never could be successfully applied. Some parts appear to be wanting. The result is the more to be regretted, as the aloe grows plentifully in Pardee Talooka, and would thrive all along the coast. The waste of stems of plantain trees throughout the district is also enormous.

9. The accompanying statement will show that as the account at present stands there has been only an expenditure of Rs. 671-9-3 finally incurred by the local funds, and that three machines only are on hand. Speaking generally, from these experiences and that of the Broach Exhibition, I should say that there is little chance of introducing English machinery until makers at Home are content to charge prices not, as at present, out of all proportion to the intrinsic value of the article and the means of Indian purchasers. If the Ahmedabad College could comprise a department of agricultural implements and practical mechanism it might perhaps effect much good.

10. In conclusion, I have much pleasure in mentioning the interest taken in the whole subject by the then First Assistant (Mr. Mulock), by Azum Keshawlal Hiralal, Mamlutdar of Bulsar, who sold most of the things, and by Azum Keshawlal Nuthoobhai, then Acting Mamlutdar of Soopa, who set up and worked the sugar mill and engine, and eventually found purchasers for it.

P. S.—It may not be out of place to append a report from Mr. Mulock, showing that Norton's tube wells, of which, I regret to say, four were purchased at a cost of Rs. 603, have proved a total failure.

Account of the Machinery referred to in paragraph 9 of the Surat Collector's No. 871 of 11*th October* 1870.

T. C. HOPE,
Collector and President, L. F. C.

No. 8, dated 12th April 1870.

From—W. B. MULOCK, Esq., Assistant Collector,

To—The Collector of Surat.

In reply to your No. 276, I have the honor to report that the first trial I made with the Norton tube wells was at Umulsar. I sunk the whole length of tubing, but failed to find water. This well was then drawn, and is now in the Soopa Tannah. The second well I sunk at Chiklee, and in an hour and a half from the commencement of the driving of the tube, I had a flow of water for six or seven days. I had men continually working the pump, hoping the water would get clear and the working of the pump easier, but I found the water to the last was muddy, unfit for drinking, and the pumping was a matter of great difficulty. It was as much as a strong-bodied man could do to fill a common country earthen pot, and then it required fully five minutes hard pumping.

The pump portion of the well is most defective and weak. I found two of the pumps broke, bent, and cracked, from the strain required to keep up anything like a flow of water.

I am of opinion that wells such as Norton's will never be much used by the natives of this country; and I have been most disappointed in the results of my experiments. The exertion required to use them is too great, the water too muddy, and the supply too meagre.

The well might now be used by the Local Fund Department, to discover the depth of water and its quality, before sinking a proposed well.

NOTIFICATIONS.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 11th January 1870.

No. 145.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following Advertisement :—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rheea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.
2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and no doubt might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.
3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost, all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included, of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture, to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Arrangements will be made by the Government of India for the supply of carefully dried stems, and specimens of fibre separated from the bark, but subjected to no other process, to mechanical firms and others desirous of competing, on application to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

7. All machinery, &c., must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to a locality which will be notified hereafter, probably in the North-Western Provinces or the Punjab, and there worked under the supervision of their own representatives for a sufficient time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. One year from the date of this advertisement will be allowed for the preparation of the machines and their transport to the locality named for the competition, and the trials will then be made and the decision of the judges announced. If no invention of sufficient merit is received in the above-named period to obtain the prize offered, the Government will continue to allow machines to be tendered for trial till the end of two years from the same date, after which, or on the award of the prize, the offers herein made will be withdrawn.

The 11th January 1871.

No. 104.—The Governor General in Council is desirous of affording such increased facilities for the conversion of Currency Notes as can be given without imposing on the Government the cost of making remittances of specie.

With this view, it is notified that, so far as may be practicable, due regard being had to the primary obligation to discharge in cash all Notes at the place of issue and at the principal Office of Issue of the Presidency, the coin reserve at each Office of Issue will be held available for cashing Currency Notes of any Circle.

The amount up to which each Office of Issue is prepared to cash the Notes of other Circles will be notified daily at such Office for public information.

It is hoped that the arrangements now made will admit of Notes of all Circles being ordinarily convertible at the Offices of Issue in the interior, and at one at least of the Presidency towns; it cannot, however, be expected that the Offices of the two great towns, Calcutta and Bombay, between which places there is an active exchange, will, under ordinary circumstances, be able at the same time to cash Notes other than those which by law they are bound to cash on presentation.

It is further notified that the Head Commissioner of Currency at Calcutta and the Commissioners at Madras and Bombay have been authorized to sell drafts at their discretion on such Offices of Issue as have accumulations of coin which it is desirable to reduce. Particulars as to the places on which drafts are available from time to time can be learnt on application to the Officers named.

The 12th January 1871.

W. ROBINSON.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 6th January 1871, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month :—

No. 1 OF 1871.

A Bill to facilitate the construction of Works of Public Utility from Local and Municipal Funds.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to facilitate the construction of works of public utility from Local and Municipal Funds by means of advances to be made by the Government: It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Local Public Works Act, 1870."

Extent of Act.

2. This Act shall extend to all parts of British India.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"Advance."

"Advance" means an advance made under this Act and includes all interest and charges payable to the Government under this Act on account of such advance :

"Fund."

"Fund" means all monies received or receivable on account of a Local or Municipal Fund from which an advance is to be repaid :

"Additional rate."

"Additional rate" means any rate or cess which may be levied for the purposes of a Local or Municipal Fund from which an advance is to be repaid :

"The person administering."

"The person administering" includes all persons duly authorized to receive, keep in deposit, or expend a Fund, or an additional rate.

Advances from public revenues for carrying out works of public utility.

4. If the person administering any Public or Municipal Fund desires to obtain an advance from the Government for the purpose of carrying out, or of assisting in carrying out, a work of public utility at the charge of such Fund, he may make an application to the Local Government for such advance, and the Local Government, after such enquiry as in each case it may think desirable, if satisfied that such advance should be made, may authorize it to be made, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained.

Governor General to make rules.

5. The Governor General in Council shall from time to time make rules for regulating all matters relating to the making of such advances, and the said rules shall provide, amongst other things, for the following;

1. The determination of the Local and Municipal Funds to which this Act shall apply:

2. The works for which advances may be made under this Act:

3. The manner of making applications for advances:

4. The manner of conducting enquiries relative to applications:

5. The manner of recording the conditions on which an advance is made:

6. The manner and time of making advances:

7. The inspection of works carried out under this Act:

8. The instalments by which advances shall be repaid, the interest to be charged on advances and the manner and time of repaying advances and discharging the interest charged on the same:

9. The determination of the charges that may be made in respect of any advance, against the Fund from which such advance is repayable, on account of the share of the costs of the Government in giving effect to this Act:

11. The amount that may from time to time be applied by the Local Government from the public revenues for the purpose of making advances.

The said rules shall be published in the Gazette of India, and when so published all Courts shall take judicial notice of them.

Obligation to repay advances.

6. The person from time to time administering any Fund shall duly repay and discharge such advance to the Government from such Fund, in accordance with the conditions on which it was made, and in preference to all other claims against such Fund.

If advance be not repaid, Local Government may appoint officer to keep Fund.

7. If at any time an advance be not repaid and discharged in accordance with the conditions on which it was made, the Local Government may appoint an officer to take possession of and receive the whole or any specified part of the Fund in the place of the person for the time being administering the same, and thereupon and so long as such officer shall remain so appointed and to the extent directed by the Local Government, the said person shall cease to have any authority to keep or receive the said Fund, and the receipt of such officer shall be a sufficient discharge for all demands payable to such Fund.

The Local Government may direct such officer to repay and discharge the advance as aforesaid from any amount so received by him. All payments made in that behalf by such officer shall be deemed to be a first charge against the said Fund, and the residue only of any amount so received, after making all such payments, shall be repaid to the person administering the said Fund.

Local Government may direct officer to administer Fund.

8. If at any time an advance be not repaid and discharged, according to the conditions on which it was made, and if such advance has been made subject to the condition that an additional rate shall be levied to provide for the due repayment and discharge of the advance, and if the person administering the Fund fails to levy such rate in the manner required under the said rules, the Local Government may order him to do all things needful for the levy of the said rate, and may appoint an officer to levy and receive the same.

An officer so appointed shall, so far as he shall be authorized so to do by the Local Government, and for the purpose of levying and receiving such rate, exercise all or any of the powers commonly so exercised by the person administering the Fund, and in the place of such person; and so long as such officer remains so appointed and to the extent of the authority given to the said officer by the Local Government, such person shall cease to exercise the said powers.

An additional rate levied and received under this section shall be dealt with as though it had been received under the section next preceding.

No advance to exceed six times income of Fund.

9. No advance under this Act shall exceed six times the gross income of the Fund received during the year next preceding that in which the advance is authorized by the Local Government.

Money not to be borrowed except under this Act.

10. No person administering any Local or Municipal Fund who is not authorized by some special law to borrow money on the security of such Fund shall borrow money on such security otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Government of India has recognized the importance of facilitating to the utmost the prosecution of local works of improvement, and has come to the conclusion that a system somewhat similar to that established under the English Public Works Loan Acts may be introduced in India with much advantage. The Government would make advances, to be repaid with interest in a term of years, for works of certain classes, the public utility of which was duly ascertained. A certain maximum sum would be placed at the command of the Local Governments, to be applied in making such advances, on which they would operate, the power of extending the advances to new objects being limited by the obligation not to exceed that sum, so that, when the whole authorized sum was once advanced, the earlier loans must be paid off before fresh ones could be made.

It has been ruled, however, more than once recently, that it is not desirable to give the local bodies who deal with local or municipal revenues independent powers of borrowing, and that, when for any special reason it may be expedient that funds should be borrowed for local objects, the Government itself should lend the money. This course has been followed in several cases.

But in most of these cases there is no means of giving the Government a legal lien on the revenues on the security of which the loans are made. A municipal body or a person administering local revenues has no power to do more than deal with the revenue as it is received, and cannot give any valid pledge that the income of future years shall be applied in a particular way, unless under express legislative authority, which certainly has no existence in the case of most of the Local Funds in India. When the last law regarding municipalities in the North-Western Provinces, Act VI of 1868, was passed, the power of borrowing was deliberately rejected by the Government of India and the Legislative Council.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared in the Public Works Department in order to provide for the making of advances of public money for works of public utility to local or municipal bodies, obtaining at the same time valid security for their repayment from the funds at the disposal of such bodies.

An Attorney-at-law, Pleader, Mukhtár or Revenue Agent may make an agreement in writing with any person retaining or employing him respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of any past or future services, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of business done or to be done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, either by a gross sum, or by commission or percentage, or by salary or otherwise, and either at the same or at a greater or at a less rate as or than the rate at which he would otherwise be entitled to be remunerated, subject to the provisions and conditions in this part of this Act contained:

Provided that when any such agreement is made in respect of business done or to be done in any suit, the amount payable under the agreement shall not be received by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an Officer of the High Court or District Court. If it appear to such Officer that the agreement is not fair and reasonable, he shall refer it to the Court for opinion, and the Court shall have power either to reduce the amount payable under the agreement or to order the agreement to be cancelled, and the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements in respect of the business done to be ascertained in the same manner as if no such agreement had been made.

Agreements to exclude further claims.

34. Such an agreement shall exclude any further claim of the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent beyond the terms of the agreement in respect of any services, fees, charges, or disbursements in relation to the conduct and completion of the business in reference to which the agreement is made, except such services, fees, charges or disbursements, if any, as are expressly excepted by the agreement.

Reservation of responsibility for negligence.

35. A provision in any such agreement that the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be liable for negligence, or that he shall be relieved from any responsibility to which he would otherwise be subject as such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, shall be wholly void.

Examination and enforcement of agreements.

36. No suit shall be brought upon any such agreement.

But the High Court or District Court may examine and determine every question respecting the validity or effect of any such agreement,

And on petition of any person, or the representative of any person, a party to such agreement, or alleged to be liable to pay, or claiming to be entitled to be paid, the costs, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of which the agreement is made,

if the agreement appear to such Court to be in all respects fair and reasonable, the Court may, by order, enforce it in such manner and subject to such conditions, if any, as to the costs of the petition as the Court thinks fit:

Improper agreements may be set aside.

But if the agreement does not appear to the Court to be fair and reasonable, the Court may declare it to be void, and shall thereupon have power—

(a) to order the agreement to be given up to be cancelled,

(b) to direct the costs, fees, charges and disbursements incurred or chargeable in respect of the matters included therein to be ascertained in the same manner as if such agreement had not been made, and

(c) to make such order as to the costs of and relating to such petition, and the proceedings thereon, as the Court thinks fit.

Every petition under this section shall be chargeable under the Court Fees Act, 1870, as if it were a plaint.

Every order under this section may be enforced as if it were a decree.

Prohibition of certain stipulations.

37. No purchase by an Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent of the interest, or any part of the interest, of his client in any suit or other contentious proceeding to be brought or maintained, or in any unsatisfied decree or order, and no agreement by which an Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent retained or employed to prosecute any suit, stipulates for payment only in the event of success in such suit or proceeding, shall be enforced by any Court or Revenue Authority.

Provision in case of death or incapacity.

38. Where an Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent has made an agreement with his client in pursuance of the provisions of this Act and anything has been done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent under the agreement, and before the agreement has been completely performed by him, such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent dies or becomes incapable to act, an application may be made to the High Court or District Court by any party to the agreement, or by the representatives of any such party, and such Court shall thereupon have the same power to enforce or set aside such agreement, so far as the same may have been acted upon, as if such death or incapacity had not happened.

The Court, if it deem the agreement to be in all respects fair and reasonable, may order the amount due in respect of the past performance of the agreement to be ascertained by an officer of the Court, and such officer in ascertaining such amount shall have regard, so far as may be, to the terms of the agreement, and payment of the amount found to be due may be enforced in the same manner as if the agreement had been completely performed by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

As to change of Pleader after agreement.

39. After any such agreement has been made, and before the conclusion of the business to which it relates, the client may, notwithstanding such agreement, change his Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

In case of such change the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, party to such agreement, shall be deemed to have become incapable to act under the same within the meaning of section thirty-nine;

and upon any order being made for ascertaining the amount due to him in respect of the past performance of such agreement, the High Court or District Court shall direct the said officer to have regard to the circumstance under which such change has taken place;

and the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be deemed entitled to the full amount of the remuneration agreed to be paid to him, unless it appear that there has been no default, negligence, improper delay, or other conduct on his part affording reasonable ground to the client for the change.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has two primary objects, one, to consolidate the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents, the other, to amend that law so far as it relates to agreements between certain legal practitioners and their clients.

In Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh, the law on the subject is contained in three Acts (XX of 1865, XXIX of 1865 and IX of 1866): in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay it is contained in Acts I of 1846, XX of 1853, Madras Regulation XIV of 1816, and Bombay Regulation II of 1827, chapter VI; in the Panjáb, Act IV of 1866 (sections ten, eleven, twelve, forty-four and fifty-one) contains some special provisions as to Pleaders in the Chief Court and their fees; and in British Burma the Recorders' Courts Act XXI of 1863 (sections sixteen, seventeen and eighteen) contains similar provisions. The Central Provinces and all British Burma outside the local limits of the Recorders' jurisdiction appear to be devoid of any law on the subject.

The present Bill consolidates and extends to the whole of British India such of the provisions of Acts XX of 1865 and XXIX of 1865 as appear to be generally applicable to the country.

With regard to agreements for remuneration between clients and their legal advisers, Act XX of 1865, section thirty-nine, permits such agreements to be made, and declares that they shall not be enforced otherwise than by regular suit. This provision, which has been held to place such agreements on the same footing as an ordinary contract between private persons, has, for obvious reasons, not worked satisfactorily. A flagrant instance of the evil of the present law is furnished by the recent case of Nuthoo Lall v. Budree Pershad, 1 Allahabad Reports 1; and though the High Court there held that it was not the duty of the lower Courts to decree (as they had done), on mere proof of the contract, the enforcement of an extortionate bargain between a pleader and his client, the legislature should not leave so important a rule to depend on the decision of a single High Court. The Bill repeals the section in question, and replaces it by a set of provisions modelled on the recent English Statute 33 & 34 Vic., Cap. 28 (to amend the law relating to the remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors), sections four, six, seven, eight, nine, eleven, thirteen and fourteen.

Section thirty-three of the Bill declares that pleaders, &c., may make agreements as to their remuneration, but that the amount agreed on shall not be paid until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an officer of the High Court or of the District Court. The Court is empowered either to reduce the amount or to order the agreement to be cancelled. The agreement (section thirty-four) will exclude further claims in respect of the business therein referred to. Provisions relieving the pleader, &c., from liability for negligence will be void (section thirty-five). No suits are to be brought on such agreements, but on petition of either party the Court may enforce or set it aside (section thirty-six). The Bill then declares void (a) purchases by a pleader of his client's interest in future suits or in unsatisfied decrees, and (b) agreements by which the pleader stipulates for payment only in the event of success. Provision is made (section thirty-eight) for the case of the pleader's death or incapacity, and the client is empowered (section thirty-nine) to change his pleader notwithstanding such agreement.

The other novel provisions of the Bill are only two.

At the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, all Mukhtárs are restored to the privilege of appearing, pleading and acting in Criminal Courts, which they formerly enjoyed under Act XX of 1865, and Mukhtárs heretofore admitted and enrolled in Lower Bengal as Revenue Agents are empowered (section seven) to appear and act in suits in Munsifs' Courts under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 (to amend the procedure in suits between landlord and tenant).

Penalties are provided (section forty-five) for Advocates, Pleaders and Mukhtárs removed or suspended by a High Court who practise after such removal or during such suspension.

and the officers of the Opium Department shall exercise the powers conferred by this Act on Ábkárí officers for the seizure of illicit opium and the arrest of persons found in possession thereof, and in respect to such seizures and arrests, shall be deemed to be Ábkárí officers within the meaning of this Act.

SCHEDULE.

NUMBER AND YEAR.	TITLE OF ACT.
XXI of 1856	An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.
XXIII of 1860 ..	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal).
X of 1864 ...	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal).
XXVIII of 1864 ..	An Act to provide for the extension of Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal) to the provinces under the control of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.
XXIII of 1868 ..	An Act to give validity to certain Abkárí Rules in British Burma.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The law relating to the Ábkárí revenue in Northern India is now contained in four Acts, XXI of 1856, XXIII of 1860, X of 1864 and XXVIII of 1864. In British Burma the law is in the form of executive rules to which Act XXIII of 1868 gave a temporary validity. The primary object of this Bill is to substitute one enactment for all these Acts and Rules.

The law has been re-arranged, and the wording here and there improved; but no change has been made in its substance otherwise than by the omission of a few sections dealing with matters sufficiently provided for by the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) and the Sea Customs Act (VI of 1863).

The Bill does not extend to the Lower Provinces of Bengal; and the power of the local legislature to deal from time to time with the details of the Ábkárí law will thus remain unimpaired.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

FAMINE IN SIND, AND MEASURES TAKEN FOR THE RELIEF OF SUFFERERS.

No. 116, dated 19th October 1870.

From— COLONEL SIR W. L. MEREWETHER, K.C.S.I. and C.B., Commr. in Sind,

To—His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor and President in Council, Bombay.

I have the honor to submit for the information of your Excellency in Council the accompanying Report on the influx of destitute Marwarees into the Thurr and Parkur Districts, and of the measures adopted for their relief, forwarded by the Political Superintendent, Major Tyrwhitt, in compliance with the instructions contained in the 5th paragraph of Government Resolution in the General Department No. 1277, dated the 3rd June last.

2. Attached to the Report also are statements showing the amount sanctioned from Imperial and Local Funds for the relief of Marwarees, and the manner in which they have been expended.

3. I have, from time to time, kept your Excellency in Council informed of the measures which were being taken, by the transmission of copies of letters, memoranda, &c., reporting the proceedings of the Political Superintendent, a resumé of which is given in the accompanying Report.

4. In his 10th paragraph, Major Tyrwhitt states that he made his first Report (No. 457) to me on the 3rd December 1868, but here he is in error. On the 26th October 1868, he informed me of the great distress which prevailed in the desert, and even prior to that, as early as in September, I had heard of the destitute state of the people in those parts of Sind which are dependent on rain for their cultivation, and I requested that means for the employment of the sufferers should be suggested. The Collector of Kurrachee informed me that although in Kohistan the people would be impoverished, he did not anticipate anything like a severe famine. Subsequent events have proved that Kohistan did not suffer like the desert, but fortunately for the latter tract of country Major Tyrwhitt did not allow the opportunity to pass, and as will be seen from the appendices to the Report very many useful works have been executed, and very many lives have been saved by the measures of relief adopted.

5. Government have in several resolutions been pleased to record their approval of the judicious arrangements made by Major Tyrwhitt in connection with the famine in his districts, and I trust that the interesting Report now submitted will place the excellent services of that officer in a still more favourable light. His activity in proceeding at the commencement of the calamity to satisfy himself of the actual state of all parts of his districts; his tact and judgment in dealing with those who could, but would not, work, and others who were willing to work but very ignorant of what was required of them; his discretion in the selection of works on which to employ this extra and peculiar description of labour, and the moral effect of his visit to those parts of his Superintendency where the cholera was raging most fiercely; all these facts prove him to be eminently deserving of the special notice of Government.

6. Of the excellence of his arrangements, and of the great care he took and caused to be taken to alleviate the sufferings of the poor creatures, I had full opportunity of judging during my tour last cold season, when nearly all the towns in which Marwaree fugitives were located, were visited. The sight of these poor people was, even then, after relief had been afforded for some time, most heart-rending. Old men and old women, with young children of all ages, were in the worst state of destitution—mere skin and bone; most of them covered also with sores, and all perfectly ravenous though they were receiving two fair meals a day. At Oomercote alone there were collected on the clear space between the town and the fort 247 human beings, not one of whom looked as if they could live another day. There were many others in a rather better state.

7. But I must not forget to mention those who laboured with Major Tyrwhitt so earnestly, so zealously, and so effectively in relieving suffering and averting death.

8. Lieutenant Mayhew deserves great credit for the able assistance which he rendered to Major Tyrwhitt from first to last, and for the energetic measures adopted by him when acting as Political Superintendent during the absence of Major Tyrwhitt on other duty at Kurrachee. A description of what he had to undergo during the latter period is given in paragraphs 24 to 28 of the Report.

9. To Doctor Williams, Superintendent of Vaccination in Sind, too much credit cannot be given. He set a noble example by volunteering his services and accompanying Major Tyrwhitt on his visit to the cholera-stricken towns in the Narra, and in the desert, where he afforded great relief to the sufferers.

10. Major Tyrwhitt has appended to his Report a list of the Native subordinates who rendered great assistance. There is no doubt that these officers worked hard and zealously to carry out the orders of their superior, and their cordial co-operation deserves marked commendation.

No. 512, dated 17th September 1870.

From—MAJOR G. TYRWHITT, Political Superintendent, Thurr and Parkur,

To—The Commissioner in Sind.

I have the honor, with reference to Government Resolution No. 1277 of 3rd June 1870, transmitted to me under your endorsement No. 786 of 16th June 1870, to furnish a full Report on the famine that has raged for two years in Thurr and Parkur, and Rajpootana generally, confining myself to that portion only of the great desert called the "Thurr and Parkur Superintendency," to the arrangements made to provide the numbers that flocked in to Sind across it, with the means of living, by supplying them with work, and to the measures adopted to ameliorate suffering and to avert death.

2. The desert is a mass of huge sand-hills lying north-east and south-west resembling the troubled sea; it is most fertile when blessed with rain in plenty, affording excellent grazing for horned cattle and also for camels, that for the latter being of many kinds, and not to be equalled anywhere in the Province of Sind. The vallies are cultivated with the staple food of the district, namely, bajree, and the produce is good; wheat is also sown; such though is only the case when rain has fallen abundantly, and seasonably. On rain, it must be remembered, "Thurr and Parkur as well as Marwar" is entirely dependent, both for drinking and agricultural purposes, and when rain fails, the wells, which are very deep, varying from 200 to 320 feet, either fail in their supply altogether, or become perfectly salt. The area of Thurr and Parkur Superintendency is 15,000 square miles, and the population is about 225,000.

3. A good and seasonable fall of rain has not been known in the desert since 1861, and from 1865 to 1868 drought prevailed.

4. To the want of rain then this deplorable Famine must be attributed, and its prolongation to locusts.

5. In 1868 there was no rain; consequently there was again a failure of crops in Rajpootana, and in October of that year from reports and rumours it was clear that famine was inevitable. I saw plainly what would be the extent of the calamity, and directed that I should be kept fully informed of the state of things.

6. I will for the sake of clearness divide my report into two parts, namely,

The first advent of the fugitives; and

The second advent of the fugitives.

7. Under the first of these heads will be included all that happened and was done to alleviate distress between their first coming, and their departure on the commencement of the rains; this period extends from October 1868 to the end of July 1869.

8. And under the second head the same information will be given from the 31st July 1869 to the 31st July 1870.

FIRST ADVENT.

9. About the middle of September 1868, Reports were frequently received setting forth the state of the desert-crops, owing to the poor monsoon, and also regarding the state of Rajpootana generally, and stating that famine was raging there. I immediately gave directions for every possible inquiry to be made, and all information to be procured, and regular Reports made to me weekly. About the 20th of October 1868 large numbers of fugitives commenced crossing the border into Sind, vid Guddra, Harra, and Nuggur, moving on through the desert vid Mittee, Nawacote, Oomercote, Chachra and Nubbeesur, to the alluvial plains of Sind. It appeared at once necessary that some one able to arrange for, and see to, the wants of these people, and to prevent the spread of disease, if it existed among them, should be on the spot. Accordingly I, with my establishment, then at Hydrabad, hastened out to the desert, and made the first Report to the Commissioner in Sind on this subject, vide No. 457,* dated 3rd December 1868.

* Submitted to Government with Commissioner's memo. No. 1641, dated 14th December 1868.

10. I then sent out written instructions to all Native officials and Patels of villages, directing them to assist and see to the fugitives, and to give them shelter, but to keep them (for fear of disease being among them) outside, and at some distance from, the villages. To the merchants directions were given to keep on hand a goodly supply of grain to meet the demands, which request, I am glad to record, was freely and willingly complied with. I saw that large numbers of these people, the majority of whom were in good health, and possessing fair strength, had no means of procuring a livelihood, as the requirements of the Zemindars and people of Thurr and Parkur did not meet the demand for labour, and I also perceived that it would be necessary for Government to supply the means for providing them with work. Accordingly, an application, on 24th November, was made (vide No. 448,* dated 27th November 1868) for a grant, which was at once sanctioned by Sir William Merewether.

* Submitted to Government with Commissioner's memo. No. 1641, dated 14th December 1868.

11. It was apparent from the first that the arrangements at the desert towns, other than Oomercote, could not with safety and satisfaction to myself be left entirely in the hands of the Native officials; not because I had any doubt as to their integrity, but simply on account of their inability, speaking generally, in cases of emergency to act promptly, and on their own responsibility. I therefore deemed it advisable to visit these places. Unfortunately I was unable to adopt this course at once, as my Assistant, Lieutenent Mayhew, was poorly and could not leave Hydrabad with me. However, he soon joined me, and I then set out and visited the greater portion of the desert, and made the necessary arrangements at the different towns, and returned to Oomercote on 29th December 1868. There I found the fugitives were far more numerous than when I left, and the Returns showed that very large numbers had passed on to Sind, and that many had remained at the different desert towns, and that large numbers were employed by the Zemindars in reaping their crops on the Thurr and Mitrow Canals.

12. Throughout the Superintendency numerous parties, varying from 50 to 200 in number, were employed on making new and repairing old roads, buildings and tanks, or levelling mounds around towns, watering road-side trees, in fact on every possible kind of work, the same being executed by those who were, according to their condition and health, able to work. Many of the fugitives possessed property in the shape of cattle and carts, but the majority, even on their first arrival, were totally without means of supporting themselves. Those who possessed cattle disposed of them, as soon as they could, to the residents in Sind, and frequently went partners with some one in the whole of their flock.

13. Up to the end of March 1869 large numbers of fugitives continued to flock across the desert from Rajpootana into Sind. Many (about 2,500) remained in this Superintendency, and arrangements were made to provide those who required it with work, or subsistence, on works. About this time upwards of 8,019 individuals were employed by Government, and upwards of 16,981 supported themselves either by their trade or by miscellaneous job work. Hundreds upon hundreds of camels daily passed across the desert for the purpose of transporting grain from Sind into Marwar, and it was not rare to see "Kuttors" (lines of animals) thus loaded numbering 300 camels.

14. About 14th of February 1869, the number of fugitives at Oomercote, Chachra, and Guddra had become so great that I was unable to find work for them in the vicinity of those towns, or the means of working them in the neighbourhood owing to the scarcity of water in the Thurr. I consequently made up my mind to clear the canals, or as many of them as I could, by Marwaree agency. I was fully aware that the cost would be far greater than if done by the residents themselves; still as the object of Government was to avert starvation, it did not take long to decide. Accordingly, party after party, varying from 50 to 300, including males and females of all ages, were despatched from the different towns in the desert, or directed, as soon as they entered the Superintendency, to Joodda, where the work was going on. In a very short time indeed the Joodda excavating party numbered upwards of 1,000 individuals, the largest muster being about 2,000. To superintend this work from the commencement I deputed my Assistant, Lieutenant Mayhew. Few would believe the difficulties to be overcome. The refugees were discontented and disinclined to work. They did not even know how to use the powra, and never had, I may say, any of them ever seen a canal, much less the mode of clearing one. They could do nothing for themselves, and had to be provided with every imaginable thing, even water and grain, and the means of grinding and cooking the latter; and no little perseverance and patience was necessary (to say nothing of trouble and labour involved) in order to initiate them into the work. However by providing every possible comfort, and personally paying them, their confidence was at last gained, and within an incredibly short space of time the greatest content reigned, and the end sought was attained in a way altogether unanticipated by the Native officials and people who had witnessed the ignorance and indolence of the fugitives, on their first advent into these parts. Thus seven canals were cleared totally or partially in Thurr and Parkur, the number of miles being 36, and the total sum laid out in this manner Rs. 12,368-8, and the rate being Rs. 6-13-1 per 1,000 cubic feet, or Rs. 4-5-1 in excess of the ordinary prevailing rate; the cause being the weakly and sickly condition of the fugitives, and their ignorance regarding the work and the use of the tools they had to use.

15. The fugitives, though worn and wretched, were not unhealthy on their first appearance, and the mortality among them was not great. The sickness with which they were afflicted was chiefly brought on from exposure, such as diarrhœa, dysentery, fever, cold, cough, and asthma, and a number of cases of atrophy. These ailments greatly increased, and became more severe when the rain fell in December, and the result of course was more fatal. All sick were attended with great care at the dispensaries at Nuggur, Mittee, Oomercote, and Kipra; and all Kardars and Thannadars throughout the charge were supplied with quinine, and cough mixture, and light purgatives, together with instructions in the vernacular as to the way to administer them.

16. The mortality among the Marwaree fugitives was not (if everything is considered) great during the time included in the first advent; it is estimated that 700 or 800 deaths occurred.

17. On or about the 7th June 1869 there was an earlier and fair fall of rain in the desert, and all fugitives who were able commenced returning to their native country, and flocked into the desert again from Sind on their way back through Oomercote, Nubbeesur, and Nawakote, and left viâ Nuggur, Harral, Chachra, and Guddra. They had not gone far into the States across the Sind Eastern Frontier when they became aware of what we had before ascertained, and informed them of, namely, that the "rain-fall had not been as plentiful as in Sind, and not general." The idea among the poor wretches was that the British Government wished to detain them; consequently they placed no faith in the warnings which were given with the one object of averting disappointment, and inevitable distress, the country to which they were so anxious to return being in no better condition than when they had been compelled to flee from it.

18. The result of this obstinate return was, that before they had proceeded many miles from the border they met large numbers of their country people hastening towards Sind, and by them they were undeceived as to the state of their native land, and informed that there was no grain to be had even if they had the means of purchasing it; further there were no means of earning a livelihood, and above all, that the wells were dry or so brackish that the water was undrinkable.

19. Cholera was reported on the 7th of June 1869 to have broken out at several of the villages in the Nuggur Parkur Talooka, a portion of Thurr Parkur bordering on the Runn of Cutch, and partly separated by it from Palunpoor. It was undoubtedly imported by the fugitives from Marwar, who were returning in large numbers, and with them new comers also. It soon spread, and in a very short time appeared in the towns of Harral, Kainsur, Chachra, Guddra, and Nubbeesur, and on the 14th July 1869 at Oomercote. Everything that was possible for man to do from the first was done. The Civil Surgeon at Hydrabad, Dr. Holmsted, was applied to for such instructions and advice as he might deem of use both as to quarantine, conservancy, and treatment of persons affected with cholera. These instructions were, on receipt, carefully translated into the vernacular, and each Kardar and Thannadar, as also every Hospital Assistant in the charge, furnished with a copy. Medicines were procured, both ordinary and patent, and distributed throughout the Superintendency among all the officials, with plain and clear instructions regarding their use. But all exertions and precautions appeared to be of slight use. The cholera spread, and worked its way through the desert, and the mortality was very great, being estimated at fully 1,100 souls, the number attacked being 2,500; and this I am confident from inquiry personally made is below the number, notwithstanding that the number of persons attacked, as gathered from the Reports* in Sind, is said to be 1,354 and the deaths 738. The people refused, and objected to our mode of treatment, and declined the medicines when offered. I proceeded into the districts myself immediately the cholera spread, and was accompanied voluntarily by Dr. Williams, Superintendent of Vaccination in Sind, and we together visited numerous villages in the desert, administering medicines and comfort to those affected, and paying particular attention to the cleanliness of towns and conservancy generally. Application was made to the Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals in Sind, Dr. Mahaffy, for assistance in the way of extra Hospital Assistants and medicines, and I feel obliged to him for the assistance he was (after great difficulty) able to give me, and the alacrity with which it was rendered. Doctor Williams and I remained in the districts until the end of August. The cholera no doubt was checked by the heavy rains, and it was over before we left for Hydrabad.

* Vide Dr. Williams' Report of 31st March 1870.

20. Rain fell in abundance on and after July 19th, and all fugitives both in Sind and Thurr and Parkur, who were able to do so, returned to their homes, but in Thurr and Parkur about 2,000 souls remained, many of whom through weakness were unable to travel; some of these were in a condition to do light work, with which they were provided; others were supported gratis. It must be remembered that the people of the desert are, I may say, entirely dependent on their cattle, of which every one possessed a large number, but of these fully two-thirds had died from drought during the four years it prevailed. Thus the people of Thurr and Parkur, like those of Marwar, were penniless.

SECOND ADVENT OF THE FUGITIVES.

21. As above stated rain fell most copiously on and after the 19th July. The prospects were most promising, and we thought we had seen the last of the famine, but in this hope we were doomed to be disappointed. Rain had fallen in a manner never before known in the memory of man. It was abundant, frequent, and seasonable. Cultivation was much extended, and every soul believed the country was at last favoured, and that want would soon be a thing of the past. But on the 15th of September 1869 locusts appeared. From that date up to the end of February 1870 they never left the country, but bred there. Although every possible expedient was resorted to by the people for their destruction, and numerous methods for the same circulated by the Commissioner in Sind, all was useless. The country was for miles and miles carpeted with these pests. In short to prevent the destruction of crops in a country infested with incalculable myriads is not in the power of man. As before stated, these enemies to cultivation appeared in the Thurr and Parkur Superintendency on the 15th of September 1869, and never left it until after the rubbee had been reaped. The crops of bajree and til were totally destroyed, cotton was greatly injured, but rice was not touched by them, owing to their fear of the water. The assessment on rain crops (bajree and til) had consequently to be remitted in toto; but to that description of crop cultivated on irrigational works, the damage done was not so great, though fully two-thirds of those crops were destroyed. The total amount of remissions in this Superintendency granted, owing to destruction of crops by locusts, was Rs. 72,080-11, or per cent on the entire land revenue.

22. Then owing to the locusts the prolongation of the famine in Marwar is to be attributed, for, be it remembered, the whole of Rajpootana was infested by locusts, and devastation by them there as entire as in any part of Sind.

23. Such a season as that of 1869 is not in the memory of the oldest resident of the Thurr, both as to rain and calamity of various kinds, and it will be for ever memorable.

24. About the middle of September, the "second advent" commenced. Hundreds and hundreds of emaciated and starving wretches flocked across the desert, viâ Guddra, Oomercote, Chachra, Harral, Nuggur, Nawacote, and Joodda into Sind. This time they did not enter Thurr and Parkur in the orderly manner they did on their first coming. The hardships and exposure they had undergone during the year previous had told sadly on them. They had lost everything they possessed previous to the abundant monsoon, which would have saved and restored comfort to thousands had not the country swarmed with locusts.

25. The poor wretches were dreadfully emaciated, and hundreds through exhaustion fell, and died where they fell, there to be devoured by the birds, wild dogs, jackals, &c.

26. All along the roads the corpses of these wretched people were to be seen. The sight was heart-rending and revolting. The rush during the months of October, November, and December was great. The poor starving wretches were ravenous, and almost driven to desperation, seizing and devouring whatever they could lay their hands on. All that human aid could do was done, but with little effect, for nearly all of the fugitives were in such an extremely emaciated state that death seemed pictured in their faces.

27. Instructions were again sent forth, immediately on the state of things being known, to all the Kardars, Thannadars, and others, as well as to the Patels of all the villages which had not been deserted to give every assistance in the way of food, &c., to the fugitives, in order to enable them to reach the large towns where they could be sheltered from the cold and fed, and to inter all corpses; and it is with the greatest satisfaction I record that on all sides they were most willingly, and compassionately responded to.

28. During the crisis my Assistant, Lieutenant Mayhew, was Acting Superintendent of Thurr and Parkur, and saw that the instructions issued both by me and himself were carried out; for which purpose as well as to secure the interests of Government, he visited the whole of the desert in November, travelling entirely alone (see Reports Nos. 495 and 523 of 26th November and 23rd December 1869), without even a servant. He inspected the crops and decided on the necessity for total remissions, which suggestion was approved of by Sir William Merewether. The arrangements made for the fugitives I will now record were both admirable and creditable.

29. During the first advent those who were unable to work received money wherewith to buy the necessaries of life, and this was found to answer fairly; but the state of things on the second advent was very different. The people had suffered long and intense hunger. They clutched the money, and instead of procuring food with it, they hoarded it in the hopes that they would soon return to their homes; while they endeavoured to live on berries, leaves, grass seeds, and the bark of trees, which they made either into soup or bread according to circumstances; the result was death from dysentery or diarrhœa. Some other method had consequently to be adopted, and grain was substituted. But even this did not answer, for they collected and sold it to the bunyas at a reduced rate, or sometimes bartered a portion of it for til and goor (junjelly and molasses), which they mixed together in water and drank. At last it was decided that cooked food should be given to them, but a separate choopatty could not easily be made for each person, and moreover their stomachs could not digest such food. Dr. Mahaffy was therefore asked to suggest what description of food would be best. With this request he kindly complied, and his instructions were carried out (see copy No 1243 of 1869, attached). Large caldrons were purchased, and the food prescribed cooked, and dealt out to the fugitives morning and evening at the towns as per margin, and this course is still adopted at the towns where all these people—for economy's sake, and in order that the expenditure may be watched and checked more easily—are collected.

30. At the seven towns marginally noted roomy landees were erected to shelter these poor people from the cold, which in November, December, and January is intense, and the floors of these sheds were strewn with a warm and soft cotton-like shrub called "Bhoo," abounding in the desert, and with the leaves of which the Natives themselves stuff their pillows. In short everything that possibly could tend to alleviate distress and to afford comfort was done.

31. The proportion of the fugitives who entered Sind in 1869 and 1870, who were able to do work, even of the lightest description, was very small indeed, consequently they had to be supported gratis; and the total sum expended under this head alone in 1869-70 is Rs. 19,333-15-7 against Rs. 705 9-7 in 1868-69.

32. After the heavy rains, fever, chest and bowel complaints prevailed. Everything was done for the sick; medicines were distributed to the Native officials, who were most attentive and kind to the fugitives, but the mortality was nevertheless very great indeed.

33. The greatest economy was practised. The dead were buried in deep trenches without shrouds, but with due respect; this was a work of itself; for although these people, as before stated, were collected together in the vicinity of towns, where every care and attention was bestowed on them, many of them would still stray away, to be found dead in all directions.

34. The people of the desert have suffered greatly, but their condition now even is not to be compared with that of the Marwar fugitives. True they have lost their "all," chiefly consisting of cattle, to keep which alive during the four successive years of drought they pledged or sold the ornaments of their women and children, and all to no purpose, for their cattle died, and they were left penniless. However, they were comparatively strong and able, and they either cultivated on the canals in Sind or managed to earn a livelihood in some other way. Those of the desert people who suffered most were the Bheels and coolies of Nuggur Parkur. They could not be prevailed upon to leave the rocks, and they, though hard-working and good cultivators, were destitute, and required assistance just as much as the fugitives.

35. So bad was the state of things at Nuggur Parkur, that frequent Reports were rendered by the Kardar, Cazee Faiz Mahomed, conveying the expression of his fears that if something were not speedily done, either by the Native merchants themselves or by Government, the whole population might any day be in a state of starvation. Communication with Nuggur by post being quick, further information was called for, on receipt of which I came to the conclusion that the importation of grain by Government could not longer be delayed, as there were only 77 maunds in the town of Nuggur itself. I accordingly addressed the Commissioner in Sind, who, by return of post, concurred with me, and authorised me to take the necessary steps.

36. Inquiries were made personally, and by wire; the Collector of Ahmedabad, the Political Agent of Palunpoor, were addressed, and inquiries made at Oomercote, Joodda and Hydrabad. It was decided at last that it would be the most expeditious and economical way to purchase grain at the Joodda Bunder (tail of Nusseerwah). Accordingly this was done. One hundred kerars or 2,250 maunds* were procured and despatched with all speed to Nuggur, where it was sold at the ruling rates, 5½ seers or 11lbs. per rupee.

* 22½ mds. per kerar.

37. The total cost of the grain, including conveyance and other contingencies connected with the storage and sale of it, amounted to Rs. 12,602-2-8, and the sum realized by the sale was Rs. 8,675-0-7, showing a loss to Government of Rs. 3,927-2-1.† This was of course to be expected, and could not have been avoided. The interests of Government were closely watched, as they have always been.

† As per bill attached for sanction.

38. It is estimated that during the years 1868-69 and 1869-70, 35,000 souls have entered the Thurr and Parkur Superintendency, of whom about 15,000 have passed on to Sind, where they have found work, or have been supported by private charity, or at the expense of the State. Of the remainder, numbering 20,000, or thereabouts, some have found a living in these districts by their trades, or by working as labourers in the fields, or on Public Works, while others have been supported by charity.

39. As before stated, the estimated number of fugitives that passed into the Great Desert from Marwar during 1868-69 and 1869-70 is fully 35,000. The mortality during the first year was slight, but during the second very great indeed. It was impossible to obtain accurate returns of deaths throughout the whole district; but from personal observation and from the daily reports received from the large towns, such as Chachea, Nuggur, and Oomercote, for 1868-69 and 1869-70, I should say that, including cholera victims, fully 4,550, or 18 per cent. of the entire number died.

40. It was no easy matter to find work for large numbers of half starved sickly people, and when work was provided, it was no easy task to teach them how to set about it; it was even sometimes necessary to induce them to work. It was also necessary to take care that those who were able to do light work should not remain idle, the subterfuges being numerous. Some of the work done by Marwaree labour will probably not be productive of any lasting benefit, but on the other hand many necessary, useful, and reproductive works have been carried out by them, under great difficulties, which will be apparent when I repeat that the working parties had to be provided with food, with the means of cooking it, and with water, all of which had to be conveyed on camels, in some instances to a distance of three or four miles.

41. Attached are clear and concise forms‡, setting forth the total amounts laid out from Imperial funds, both for works and for subsistence, each being shown separately. I have also appended an abstract of the whole, and a recapitulation of that abstract.

‡ B I and B II.

42. The money allotted from local funds, and the manner in which expended is also shown. A sum of Rs. 1,000 for charity, given by the brother of the late Mr. Jaffir Sillaman, has also been expended.

43. The total sum disbursed on Famine Relief Works, and subsistence, including local funds, amounts to Rs. 1,14,785-6-3.

44. Large numbers of fugitives were employed by the Executive Engineer in charge of the Lower Narra Irrigational Works at my suggestion, and the sum laid out in clearing canals and jungle amounts to Rs. 9,342-5-11, and the total number of persons thus employed is estimated at 3,255. A detailed statement of the above expenditure is attached, supplied by the Executive Engineer.

45. Many little children became orphans, and were entirely destitute and friendless, and I arranged that they should be placed under the Patels of the different villages, and that they should be supported by Government. They at one time numbered 125, but when it was decided that they should all be located at Oomercote, 47 boys and 24 girls were mustered (some of the remainder had died, and others were claimed). I had these children nicely clothed, and a separate landee was erected for them within the school compound at Oomercote, where now 45 orphans (15 girls, 30 boys) are being taught to read and write. These orphans will (unless they are claimed) be looked after by me until they are fit to enter the world and support themselves.

46. I desire to bring to the notice of Sir William Merewether the good services of the officers whose names are mentioned in the list marked A. I would specially mention those as per margin. These officers displayed great energy, firmness, and courage during the cholera epidemic, and gave me great satisfaction also in the manner they worked, and exerted themselves to afford comfort to those so much requiring it, and to alleviate distress. Mr. Faiz Mahomed and Mr. Bulwuntrao had harder work than any, and these again I would most strongly recommend to Government as deserving servants.

Mr. Moolram.
" Faiz Mahomed.
" Luchasing.
" Tilloomul.
" Bhickajee Prub.
" Bulwuntrao.

47. Again the accounts have given not a little trouble, and Messrs. Millar, Hassamul and Manickrai have given me the greatest satisfaction in that department.

48. I am glad to record that though crime of every kind has been most rife in Foreign States, and life has been lost, it has only very slightly increased in the country under my superintendency; and that with the exception of two cases of "voluntarily causing hurt in the commission of robbery," the only description of crime which has prevailed, or in which an increase is observable, is "cattle lifting." Robbery has been almost unknown in this charge for the past ten years, and not a single case of the kind has occurred during the last seven years.

49. I regret the delay in sending this report, so frequently expedited, but I trust that it will nevertheless meet with your approval. The delay was caused by the non-receipt of the accounts for July.

Extract, paras. 3, 4, and 5, of letter No. 1243, dated 23rd October 1869, from the Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals in Sind.

"Para. 3.—The arrangements made regarding sick people who may be found on the road are everything that could be wished, and I will direct the Apothecary at Oomercote and the Hospital Assistant about to proceed to the districts to supply the Thannadars with the fever medicines and full explanation regarding their use.

"4.—I much fear that unless food is liberally provided (medicines will be f little use.

"5.—If rice is procurable in the districts, a supply of it kept cooked, mixed with a small quantity of dall, say one lb. of the former to two ounces of the latter, with sufficient allowance of salt, would, in my opinion, be the food best suited for the exhausted and the weakly. I would recommend a small allowance of ghee, but I doubt much if the funds at your disposal would allow of your providing it."

Dated 17th September 1870.

From—MAJOR G. B. TYRWHITT, Political Supdt. Thurr and Parkur,

To—The Commissioner in Sind.

In continuation of my report No. 512 of 17th instant, I would add as follows.

2. July and August are the months in which we look for rain in the desert, and I may say that, with the exception of the Deh of Nuggur Parkur, the fall has been but slightly better than no rain at all. In parts of the desert no rain has fallen at all, and where it did, only sufficient to enable the plough being worked and to cause the seeds to germinate and spring up a few feet. The Desert Kardars all report the crops to be drying up, and even those in the Nuggur Deh will not give an average yield unless rain falls shortly.

3. Grass is reported again to be scarce owing to the scanty and not general rainfall.

4. Locusts have made their appearance three times in Thurr and Parkur superintendency, but have done as yet no damage.

5. During the month of August, the number of fugitives was very small indeed, but those receiving subsistence had not decreased, while those on works—gathered from the returns last received—numbered only 564 men in all.

Vide report No. 466 of 2nd September 1870.

6. No rain has fallen worthy of note in Rajpootana, and the crops are stated by the fugitives to be drying up, who have for a third time commenced entering the desert from the east. They are reported to be, generally speaking, weak, and in very few instances fitted for work. They do not, however, remain in Thurr and Parkur, but pass on into Sind, receiving food if necessary. The total number of new comers during the month of August was 422, of whom 122 only remained in Thurr and Parkur.

7. Grain is not cheaper, and in Sind is much dearer than at this time last year.

8. The famine in Rajpootana is not over, and drought again prevails. The fugitives are returning, and further assistance will be required both in the shape of money for works and subsistence, the sum on hand on 31st July 1870 for the former being Rs 5.961-10-3, and for the latter Rs. 702-13-4. The expenditure for the month of July 1870 under the latter head was Rs. 1,101-14-3; of this Rs. 379-12-7 was disbursed, the balance will be paid from the Rs. 3,000 lately sanctioned.

Rs. 10,000 sanctioned for Public Works, 7,000 for subsistence.

9. The health of the fugitives is good at present; a short time ago a few cases of measles appeared, but from it they are now free.

Endorsed by the Commissioner in Sind.

True copy, with statement, submitted to Government, in continuation of this office endorsement No. 416, dated 19th instant.

2. There can be no doubt that help on a large scale will have to be given to save life, and the Commissioner begs that the sanctions already asked for may be passed at an early date.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of Bombay, Genl. Dept.

READ—

Letter from the Commissioner in Sind, No. 416, dated the 19th October 1870—Submitting, with his remarks, report on the influx of destitute Marwarees into the Thurr and Parkur Districts, and of the measures adopted for their relief, forwarded by the Political Superintendent in compliance with the instructions contained in Government Resolution No. 1277, dated the 3rd June last, with statements showing the amounts sanctioned from Imperial and Local Funds for the relief, and the manner in which they have been expended.

Memorandum from the Commissioner in Sind, No. 1417, dated the 19th October 1870—Forwarding, in continuation with the above, further report, with statement, of expenditure submitted by the Political Superintendent of Thurr and Parkur, with the expression of his opinion that help on a large scale will have to be given to save life, and requesting that the sanction already asked for may be passed at an early date.

RESOLUTION.—During the two years under report, it is estimated that 35,000 destitute Marwarees entered the Thurr and Parkur Districts, and that of these immigrants 18 per cent. perished from starvation and sickness. These figures indicate the extent of the task Major Tyrwhitt and his Assistant, Lieutenant Mayhew, had before them,—a task which, as the interesting though painful report now before Government shows, was confronted with zeal, energy, and judgment, and with self-disregarding personal devotion.

2. Government have already recorded their sense of the labors of Doctor Williams and other officers during the outbreak of cholera; and His Excellency in Council has now the pleasure of acknowledging the services of the Native subordinates mentioned* by Major Tyrwhitt, and of those who helped the wanderers on their way to the large towns.

*Messrs. Moolram, Faiz Mahomed, Luchasing, Tilloomul, Bhikajee Prub, Bulwantrao; also Messrs. Millar, Hassanmul, Manikrai, and Kumeeso.

3. It is stated that the total sum disbursed on Famine Relief Works and subsistence, including Local Funds, amounts to Rs. 1,14,785, in addition to which Rs. 9,342 were expended on canal and jungle clearances, and a further sum of Rs. 1,000 was charitably contributed by the brother of the late Mr. Jaffer Sulliman.

4. It will interest Government to receive information from time to time of the settlement in life of the 45 orphans now at Oomercote.

5. The thanks of Government are due to Dr. Mahaffy for the assistance acknowledged by Major Tyrwhitt.

6. Sir W. Merewether's proceedings throughout the emergency have the entire approbation of the Governor in Council.

7. Government have already disposed of the supplement to this report, and these papers may also be placed at the disposal of the Press.

8. Copies of these papers should be sent to the Government of India and the Secretary of State.

In reply to your letter No. 2966, dated the 5th ultimo, I am directed to state that the papers therewith forwarded, regarding the famine and the measures taken for the relief of sufferers in Sind, have been perused with much interest, and that the Governor General in Council desires that the acknowledgments of the Government of India may be conveyed to Major Tyrwhitt and the officers who co-operated with him.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO THE DEATH OF SIR HENRY DURAND.

No. 1 A, dated 1st January 1871.

From—T. H. THORNTON, ESQ., D. C. L., Secy. to the Govt. of the Punjab,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, FOREIGN DEPT.

My telegram of this day's date, to the address of the Private Secretary to the Viceroy, will have informed the Government of India of the serious accident which happened to Sir Henry Durand yesterday evening, the 31st ultimo. I have now the honor to report the particulars of this most lamentable occurrence.

2. At about five in the afternoon, His Honor left camp for the purpose of visiting the outpost garden and town of Tank. Having inspected the outpost on foot, he proceeded on one of the camp elephants in a howdah with the Nawab of Tank, a chuprassie being on the back seat. The son of the Nawab was in advance on horseback to show the way. On another elephant, on a seated pad, were Brigadier General Keyes, Commanding the Frontier Force, Lieutenant Colonel Graham, Commissioner of the Derajat Division, Colonel Maclagan, R. E., Secretary to Government, Public Works Department, Major Black, Military Secretary, and Lieutenant Colonel Kennedy, Commanding the 2nd Punjab Cavalry.

3. The Lieutenant Governor having inspected the garden, proceeded to the entrance of the town. This consists of an outer gateway leading into a covered square enclosure, out of which a second gateway, at right angles to the first, leads into the main street. Both gateways are flat-topped with wooden lintels. The outer gateway is of sufficient height to allow an elephant and howdah to pass, but the second gateway is considerably lower, and from the outer to the inner gateway the ground rises.

4. The Lieutenant Governor's elephant passed, without difficulty, the outer gateway into the square enclosure, followed, at a distance of about 30 feet, by the second elephant. The officers on the second elephant saw that the second gateway appeared too low, and did not suppose that His Honor had any intention of passing through it. After a short pause, however, His Honor's elephant proceeded, and then, before any warning could be given, a crash of breaking howdah was heard, as the elephant passed through the inner gate. The officers on the second elephant got down quickly, and found Sir Henry Durand on the ground, just beyond the inner gateway, lying on his face with blood profusely streaming from his nose. The Nawab was still on the broken howdah with his head thrown back on the back of the seat.

5. Sir Henry Durand was immediately conveyed on a charpoy to camp. On the way he groaned heavily and appeared quite insensible, but occasionally raised both arms a little, with a short rapid movement to his face. Dr. Skeen, the Medical Officer in charge of the Camp, and Dr. Holmes, of the 1st Sikh Infantry, were promptly in attendance, and it was discovered that Sir Henry's lower extremities were paralysed, his arms partially so, and that there was a contusion on his head. After a short interval, he was able to speak, but not connectedly. During the night His Honor dozed, and towards morning fully recovered his consciousness, and was able to take liquid nourishment.

6. At about 9 o'clock this morning, Dr. Courtney, Civil Surgeon of Dera Ismail Khan, who had been summoned over night, arrived, and the three medical officers held a consultation, and recorded a bulletin, copy of which is annexed.

7. The Nawab of Tank received a contusion on the back of the head and neck, and has had one of his ribs broken, but is not believed to be very seriously injured.

8. The chuprassie on the back seat of the howdah can give no connected account of the occurrence, being himself struck on the head, and having no recollection of seeing what had happened to Sir Henry Durand and the Nawab. The mahout states that he was proceeding cautiously being doubtful whether the height of the gate was sufficient to admit the passage of the elephant. Finding the ground rise he tried hard to stop the elephant, but at that moment the howdah came in contact with the top of the gateway, or with the beam which supports the roof of the enclosure between the two gateways, whereupon the elephant being frightened made a rapid movement forward which it was impossible to control.

9. Two natives, who were in the gateway at the time, state that Sir Henry Durand, in trying to avoid being crushed by the lintel of the gateway, rolled off the howdah on to the side of the elephant, and thence fell forward striking a low mud wall on the right of the gateway as he fell.

10. Sir Henry Durand himself is not in a state to be questioned minutely on the subject, but he has stated that on seeing that the gateway was too low, he and the Nawab tried to crouch down in the howdah, but the howdah crushed in upon him, and he was thrown out upon his back.

11. Such are the details of the occurrence, which it has been my painful duty to have to report. Long ere you receive this communication, the telegraph will probably have made you acquainted with greater certainty of the probable results.

Report on injury received by Sir HENRY DURAND on the 31*st December* 1870 at Tank, Dera Ismail Khan District.

Received a very serious injury of the spine by a fall from an elephant, by reason of which his lower extremities and lower half of the body are completely paralysed, and the upper extremities partially so. Right eye also affected.

Consider that he lies in a most precarious state. and that his recovery, should it take place, will, in all probability, be slow and tedious.

In continuation of my despatch No. 1A of this day's date, I have to announce with deep regret that Sir Henry Durand died at 8 o'clock this evening.

2. At 2 o'clock he became worse, and at 5 o'clock no hope of his recovery remained, but he retained his faculties to within half an hour of his death.

3. Annexed is a copy of the medical officer's report.

Dated 1st January 1871.

To—The Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.

We have the honor to report the fatal result of the accident met with yesterday by Sir Henry Durand, who died this evening shortly before 8 P. M.

We are of opinion that death was due to a severe injury of the lower cervical portion of the spinal cord, which resulted in almost complete palsy of all parts of the body except the head and diaphragm.

The immediate cause of death was coma from failure of breathing induced by paralysis of the respiratory muscles.

Sir Henry retained his faculties till within half an hour of his death.

A post-mortem examination was not made, it being thought unnecessary by the Surgeons, and not desired by the family of the deceased.

No. 3A, dated 2nd January 1871.

From—T. H. THORNTON, ESQ., D. C. L., Secy. to the Govt. of the Punjab,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, FOREIGN DEPT.

In continuation of my despatch of yesterday, the 1st instant, I have the honor to report that this day Major Munro, Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khan, held an official enquiry into the circumstances attending the death of the late Sir Henry Durand. It was attended by Mr. Egerton, Financial Commissioner, myself, and others, and during a portion of the time, by Captain Prinsep, His Honor's A. D. C.

2. The depositions taken were those of the Nawab of Tank, who was seated by His Honor at the time of the accident, and has himself suffered injury; of the orderly chuprassie who sat on the back seat of the howdah; and the mahout who was guiding the elephant; of Lieutenant Colonel Graham, Commissioner of the Division; Brigadier General Keyes; Colonel Maclagan, R. E., and the second mahout, who witnessed the accident from the second elephant; of two bystanders who were at the time in the left corner of the covered enclosure, and of one standing a few paces from the gateway on the town side, all taken on the spot; and of the two medical officers in attendance on His Honor.

The elephant also was caused to pass through the gateway with the same howdah in which His Honor was sitting, in the presence of the investigating officer.

3. I annex copy of the depositions and of the finding of the Magistrate, also a rough plan of the locality drawn by Colonel Johnstone, C. B., of the Survey Department. Major Close, of the 1st Sikhs, has further prepared a pencil sketch of the scene of the occurrence which will be forwarded by to-morrow's post.

4. It will be seen that the account of the occurrence as elicited from the depositions is substantially the same as that given in my letter of yesterday.

Statement and deposition of Assistant Surgeon A. SKEEN, M. B., in medical charge of the Camp of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

The cause of His Honor Sir Henry Durand's death was coma, resulting from paralysis of the respiratory muscles, caused by a severe injury to the lower portion of the cervical region of the spine, as described more particularly in the report put in yesterday.

Question by Mr. Egerton.—Was there anything in the appearance of Sir Henry Durand's body to lead you to a conclusion as to how the injury had been caused?

Answer.—The contusion on the right forehead might indicate that the head had been thrown violently backwards, sufficiently so to endanger the portion of the spine injured. There was no contusion on the back of the head, or neck, or on any part of the body excepting a slight bruise on the right wrist.

Question by Mr. Thornton.—Did Sir Henry Durand during your attendance upon him make any statement to you regarding the circumstances of the accident?

Answer.—Without being able to give the exact words, I will give the substance of what Sir Henry stated to me.

"We were coming along from the Nawab's garden on an elephant towards camp, taking on our road the native city. In entering the city there are two gateways: the first was passed safely, and the second was too low to admit of our passing through in a howdah. It was in the dusk of the evening, and I did not see it until we got close up. The elephant passed through the archway, and I was caught on the head by the circle, and thrown backwards over the howdah." On asking him how he fell, Sir Henry replied, "I must have fallen on my back and shoulders."

The above statement was made by Sir Henry Durand about 9 A. M. of the 1st January.

CAMP TANK,
The 2nd January 1871.

Deputy Commissioner.

Question by Mr. Egerton.—Did you hold a post-mortem examination of the body?

Answer.—No, for the reasons explained in the report by Dr. Courtney and myself.

Deputy Commissioner.

Statement and deposition of Surgeon S. C. COURTNEY, Civil Surgeon of Dera Ismail Khan, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd day of January 1871.

I quite concur in the statement made by Dr. Skeen as to the cause of Sir Henry Durand's death, and I think it is quite possible that the injuries were received in the way suggested by him. The report referred to by Dr. Skeen, as sent in yesterday, was signed by us both.

I would also suggest that the injury to the neck might have been caused by a fall on the head, and on the ground, from the elephant.

CAMP TANK, The 2nd January 1871.

(Sd.) A. A. MUNRO,
Deputy Commissioner.

Statement and deposition of MAHOMED SHAHNEWÁZ KHAN, Nawab of Tank, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd day of January 1871.

I was directed to attend His Honor the Lieutenant Governor on the afternoon of Saturday, the 31st ultimo, at his tent. After the interview His Honor said he wished to see my garden. I was directed to take my seat on the elephant by the side of His Honor, who mounted after inspecting the military outpost. I declined at first, saying it would seem impertinent on my part to seat myself beside His Honor. The Lieutenant Governor insisted upon my taking a seat by him in the howdah. The Commissioner, Colonel Graham, was standing by at this time. I asked Sir Henry whether he would first see the garden or the town. He replied "the garden first." You had informed my son Akbar Khan in the morning that His Honor proposed visiting the garden in course of the afternoon on an elephant. I had given instructions that one of the gates should be thrown down to admit of the easy entrance of an elephant. After entering the garden we proceeded towards the other end. His Honor, seeing some buildings at that end, asked if that was part of the town; I replied "no, these are some of the tombs of my family." Returning from that quarter we approached another gate of the garden which was pronounced too small for exit. The man who sat behind us on the elephant—a servant, but not the mahout—said it would not do to attempt that gate.

Proceeding onwards we left the garden by the same gap by which we entered. The gate at the south end of the town was in view, and His Honor said "let us go into the town." On approaching the gate I said to His Honor "the gate appears too small for our passage." Whether His Honor understood or heard me properly I cannot say, but it seemed as if he hadn't. I repeated in a louder voice that he ought not to attempt passing through the gate. As we got nearer the gate, twice again did I repeat that the gate would not admit of our passage. The mahout, raising the iron instrument with which he directed the elephant's course, seemed to be measuring the first gate. He, the mahout, touched the beam with the instrument, and the elephant passed inside the outer gateway. Whether from the sound of the iron instrument touching the beam or from some other cause I cannot say, but at the moment of entering the enclosure between the gates the animal appeared to quicken its pace. Remembering that the inner door-way was lower than the outer, and that on previous occasions of elephants passing through, when my family possessed two or three of these animals, we had sometimes to bend the head in passing under the inner gateway, I bent my head forward to prevent the possibility of my turban being rubbed off; I did not think there was danger of my head touching the beam. It was rather dark within the gateway at the time. There is a beam across the roof in the centre, and I should have said that I meant to save my turban from being rubbed off by coming in contact with that beam. Immediately after this I felt an extreme pressure along my back from the neck downwards and became quite insensible. I can give no account of any thing that happened after this either to myself or to His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, who had been sitting to my right in the howdah. A little afterwards I came to myself. I did not hear the Lieutenant Governor give any orders to the mahout on entering the outer gateway. There is space enough between the two gateways to admit of the elephant turning round. The mahout tried to turn the animal round but failed. I am not aware that either of our heads touched the centre beam of the roof. The elephant appeared to quicken its pace immediately after entering the outer gate. I did not hear either the mahout or the chuprassie who sat behind say that we should not proceed. His Honor said nothing after we entered the enclosure between the gates, nor have I any recollection of how he sat from that time.

CAMP TANK, The 2nd January 1871. (Sd.) A. A. MUNRO, Deputy Commissioner.

Statement and deposition of Brigadier General KEYES, C. B., Commanding the Punjab Frontier Force, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

On the evening of the 31st December 1870, I accompanied His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab to inspect the outpost at Tank. On leaving the post, we found two elephants waiting outside to convey the party to the town. His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and the Nawab of Tank mounted an elephant with a howdah; a chuprassie took the seat in the howdah behind them. Colonel Maclagan, Colonel Graham, Colonel Kennedy, Major Black, and myself got on another elephant accoutred with a pad saddle. We had proceeded as far as the city gate, where a short pause took place. Our elephants were turned towards the gardens through which we went. I was under the impression that the idea of entering the town had been abandoned. After going through the gardens, we returned to the same gate. Evidently some conversation had taken place between the Lieutenant Governor and the Nawab regarding our entry into the town; what passed I cannot say. The elephant on which His Honor was seated was then turned towards the gate, and made to pass through the first gateway, which it did without any difficulty. The second gateway was at right angles, with an abrupt rise in the ground towards it. The elephant passed under a beam, and I saw that His Honor and the Nawab had to stoop to pass under it. This was within a few paces only of the second gateway, under which the elephant had proceeded. It appeared to me that the mahout had become aware it was impossible to pass under, and was endeavouring to turn, or to make the elephant kneel; but instead of obeying any effort of the mahout, the animal made a frightened jerk forward, which brought the howdah under the beam of the gateway and into forcible contact with the beam. When I observed the movement of the elephant towards the inner gateway, it was obvious to me at once that it could not pass clear. I exclaimed "they can't get through;" but the elephant, making the jerk forward which I have already mentioned, passed through before anything could be done to avert the consequences. We immediately descended from our elephant, which was in front of the outer gateway and commanded a view of the inner, and we rushed forward. I had no hope of finding His Honor or the Nawab alive, as it appeared to me from the point from which I viewed the accident that it was impossible for any person on the elephant to escape being crushed in the circumstances. We found His Honor lying with his face downwards close to the inner gate on the town side. He was breathing heavily, but unconscious. The Nawab was still sitting in the howdah with his head thrown back. We placed His Honor on a charpoy, and had him conveyed towards camp. Dr. Holmes met us on the road, and thought it better not to make any examination then.

I had never passed through the gate on an elephant, but I have often ridden through it on horseback.

In reply to Mr. Egerton.

I had no distinct idea that there was any intention of entering the town on elephants. Major Black informed me very shortly before we started that His Honor intended visiting the outpost and the town, and I had ordered my horse, thinking His Honor would also be on horseback.

Statement and deposition of COLONEL MACLAGAN, R. E., Secretary to the Government, Punjab, Department of Public Works, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

On the evening of the 31st December 1870, after His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab had visited the fort or military outpost at Tank on foot, he proceeded on an elephant, accompanied by the Nawab, to visit the city and garden. Having approached the city gate, His Honor's elephant turned and proceeded towards the garden. On another elephant behind were Brigadier General Keyes, Colonel Graham, Colonel Kennedy, Major Black and myself. The Lieutenant Governor and Nawab were on a howdah, and we on a seated pad. On returning from a visit to the garden, the Lieutenant Governor's elephant, which was in advance, was again taken up to the same gateway. After passing the outer entrance into the small square enclosure in front of the inner entrance, there was a short pause, and seeing from the outside the height of the inner gateway to be apparently insufficient for the passage of the howdah, I then expected to see the elephant turned and brought out. Instead of this, however, it moved on through the inner gateway, and I heard the crash of the breaking howdah as he passed through. The officers on the elephant behind immediately got down and followed quickly. Sir Henry Durand was found on the ground lying on his face, apparently insensible. The Nawab was still in the howdah with his head thrown back over the back of the seat. The Lieutenant Governor was placed on a charpoy and carried back to the camp. Dr. Holmes was met on the way, and shortly afterwards Dr. Skeen, a messenger having been despatched to bring a Doctor. There appeared to be no difficulty in passing through the outer gateway. The ground rises from the outer towards the inner gateway.

Statement and deposition of LIEUTENANT COLONEL GRAHAM, Officiating Commissioner of the Derajat, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab having announced his intention of visiting the outpost town and gardens of Tank on the evening of the 31st ultimo, I, accompanied by Brigadier General Keyes, Colonel Maclagan, Colonel Kennedy, and Colonel Black, attended His Honor. We all walked on foot from camp to the military outpost, after inspecting which we came outside and prepared to mount the elephants which were waiting for us. Just then His Honor said to me, "would the Nawab like to sit with me on the elephant?" I said "yes," and brought him forward. The Nawab mounted first, and sat on the left hand side of the howdah. His Honor then mounted, and sat on the right. The rest of us mounted the other elephant, and we all proceeded towards the town, His Honor's elephant being in front. As we neared the southern gateway of the town, His Honor's elephant pulled up close to the gateway, and apparently, after consulting the Nawab, His Honor turned away from the gateway towards the gardens. We entered the gardens by a gap in the wall, and after proceeding down several of the garden walks, returned, and left the garden by the gap by which we had entered. We again approached the gateway of the town mentioned above. His Honor's elephant, cautiously approaching the outer gateway, entered. The elephant on which we sat, moved up to the gateway, preparing to follow. It was rather dark between the two gateways, and I was unable to distinguish clearly what happened there; but there was a pause on the part of the leading elephant of about 20 seconds, during which no one, on His Honor's elephant, spoke or gave any directions that I could hear. At this time I could see the line of the second and inner gateway from outside distinctly. It appeared to me too small for the elephant to pass through. I then saw His Honor's elephant pass through it with a slight rush, in course of which the top of the gateway caught the howdah and broke it. The elephant then passed out of sight. Colonels Black, Maclagan and myself sat on the near side of our elephant, I being the farthest back, Brigadier General Keyes and Colonel Kennedy sat on the off side, the former being in front. When I saw the howdah broken against the top of the inner gateway and heard the crash, I did not see the positions of His Honor and the Nawab in the howdah. We immediately dropped down from our elephant and ran in to see what had happened. Our elephant had not entered the outer gate. On passing through the inner gateway, we saw His Honor lying on his face on the ground on the right hand side. Some natives were supporting his head, and blood was flowing from his nose and mouth. We lifted him from the ground and placed him on a cot. His Honor did not answer questions put to him, but seemed to understand what we said. I then looked to the Nawab, and found him lying stretched over the top of the broken howdah, apparently at full length on his back. I had him taken down and put on a cot. He was quite sensible, and replied to all our questions. We then brought both His Honor and the Nawab on cots to the camp. I did not see any body leading the elephant or showing the way. The Nawab's son rode in on horseback a little before us. I had frequently passed through the gateway before, but never on an elephant. I did not warn His Honor that an elephant could not pass through the gateway, as I was not aware whether an elephant could pass or not. I have been informed that elephants have frequently passed through the gateways, but I don't know whether with howdahs or otherwise.

In reply to Mr. Egerton.

In reply to Mr. Thornton.

Question by Mr. Thornton.—Were you informed by the Deputy Commissioner or other local officer that the gateways of the town of Tank were too small to admit the passage of elephants?

Answer.—I remember hearing Major Munro, the Deputy Commissioner, make a remark generally as to the gates of Tank being too small for elephants to pass through, but I cannot remember particularly when or where he made the remark, whether before or after the accident.

Question by Mr. Thornton.—When the Lieutenant Governor went the second time towards the gateway, was it your impression that he wished to enter the town?

Answer.—Yes.

I wish to add to my former statement as follows :—

"The last time I visited Tank was in 1865, except on the occasion of my visiting Kote Khirgee about 20 days ago, when I rode through the town. Previously to 1865, I had visited Tank and ridden through the town frequently. On the 31st ultimo Major Munro mentioned to me that His Honor the Lieutenant Governor would go and look at the town and gardens in the evening on elephants. Neither Major Munro nor myself possessed any certain knowledge of the fact, nor thought of ascertaining the fact as to whether elephants could or could not pass through the gates of the town.

"I attended His Honor with General Keyes, Colonel Black, Colonel Kennedy, and Colonel Maclagan. The two former, I believe, know the town quite as well as I do.

"Colonel Kennedy was stationed for three years with his Regiment at Tank, and has for the last two years commanded the outposts on the Tank frontier, and must be far better acquainted with the town than any of us.

"The Nawab of Tank might also be supposed to possess some knowledge on the subject, and was on the same elephant with His Honor. Apart from our previous knowledge, we could all see for ourselves on the spot, and could equally judge as to the practicability of the gateways for elephants. In fact we had first before tried to pass under a gateway and found it impracticable. The outer gateway, where the lamentable accident occurred, was all we could see before His Honor passed through, and was amply large enough for the purpose."

Statement and deposition of JHUNDA KHAN Mahout, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

I left camp on the evening of the 31st December 1870 in charge of the elephant "Jana Piaree," on which was a "char jama" or padded saddle. I was in waiting with the elephant near the Tank outpost. When His Honor the Lieutenant Governor came out after inspecting the outpost, he mounted his elephant "Rikba," on which was a howdah. The Nawab of Tank sat in the howdah on His Honor's left On my elephant were five gentlemen. Both elephants were taken past the south gate of the town of Tank towards the gardens, which were entered by a gap. After seeing the gardens, we went to a gate at the further end, which was too small for the passage of elephants. We therefore returned and left the garden by the gap through which we had entered. On reaching the south gate of the town which we had before passed, the leading elephant on which His Honor and the Nawab sat turned in. I had not heard any conversation as to the size of this gateway, but was following the lead. The first elephant appeared to pass through the first gateway easily. Immediately after, a sound as of the howdah coming against something was heard. I could not see what was going on ahead, but I got my own elephant to kneel, and the gentlemen dismounting ran forward to see what had happened. I remained with the elephant. I heard the leading mahout calling to his elephant "dhutt," endeavouring to back him out it seemed, and I heard the Lieutenant Governor once call out, "hutto peechee, bucho." I do not know whether the leading elephant was frightened by the crashing howdah, by the darkness, or by the noise to cause it not to obey. In the event of an elephant not obeying the word "dhutt," given by the mahout to induce the animal to retire, it is customary to apply the crook or the "ankus," or directing instrument, under the ear to induce him to retire.

Examination and deposition of ARAROO Mahout, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

On the afternoon of the 31st ultimo I was sent in charge of an elephant named "Rikba" to the outpost at Tank for the purpose of taking His Honor the Lieutenant Governor towards the town. There was a howdah on this elephant. Another elephant, with a "char jama" on, was sent to carry other gentlemen who were to accompany. The Lieutenant Governor and the Nawab took their seats in the howdah, and a chuprassie was seated behind. The Nawab's son went ahead on horseback to show the way. Both elephants were taken to the gardens without entering the town. We entered the gardens by a gap. There was another gateway in the garden, but it was declared to be too small for the passage of an elephant. We returned and left the garden by the way through which we entered. On reaching the town gate by which we had passed when going to the gardens, we turned to go into the town. On reaching the first gateway, not seeing well ahead, I said it is clear here, but I cannot see further. The Nawab said it is open all through like this. On entering the covered way between the gates the howdah came against something. I had raised my iron to feel and it touched the roof. I endeavoured to back the elephant, but it would not obey. Immediately after, the Lieutenant Governor called out, "take care, mahout." The animal proceeded onwards, and I cannot describe what happened behind me. I was not myself touched or hurt in any way. When the elephant had got four paces beyond the inner gateway, I saw the Nawab lying on the howdah and the Lieutenant Governor was lying on the ground. I cannot say anything as to how the Lieutenant Governor fell. I was engaged too much with the elephant to see anything else. The elephant has always been a quiet one, and was often used by Sir H. Lawrence, Sir Robert Montgomery, Sir D. McLeod, and others. Several people were in the enclosure between the gateways, but there were no lights to frighten the animal, and the people said nothing. The splash board of the howdah was broken going through, and one of the sides or arms in coming back. The howdah touched the roof inside before reaching the gateway. There was not room to turn the elephant between the gateways.

Statement and deposition of HOSEIN BUKSH, Chuprassie, taken in Camp at Tank, on Monday, the 2nd day of January 1871.

On the evening of the 31st December 1870, I was in attendance upon His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab. When about to mount the elephant "Rikba" near the outpost, His Honor requested the Nawab of Tank to take a seat in the howdah with himself. The Nawab excused himself once or twice, saying it did not become him (the Nawab) to be seated alongside of His Honor. At last he took a seat, and I sat behind in the "khowassie" or back seat of the howdah. The Lieutenant Governor asked me to sit more to the side of the howdah on which the Nawab was seated to balance seats better. The Nawab's son was riding on horseback ahead of the elephant. On approaching the town gate the Nawab asked His Honor whether he would first see the town or the gardens. His Honor said they would first look at the gardens. The garden was entered by a gap in the wall. After seeing the garden a gate was come to which appeared to lead into the town. The Nawab said this gate was too small for an elephant to pass through. We returned and left the garden by the same gap by which we entered. On reaching the larger gate of the town which we had before passed, the elephant was turned towards the town. I heard no conversation pass as to the possibility or otherwise of passing through this gate on an elephant. There was no difficulty experienced in passing through the outer gateway. On entering the covered way between the two gates, a sound was heard of something coming into contact with the roof or some other part of the building. It was too dark for me to see what happened exactly, but the sound was such as might have been emitted by the howdah or part of it coming against something. His Honor called out "Beware." I called to the mahout to back or stop the elephant, but the animal did not obey the mahout. The elephant passed through the inner gateway quickly. I bent my head and got a slight graze near the left eye in passing through. I cannot describe what happened to the Nawab or His Honor in passing under the beam; but when the elephant had cleared the gateway I saw the Nawab leaning back on the howdah, calling out with pain. I saw His Honor the Lieutenant Governor lying on the ground inside (towards the town). Having bent my own head down to save myself I did not see how Sir Henry Durand fell. I cannot say how my injuries were received, but presume they were caused by pressure from the beam. Immediately the elephant got clear of the inner gateway, I came out of the "khowassie" in which I sat, and leaped down off the elephant to the spot where His Honor lay on the ground.

Statement and deposition of KURREEM BAKSH, son of SHERE SHAH, taken at the South Gate of the Town of Tank, on Monday, the 2nd January 1871.

I was sitting here (between the outer and inner gateway) when Muhammad Akbar Khan, son of the Nawab of Tank, came, on the evening of the 31st ultimo, on horseback through the outer gate, saying that men and cattle were to be moved out of the way to admit of the Lieutenant Governor passing on an elephant. The Nawabzada passed through the inner gate, and the Lieutenant Governor came up to the outer gate at the same moment on his elephant. I was sitting in the corner with Bahadur Sepoy (in the Nawab's service), Adul Shah, my son, and Jeewun Shah, a servant of the Nawab's, whose duty was at the gate. The Lieutenant Governor bowing his head, as also did the Nawab, passed through the outer gate. The mahout apparently tried to make the elephant kneel on getting to the centre of the enclosure, but the animal passed out quickly through the inner gateway. I heard no sound of collision in the centre part of the enclosure, nor did I see whether anything touched the centre beam of the roof or not. The elephant passed quickly through the inner doorway, and both the Lieutenant Governor and the Nawab appeared to be pressed backwards by coming into contact with the upper cross beam. Immediately after I saw the Lieutenant Governor fall from the elephant to the ground on the right side of the gateway. I saw him fall. He came down close to the small mud wall (witness here shows the position) with his face downwards and his legs spread one on either side of this little wall. I and the other persons present ran up to his assistance and the Nawab's son also came up too to assist. Some four gentlemen then came up from behind. The Nawab still lay on the elephant's back in the howdah apparently insensible.

Statement and deposition of JEEWUN SHAH, in service of Nawab of Tank, taken as above, at same time and place.

I was sitting by the inner gateway on the evening of the 31st ultimo when Akbar Khan came up, saying "get out of the way every body, the elephant is coming." People went aside. I stood close by. I saw the elephant enter by the outer gateway, apparently without any impediment. When the animal got inside the enclosure I heard a crash as of the howdah coming against the centre beam of the roof. The elephant at once quickened its pace and got out by the inner gateway in spite of the mahout's endeavours to stop him. Being outside, i. e., on the town side of the inner gateway, through which the elephant had just come, I saw that the Lieutenant Governor had fallen on the other or right side of the road just outside. I heard a second crash as the elephant passed under the inner gateway. The elephant was between me and His Honor when the latter fell, and I cannot exactly say how he fell. I saw him on the ground.

Statement and deposition of MOOLA NAS, 1*st Sikh Regiment, taken at the South Gate of Tank, on the* 2*nd January* 1871.

I was standing at this spot (on the town side of the inner gateway where the deposition was taken) when the elephant on which the Lieutenant Governor and Nawab were mounted was coming out. I saw the Lieutenant Governor fall off the elephant to the right of the gateway as he came out. He first came upon the little mud wall head foremost, and then came down to the ground, his face being under and his feet turned towards the wall.

SOUTH GATE, TANK, The 2*nd January* 1871. (Sd.) A. A. MUNRO, Deputy Commissioner.

SUMMARY.

I shall take the statements of the several deponents examined in the following order :—

1*st.*—Those of the Surgeons as to the causes of Sir Henry Durand's death, and the statement of Dr. Skeen, describing His Honor's account of the accident the day after.

2*nd.*—The deposition of the Nawab of Tank, who sat in the same howdah with the Lieutenant Governor at the time of the accident and who has himself been severely injured ; also those of three of the European Officers who were in attendance upon His Honor and witnessed the occurrence from a little distance.

3*rd.*—The statements of the elephant drivers or mahouts and of the peon in personal attendance upon Sir Henry Durand.

4*th.*—Those of other native witnesses who were near at the time and saw what occurred.

Medical evidence.

Both Drs. Courtney and Skeen are at one as to the cause of Sir Henry Durand's death. It is described as "coma from paralysis caused by severe injury to the cervical portion of the spine." The Surgeons declare that this state of body may have resulted from Sir Henry Durand's head having been thrown back with a violence sufficient to account for the injury sustained, or by his having fallen upon his head from a height (as from the back of an elephant).

Dr. Skeen, who was His Honor's personal medical attendant, gives Sir Henry Durand's own account to him of what occurred. This statement was made by the late Lieutenant Governor about 9 A. M of the 1st January 1871, or 16 hours after the accident, and it is as follows in substance :—

Sir Henry Durand's account as given by Dr. Skeen.

"We were coming along from the Nawab's gardens on an elephant towards camp, taking on our road the native city. In entering the city there are two gateways. The first was passed safely, and the second was too low to admit of our passing through in a howdah. It was in the dusk of the evening, and I did not see it until we got close up. The elephant passed through the archway, and I was caught on the head by the arch, and thrown backwards over the howdah I must have fallen on my back and shoulders."

This is most valuable testimony, as given by Sir Henry himself some hours before his death.

Nawab of Tank's statement.

2. The Nawab of Tank minutely describes circumstances from the time of mounting the elephant at His Honor's special request up to the period of the accident. Seated on the same elephant, the Lieutenant Governor and Nawab left the Tank outpost, on the evening of the 31st December 1870, to inspect the town of Tank and the Nawab's gardens.

On another elephant were five European Officers, viz., Brigadier General Keyes, C. B., Commanding the Punjab Frontier Force; Colonel Maclagan, R. E., Secretary to Government, Punjab, Department of Public Works; Lieutenant Colonel Graham, Commissioner of the Derajat; Lieutenant Colonel Kennedy, Commanding at Dera Ismail Khan; and Major Black, Military Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.

Having reached the south gate of the town, the Nawab states that he enquired whether the town or gardens should be first visited. The gardens were pointed to, and the party moved in that direction, the elephant on which His Honor and the Nawab rode being accoutred with a howdah, and the second elephant, on which were the officers already named, being furnished with a padded saddle. A gap had been specially made in the garden wall by the Nawab's orders for admission of elephants, and the party entered by this opening. Desiring to leave the gardens by a gate at the other end, they were informed that it was not sufficiently large to allow a passage. They accordingly returned, and left the gardens by the same gap in the wall by which they had entered. Arriving the second time at the south gate of the town, it was entered, the Nawab states, at the request of the Lieutenant Governor, although the Nawab represented that the gateway was not sufficiently large to admit of a safe and clear passage. The Nawab avers that he repeated this caution; but he knows not whether the Lieutenant Governor heard or understood what had been said to him on this point. The outer gateway was passed through apparently without impediment; but immediately afterwards some portion of the howdah touched a beam or other part of the roof of the enclosure which connects the outer with the inner gateway, and the mahout made an ineffectual effort to stop the elephant's further progress. The animal rather quickened pace, but whether from fright at the sound of the howdah grating against the roof, or from some other cause, cannot be stated. The Nawab, believing the top of the inner gateway to be too low for a safe passage, bent forward, and was soon rendered temporarily insensible by being severely pressed along the back as he was carried under the cross-beam. He can give no account of what happened to the Lieutenant Governor, and he was himself unconscious for some time after the passage of the elephant through the gate.

The Nawab does not state that Sir Henry Durand spoke to any one after passing through the outer gateway, and he can give no account of what happened to His Honor in passing under the beam of the inner gateway, or of how Sir Henry fell off the elephant. The statements of the three officers examined corroborate the Nawab's in the main. None of them, however, appears to have overheard the Nawab's remonstrance as to the insufficiency of the gateways. These officers followed on another elephant at some little distance. The leading elephant had passed within the outer gate, and the second was approaching it in front. The first gate appeared to them to have been satisfactorily passed by His Honor, but almost immediately afterwards they became conscious of a pause within the enclosure. The inner gateway could be seen by them at right angles to that by which they were about to follow, although, from the lateness of the hour, darkness had begun to set in. General Keyes saw His Honor and the Nawab stoop, as if to avoid a beam in the roof. Colonel Graham could not well distinguish from his position on the second elephant what was going on ahead in the darkened enclosure; but both he and Colonel Maclagan could see that the inner gateway was too small for the clear passage of the leading elephant and those who rode upon it. General Keyes also perceived this, and at once exclaimed—"They can't get through." The elephant driver appears to have exerted himself in vain at this point to stop or turn the animal, which had either from fright or some other cause accelerated its pace and become unmanageable, passing through the inner gateway rapidly. The crash of the breaking howdah was distinctly heard by all the officers behind, and General Keyes' impression at the moment was that any person seated as His Honor and the Nawab were could not escape being crushed in the passage through the smaller gateway. The five officers in attendance, quickly dismounting, ran forward, and found Sir Henry Durand lying, face downwards, on the ground, to the right front of the inner gateway. He was breathing heavily, bleeding profusely from the nose, and apparently insensible, some natives trying to hold up his head. The Nawab was still in the broken howdah, with his head thrown back over the back of the seat.

Native servants and attendants' statements.

3. Of the natives whose statements have been recorded, Junda Khan, mahout of the second elephant, gives an account which tallies with that of the European Officers, adding that he heard His Honor call from within—"Take care, back out." This latter statement is somewhat inconsistent with those of the Nawab and Officers. This man admits that he could not well see what was going on ahead, but he believes the leading mahout was exerting himself to stop or back his elephant. Hosein Buksh, the peon in personal attendance upon His Honor, seated as he was in the khowassie or low seat of the howdah behind, was in the best possible position for observing what occurred immediately in front of him. He avers that he did not hear the Nawab advise His Honor not to proceed owing to the insufficiency of the inner gateway for a passage. Immediately after passing through the first gateway a sound was heard, as of something grazing against the roof of the enclosure, light was failing, and the peon heard His Honor caution the mahout; but the animal had apparently got beyond the driver's control, and passed through the inner gate quickly, causing the crash which has been described. The peon stooped to save himself, and could not see what then happened to His Honor or to the Nawab. Escaping with a few slight bruises owing to the lowness of his seat, the peon was able to see His Honor, after the elephant had passed through, lying on the ground. The mahout's position on the elephant's neck prevented him from seeing what happened to those behind him. This man, moreover, has given indications of vacillation, probably induced by a fear of possible consequences to himself, and his statement must be cautiously received. He says the first gate was passed easily. It was dark beyond, but a remark made by the Nawab caused him to proceed. This statement is in direct opposition to the Nawab's averment that he (the Nawab) had warned His Honor of the impossibility of passing through the inner gateway. The mahout heard the sound of the howdah coming into contact with the roof, raised his iron instrument to test the height, and endeavoured to back the animal out in vain; the elephant passed rapidly on, and the crash at the second gateway was only heard by the mahout who escaped unhurt. He describes his elephant as a quiet one usually, but thinks it was frightened on this occasion.

Other native evidence.

4. There remain the statements of three natives, who casually observed the occurrence. Two of these, Kurreem Buksh and Jeewun Shah, dependants of the Nawab, were on duty at the gates, and Moola, a barber of the 1st Sikh Infantry, was passing and saw His Honor fall from the elephant. The first two were standing within the covered enclosure and note the entry of the Nawab's son on horseback ahead of the elephants, the passage by the leading elephant of the outer gateway, the touching of the roof within by the howdah, the efforts of the mahout to stop the animal, the pressure backwards of both His Honor and the Nawab on coming into contact with the beam of the inner arch, and His Honor's fall immediately afterwards on the ground, the elephant passing rapidly on.

Moola, barber of the Sikh Regiment, who was standing on the town side of the inner gate, states that he saw Sir Henry Durand fall off the elephant to the right of the gateway. This witness also states that His Honor fell upon his head against the low but hard wall,—a remnant of the old fortification ramp,—and thence downwards to the ground, on his face, with his feet towards the wall. This man's evidence appears to strengthen the hypothesis propounded by Dr. Courtney, as to the manner in which the injury to the spine occurred.

FINDING.

Such is the evidence obtained in regard to this mostl amentable accident. The conclusion from the whole is that Sir Henry Durand's death was the result of injuries sustained in passing through a gateway which did not admit of a clear passage for an elephant accoutred as that on which His Honor rode was, and afterwards in falling from this elephant on a hard wall, head foremost, and thence upon the ground beneath.

The scene has been examined by the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab, the Secretary to the Punjab Government in the Civil Department, and the Magistrate of the District. The elephant and broken howdah were passed through both gateways in presence of the officials named. The inner gateway has been proved to have been insufficient for the clear passage of the animal alone so accoutred, and the circumstances being as recorded above, the results were inevitable.

To—The Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your three letters, Nos. 1A and 2A of the 1st of January, and No. 3G of the 2nd of January 1871, containing particulars of the accident at Tank on the evening of the previous day, and the announcement of the death of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab in consequence of the injuries then received.

2. On the occasion of such a calamity as that to which your letters relate when sentiments of the deepest sorrow pervade the entire community, the Viceroy and Governor General in Council is sensible that words are wanting adequately to describe the feeling which prevails. His Excellency in Council will only say that Sir Henry Durand has been removed at a moment when his distinguished career had culminated to its highest point of usefulness. Though he had held his office only for a few short months, he had shown that he possessed those rare powers which enable men to rule successfully; and although his connexion with the Province was but brief, his name will long be remembered and revered in the Punjab.

With reference to your letter No. 1A of the 1st of January 1871, I am to request the favor of your intimating to the Nawab of Tank the great regret with which the Viceroy and Governor General in Council has received the intelligence of his personal injuries. It would be satisfactory to His Excellency in Council to receive occasional reports of the state of the Nawab's health.

4. MADRAS CIRCLE.—In Madras the average circulation was Rs. 64,56,004, showing an increase of Rs. 2,34,568 over the average circulation of the previous year, equal to 3·775 per cent.

5. BOMBAY CIRCLE.—The average circulation of Bombay has been Rs. 4,57,24,905, or Rs. 26,14,951 more than that of the previous year, the increase being equal to 6·065 per cent. Bombay has the largest circulation.

6. CALCUTTA BRANCH CIRCLES.—The average circulation at these circles has been as follows:—

Allahabad	...	Rs. 30,97,881, or a falling off of ...	Rs.	2,76,305

* The proportion into which this circulation is divisible for the several denominations of Notes is shown in Statement No. V.

The circulation of the several denominations of the Notes of the Banks of England and Belgium were in January 1865.—

	Notes of £200 to 1,000.	Notes of £20 to 100.	Notes of £10.	Notes of £5
Bank of England ...	3,645,100	5,949,400	3,877,270	7,034,565	..

National Bank of Belgium ..	55,340,000	13,740,500	39,113,000	5,441,950	5,276,220

In the issue by Scotch Banks in January 1867 the relative value of the Notes in circulation was Notes over £5. Notes below £5 : : 165 : 207.

9. TRANSACTIONS WITH THE PUBLIC.—The value of Notes issued to, and received from, the public for cash or other Notes during the last two years was as is shown below:—

CIRCLES.	Notes issued.		Notes received.

Increase over 1868-69	... .	5,33,75,160	. ... .	4,00,34,160

10. The work in the Calcutta Office has increased about six per cent. Last year 17,69,632 Notes were received and 17,77,721 issued, whereas this year 18,82,580 Notes have been received and 18,69,056 issued. The average number of Notes passed over the counters in the Calcutta Office in one day during the year 1868-69 was—

	Rs.
Notes cashed	6,275
Notes paid	6,304

Whereas the average for the year 1869-70 is—

	Rs.
Notes cashed	6,535
Notes paid	6,582

The amount of coin paid to the public during the year was Rs. 3,10,68,032-14, of which 90 lakhs was stated to be for remittances into the provinces to pay for produce.

11. The issue and receipt in all the Currency Offices of the denominations of Notes were as follows:—

	10 Rs.	20 Rs.	50 Rs.	100 Rs.	500 Rs.	1,000 Rs.	Total	Value.
Issues ..	13,89,675	7,15,724	3,10,175	5,33,615	1,02,544	3,45,095	33,96,823	49,34,48,480
Receipts ...	13,11,284	7,13,605	3,12,948	5,42,195	1,02,233	3,38,326	33,53,591	48,70,24,340

12. In para. 16 of my Report of last year, I remarked upon the time the several denominations of Notes remained in circulation. From the working of this year no information has been gained to add to that already given.

13. The Secretary of State having ruled that Notes are to be issued so long as they are fit for circulation, final instructions have been issued to all circles to cancel only such Notes as are worn, defective, noted as stolen or lost, or otherwise unfit for re-issue, including all cut Notes, unless such are required by the public for remittance to the circles whence they were issued.

14. In the year under review (Statement No. II), out of 33,53,591 Notes received from the public, 19,06,794 were cancelled. The relative proportions of the several denominations of Notes show that the number of Notes cancelled is inversely in proportion to their value; that is, the lowest number of the highest denominations, the cancellations increasing in the lower values, with the exceptions of the Notes of 50 and 500 Rupees, which do not seem to be in much request; and in this Statement No. II the number of Notes received into the several Offices cut in halves has been given in order to show how far the Notes have been used for remittance.

15. It will be seen that since the 21st September 1869 down to March 1870, 217,383 Notes have been so remitted at a cost to the Currency of Rs. 7,595, the value of the Note Forms.

16. The total value of the Notes cancelled, calculated at Rs. 34·938 per thousand, gives Rs. 66,619-9-1, against Rs. 44,064-4-8, the cost of the cancellation of the year 1868-69; but under the instructions issued, before mentioned, the cancellations will be reduced and certain contingent expenses connected with the posting, examining, &c., lessened, effecting an abatement of the annual charge on this head.

17. Reserves.—The coin reserve rose from 346 lakhs in the beginning of the year to 535 lakhs at its close, reaching a maximum of 583 lakhs in December 1869. The value of securities held at the beginning of the year was 391 lakhs when it was 39·915 per cent. of the circulation; it was increased at first to 395, then to 397, and lastly, in July 1869, to 399 lakhs, when it was 37·947 per cent. of the circulation, and at which figure it stood till January 1870, when the Government of India issued orders to sell off a portion and reduce it, until by the close of the year it was only 360 lakhs, or 34·407 per cent., showing a smaller proportion to the circulation than when the reserve was highest.

18. Lost Notes.—There have been no claims of entire Notes lost which have been admitted and paid for, though several are pending decision. A large number of cases of half Notes, which have been lost generally by Post, have been examined and claims adjusted. In Calcutta the following payments have been made :—

301	Cases of Calcutta Notes, value Rs.	37,570
89	Cases of Allahabad Notes, „ „	5,140
36	Cases of Lahore Notes, „ „	3,800
	In Madras 124 Notes, value Rs.	6,870

No data have been given by other circles.

19. At Madras a lost Note for Rs. 500, for which payment was made under bond to an applicant in March 1868, turned up in March 1870, was paid, and the value recovered on the bond.

20. Forged Notes.—A forged Note of Rs. 100 was presented at Madras, when it was detected and made over to the Police. The forgery was that of the old pattern Notes; the imitation was very inferior, but escaped detection at the Madras Bank.

21. At Bombay two forged Notes of Rs. 100 each were tendered at the counters and detected.

22. There is evidence to show that in Calcutta a trade is carried on in stolen halves of Notes. Such halves when stolen generally bear different numbers, and are difficult to pass without the numbers are altered.

23. To effect this many means are tried, the digit requiring alteration is torn or burnt out, care being taken to make other irregular tears or burns to give the work an accidental appearance. The digit that is cut out is replaced by the required one taken from another Note and then the Note is rubbed, stained, injured, part burnt, and divided into several pieces, which are joined together by pasting the fragments on paper, all with a view to bring the Notes into a condition apparently resulting from wear and tear, when it becomes very difficult for those who are not aware of the practice to detect the fraud.

24. Gold.—In Calcutta 58½ Sovereigns only were received during the year, and these were tendered by travellers. In Bombay, Madras, and other circles the receipts of gold were equally insignificant.

25. Small Silver Coin and Copper.—In September 1869 the Currency Offices in Calcutta and at Allahabad commenced to exchange small silver and copper coin for the public. The following work has been done since down to March 1870 :—

		Calcutta.	Allahabad.
Copper received	...	23	117
Ditto issued	...	8,783	321
Small Coin received	...	10,353	4,004
Ditto issued	...	2,41,585	2,005

It will be observed that in Calcutta the public have readily availed themselves of the copper and small coin offered to them. The result is, however, not so satisfactory at Allahabad,* but as no expense is incurred by this additional duty, I have directed all the Currency Offices to issue small silver coin to the public whenever wanted.

26. Outstanding Notes.—In para. 42 of my Report of last year, I stated that a full Statement would be supplied. Statement No. V exhibits the total number of Notes of all denominations outstanding on the 31st December 1869 out of each year's issue since 1862.

It will be seen that of the total issues there still remains outstanding the following amounts, viz. :—

1·337	per cent. of the issues of 1862	value	Rs.	7,94,840
1·310	of 1863	ditto	„	4,11,080
2·568	of 1864	ditto	„	6,44,260
2·338	of 1865	ditto	„	11,21,410
3·760	of 1866	ditto	„	16,95,910
14·836	of 1867	ditto	„	85,14,350
39·031	of 1868	ditto	„	1,69,31,570
78·219	of 1869	ditto	„	10,94,81,250

The Table shows that the return to the Currency Office of the Notes is inversely as the time they are outstanding, and becomes very gradual at last.

27. It will be shortly for consideration how the Notes outstanding for lengthened periods are to be treated; whether their amounts should form part of the investment or be separately treated as a permanent investment and adjusted yearly.

28. Composition of the Currency.—It appeared to me that if it were possible to ascertain the composition of the currency actually used in trade in the three Presidencies, the record of the information would be very useful. It was well known that in comparison with England, where banking and the London clearing house give facilities for adjustment and the economy of currency, India was in a very early stage and far behind. The use to which the 1,000 Rupees Notes are put, though it exhibits among native dealers a tendency towards banking and the use of more refined means of trade, yet it clearly shows that they mainly rely on currency proper for large transactions. All auxiliary currency, therefore, is confined to the European population, and the returns only represent a portion of the trade.

29. In order, then, to obtain information on this head, I consulted Mr. J. Norman, of Messrs. Norman Brothers, who assisted me much by obtaining information from the several Banks. The Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association also, on my application, readily took up the subject, and with their assistance I obtained the returns from their members.

30. The information is derived from the transactions of one month.

31. The information supplied from Bombay and Madras is less full, perhaps from the fact of my not having been able personally to explain the objects in view.

32. The average composition of the Indian Currency as used in Calcutta is—

		Specie.	Notes.	Bills.
Banks	...	3·33	35·31	61·36
Firms	...	7·04	42·97	49·99
Trade		16·36	38·60	44·95

* The distance between the town of Allahabad and the Currency Office fully accounts for this.

For comparison with this I extract from M. Clement Juglar, page 45, the result of an enquiry in London, which gave—

Receipts.			Payments.
Specie.	Notes.	Bills.	Specie.	Note.	Bills.
3	7	90	2	1	97

and from the Statistical Journal of September 1865, the conclusion arrived at from Sir J. Lubbock's enquiry gave—

Specie.	Notes.	Bills.
0·62	2·15	97·23

For trade in France, M. Vitry estimates coin to form 10 per cent. of the total of transactions.

33. This being the first information of the kind recorded is necessarily incomplete, but it may lead to a regular record and publication in future years, which will show the progress of the country in the matter of currency.

34. Treasury dealings in Notes.—In para. 25 of my Report of last year, I adverted to the amount of Notes held in Treasury balances. It seemed to be very desirable to ascertain this amount, as also the issues and receipts to the public. The first to show what amount of the circulation was actually in the hands of the public; the second to show the facilities given and the extent to which Notes were used with existing facilities.

35. Statement No. VII has been compiled and abstracted from quarterly returns supplied from every Treasury in India, and it shows the actual balances, receipts, and issues. In it will be found the extent of work connected with Currency Notes transacted at each Treasury throughout India. As this is the first year in which such a Statement has been compiled, no comparisons can be made to show whether the work has increased or decreased.

36. The total amount of Notes held by Government Treasuries on 31st March was as shown below:—

Governments and Administrations.	Total Cash Balance.	Note Balance.	Percentage of Notes on total Balance.
Government of India	2,07,91,308	26,040
Bengal	1,99,40,203	61,41,190
British Burmah	36,67,030	2,55,130
North-Western Provinces .	1,57,86,570	12,04,780
Oudh	41,31,215	1,55,440
Punjab ..	1,06,78,688	21,45,840
Bombay	3,50,28,704	42,78,570
Central Provinces	48,54,141	10,24,520
Madras . .	2,49,40,140	9,50,240
	13,98,20,999	1,61,81,750	11·6

37. The following shows the total transactions for the year, viz.:—

	Rs.
Receipts from (General Treasury Banks)	86,47,770
Do. other Treasuries	51,27,260
Do. from public in payment of Government dues	2,59,71,780
Do. do. in exchange for silver	1,32,60,250
Do. do. do. for other Notes	4,96,390
Total Receipts ...	5,35,03,450
Issues to (General Treasury Banks)	1,30,13,750
Do. to other Treasuries	51,16,250
Do. to public in payment of Government dues	1,66,20,230
Do. do. in exchange for silver	1,70,24,180
Do. do. do. for other Notes	5,25,910
Total Issues ...	5,23,00,320

38. There is no means of estimating the cost of remitting coin, but the saving that has been made to the State by the use of the Notes as remittances during the year must have been great.

39. Considering that the gross revenue of India amounts to nearly 50 crores of Rupees, the proportion of 2 crores and 59 lakhs only paid in Notes to the Government in the Treasuries represents but a small fraction of the total payments, and shows that the use of Notes in money transactions in the districts is still very limited.

40. The value of Notes received and paid in exchange for coin is small for all India; the value of Notes received and issued in exchange for other Notes shows that Treasuries generally are not resorted to for exchanging Notes or coin, while in some of the Treasuries detailed in the Statement there has absolutely been no exchange transaction in Notes with the public.

41. The value of coin received from the public in exchange—

For Notes was	Rs. 1,70,24,180
While the coin paid in exchange for Notes was	„ 1,32,60,250
Showing a surplus receipt of coin to the extent of	Rs. 37,63,930

42. Notes of other Presidency Circles.—Statement No. IV shows the value of other Circle Notes held by each Circle at the end of each month of last year. Their value has reached to a maximun of Rs. 63,27,470, and this with the restriction that the Branch Offices were only to cash Notes to the extent that their Notes were held in other Offices. There has been no inconvenience experienced at any of the Currency Offices from this proceeding, while the accommodation, which this step has afforded to the public, by enabling any traveller to cash any Note anywhere and to some extent giving to the traveller an universal Note, has been great.

43. Profits of the Department.—The total amount of interest realized during the year from Government Securities of the Currency Department has been Rs. 16,63,813-8-3, which has, as usual, been rateably distributed to each Currency Circle in proportion to the value of Notes in circulation of each. Taking into account a small cash receipt, being the value of altered Notes escheated to Government, and from sundry other sources, the total receipts of the year were Rs. 16,67,871-9-0. Against this there has been a total disbursement for Salaries, Establishment, Note Forms supplied from England, and Contingencies of Rs. 2,89,860-3-4, leaving a clear gain to the State through the Currency Department of Rs. 13,78,011-5-8 during the year. Each Office has worked with a profit during the year, and the Branch Offices of Calicut and Akola have been able to work off the debit balance exhibited against them at the close of the year 1868-69, while there is still a debit balance of Rs. 9,959-7-1 against Trichinopoly and Rs. 8,131-5-2 against Vizagapatam. With these exceptions, the other Offices have produced an accumulated net profit of Rs. 54,98,816-13-10, as shown below, viz.:—

	Rs.	A.	P.
Calcutta	23,37,722	14	1

H. HYDE,

Head Commissioner.

No. 241, dated 13th January 1871.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, FINANCIAL DEPT.

Read—

A report by the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency on the operations of his Department during the year 1869-70.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council observes from this report that the monthly average value of Government currency notes in circulation in each year since their introduction has been as follows, viz. :—

	Monthly average circulation.	Increase.	CIRCULATION ON 31ST DAY OF October.	December.	March.
1862-63	4,419,428	.....	4,580,000	4,520,000	4,926,000
1863-64	5,232,500	813,072	5,630,000	5,110,000	5,350,000
1864-65	6,882,012	1,649,512	7,087,059	7,479,134	7,427,327
1865-66	7,725,798	843,786	7,840,611	7,396,244	6,898,481
1866-67	8,989,318	1,263,520	10,160,959	9,959,459	8,090,868
1867-68	9,285,085	295,767	9,958,074	10,323,659	9,069,569
1868-69	10,145,533	860,448	10,611,507	10,299,846	9,959,296
1869-70	10,669,078	523,545	10,758,734	11,308,978	10,472,883

2. Since 1863-64, there has been a steady increase of the paper currency, the circulation rising annually, in the interval between June and December, above the previous maximum, and falling by March to a minimum exceeding that of the previous year. Accordingly, the permanent advance of the paper currency may be measured by the amount in circulation on 31st March rather than by the monthly average circulation. In whichever way the figures are regarded, those of 1869-70 show progress; though this is no doubt chiefly due to the increase in the Government balances at the Presidency banks, causing the banks to hold more notes.

3. The average monthly circulation is distributed, as follows, among Presidencies, Chief circles, and Interior circles, viz. :—

	Bengal Presidency.	Bombay Presidency.	Madras Presidency.	TOTAL.
1862-63	2,423,000	1,582,857	413,571	4,419,428

6. The circulation of the interior circles together has increased by more than 50 per cent. since 1866-67, but chiefly in the three circles of Berar, Nagpore, and Kurrachee, which are affected by the sea-borne trade of Bombay. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the growth has been slow and fluctuating; in the Punjab there is a decrease below the figures from 1865-66 to 1867-68. In the three interior circles in the Madras Presidency there has been some advance in the past two years, but their circulation is quite insignificant.

7. The progress of the circulation of the several denominations of currency notes has been as follows, viz. :—

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

8. The proportion of £5 notes to the total circulation of notes of the Bank of England is greater than the proportion of notes of Rs. 100 and under to the total circulation in India.

9. Of the increase of 4½ millions sterling on 31st March 1869 over the circulation at the end of 1863-64, more than three millions are represented by notes of Rs. 500 and 1,000 (chiefly the latter) belonging principally to the circles of Calcutta and Bombay.

10. The progress of the Nagpore circle is remarkable. Until the end of 1866-67, that circle was a branch of the Calcutta circle; but the trade of the Central Provinces being chiefly with Bombay, the Nagpore office of issue was united to the Bombay circle, with this principal effect that the Nagpore notes became convertible at Bombay instead of at Calcutta. The consequence was that the circulation of Nagpore notes was doubled in 1867-68.

11. As a general principle, notes, such as the Government currency notes of the Government of India, cannot be made freely convertible anywhere but at the place of issue. This restriction prevails in respect to notes of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, and it is believed of every Bank in Europe and America which issues notes. In the case of the Bank of England however, and of other chartered Banks in English Colonies, notes issued by subordinate branches are payable at the head-quarters office, and in like manner notes of the Government of India issued at a subordinate office are by law payable at the Presidency Town of the Presidency within which the subordinate office is situate. The attention of the Government of India is constantly directed to increasing the facilities for the encashment of notes as far as this can safely be done.

12. In 1867-68, the branch offices were allowed to cash notes of their respective chief circles. By a notification dated 20th January 1870, all currency offices were empowered, under certain conditions, to cash notes of other circles, irrespective of Presidency, up to the amount of their own notes cashed by other offices, and to issue to the public the foreign notes so cashed.

Mint and Currency Proceedings, January 1870, Nos. 4 and 5.

13. The results of this experiment are not yet known; but they are believed to have been inconsiderable in the year now reported on. The experiment belongs rather to the current year than to that now reported on. The subjoined figures show that the arrangement is not inoperative at the Interior circles; it is probable, however, that its existence is still very imperfectly known:—

14. The Governor General in Council has now resolved that notes, wherever issued, shall be cashed at all currency offices to the extent to which it is considered that each office can undertake so to cash notes without interfering with the primary obligation of providing for the immediate convertibility of all notes of its own issue, and, in the case of the three Presidency Circles of the issues, of the Interior circles respectively subordinate to them.

15. Rules for giving effect to this Resolution will be immediately issued to the officers of the Currency Department. The amount available for cashing foreign circle notes will for each issue office be daily notified at such office for public information.

16. To promote the convertibility of currency notes outside the Currency Department, that is, at Government Treasuries, the following rules have been passed from time to time.

Account Proceeding, January 1862, Nos. 20 to 25.
Account Proceeding, March 1862, Nos. 179 A to D.

I.—In March and April 1862, Treasury Officers were instructed to cash notes (within the circles in which they were legal tender) for the convenience of travellers, or generally to a limited extent for small sums.

Account Proceeding, April 1862, Nos 41 b to d.
Mint and Currency Proceeding, July 1865, Nos. 269 to 277.

II.—By an order dated 11th July 1865, the Government authorised all Railway Companies to receive notes of other circles when bonâ fide tendered by travellers in payment of railway fares, but not when tendered in payment for carriage of merchandise; and directed Treasury Officers to accept such notes from the Railway Companies.

Mint and Currency Proceedings, December 1869, Nos. 1 and 2.

III.—By a notification dated 22nd October 1869, all Revenue Officers and the Railway Companies were authorised to receive payment of Government or Railway dues in notes of any Presidency or Circle. The prohibition of July 1865, against the receipt by Railway Companies of the notes of other circles in payment of rates for merchandise, was thus removed.

17. In 1864-65 Local Accountants General were empowered to buy notes and supply them to interior treasuries. The supplies went to deficit treasuries as part of the usual remittances, but formed a needless addition to the cash balance of surplus treasuries. The arrangement entailed on Government an expenditure for moving funds which is not shown against the profits of the Currency Department. It being found that the notes thus artificially remitted were, whenever the course of exchange favored the operation, returned immediately to the Office of Issue, it was ordered on the 26th

April 1866 that Accountants General should not supply in this way notes of a higher value than Rs. 100 unless there was reason to believe that they were required for local circulation. Treasury Officers were at the same time instructed to supply currency notes of any value they might have in hand, freely and without enquiry, to any one demanding them, in exchange for silver or in payment of claims upon the Government.

Currency Proceedings, April 1866, Nos. 186-7.

18. Again, in a Financial Notification dated 14th January 1867, Treasury Officers were desired to cash notes of their own circles freely on demand, whenever this could be done without inconvenience.

Currency Proceeding, January 1867, No. 1.
Account Proceeding, July 1869, Nos 92 to 104.
Account Proceeding, Sept. 1869, Nos. 36 and 37.

19. The sum of these orders is :—

1*st*.—That the notes of a paper currency circle are cashed at any treasury within the circle up to the available means of the treasury, i. e., to whatever extent they can be cashed without embarrassing the treasury.

2*nd*.—That notes of all Presidencies and Circles are received at any treasury in payment of Government demands, and are cashed at any treasury for the convenience of travellers.

3*rd*.—That notes which, in this way or otherwise, reach any Government treasury are freely issued in exchange for coin or in discharge of Government obligations. In addition to all this, by an order which appears in this day's Gazette, Notes of all Presidencies and Circles are made freely convertible till further orders at Madras.

20. The statistics of the receipts and issues of notes at Government Treasuries, as furnished by the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency, are incomplete, the transactions at the treasuries noted on the margin (mostly important ones) being omitted. For the Lower Provinces of Bengal, however, fuller statistics from 1864-65 to 1869-70 are available in the annual reports submitted by the Board of Revenue to the Local Government.

22. The receipt from the public of notes of Rs. 50 and under shows a steady progress, and the re-issues are not much below the receipts. The figures for each denomination are as follows :—

The presentation of Rs. 20 and Rs. 10 Notes at treasuries in payment of revenue, or for silver or other notes, is increasing; but the percentage of re-issues on the receipts of those denominations is falling off; with the Rs. 50 Notes it is the reverse, owing possibly to a larger use of these last mentioned notes for remittances to Calcutta.

23. The principal transactions in currency notes with the public at Government Treasuries are for remittances into the interior on account of Government revenue, as is evidenced by the following figures relating to the notes of the larger denominations :—

	Received from the Public.				Issued to the Public.

24. The excess of receipts over issues is principally in the notes for Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 500. These could not be issued in large quantities at the Interior Treasuries, and so they were sent back to Calcutta, as appears from the Table in paragraph 20, in the entry against the Bank of Bengal.

25. Had the large excess of notes received over those issued occurred at deficit treasuries, which have to be supplied with funds from other districts or from Calcutta, it would have entailed on Government the expense of sending to those treasuries specie equal to that excess, but the figures are thus distributed :—

	Notes received from Public			Notes issued to the Public.

26. The excess of receipts over issues is confined to the surplus treasuries, and the remittance by them of this excess to Calcutta simply displaced a corresponding amount of supply bills upon those treasuries or of specie remittances from them.

27. The proportions in which notes are received from the public in payment of revenue and in exchange for silver respectively are as follow :—

28. The acceptance of currency notes in satisfaction of demands against Government is gaining ground; but the receipts and issues for silver or for other notes have declined.

29. The figures for the deficit treasuries are satisfactory; their issues of notes having for the past three years exceeded their receipts.

30. The same condition is fulfilled in the treasuries in the rest of India, as shown by the statistics for 1869-70, which are supplied by the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency.

* The column of Receiving Treasuries includes Deficit Treasuries, and (in the North Western Provinces and the Punjab) those surplus treasuries which are used as centres for remittances from the North-Western Provinces to the Punjab and from the lower to the upper stations in the Punjab.

31. The excess of notes received over issues in British Burmah is withdrawn to Calcutta, as part of the local surplus of the Province, and is cashed there at the currency office. In like manner, the similar excess in the Punjab is readily converted and turned to useful account at Lahore, which is a centre of supply for deficit treasuries higher up. With these exceptions, which like the excess of notes received over notes issued at the surplus treasuries in the Lower Provinces of Bengal fall into the general system of Government remittances, and are thus an advantage rather than a hindrance, the issues of notes exceed the receipts, in surplus and deficit treasuries alike, in all the Provinces and Presidencies above named.

32. The average composition of the Indian Currency, as used in Calcutta, is stated, in the 32nd para. of the Head Commissioner's report, to be from 35 to 38 per cent. in notes, and the remainder in specie and bills. The several averages from which these abstract averages have been struck are noteworthy and the acknowledgments of the Government are due to Colonel Hyde for the labour and trouble involved in this collection, but the total average cannot in such a case be deduced in the manner adopted in the report, and must be rejected as arithmetically untrue. Such an average could be obtained only from returns of the actual transactions, and even those would require correction in respect of dealings with the currency office.

33. The Head Commissioner gives the following percentages of cut notes on the total number received, viz.—

Rs.	10	Notes	9,264
„	20	„	12,921
„	50	„	22,234
„	100	„	20,677
„	500	„	18,913
„	1,000	„	9,340

These figures show that the Rs. 1,000 Notes are not largely used for remittance unless they are sent in whole notes.

34. Act XIX of 1861, for the regulation of the Government Paper Currency, limited to four millions sterling the amount of currency reserve which might be invested in Government securities. This limit was necessarily assumed on the data of the known circulation of the three Presidency Banks in previous periods. But the average circulation of the Government Paper Currency having increased from 4⅗ millions sterling in 1862-63 to 10 millions in 1868-69, and to 11⅓ millions by 31st December of 1869-70, the limit was re-considered in the last mentioned year, and power was taken under Act XV of 1870, passed on the 5th April, to extend the limit up to six millions, provided (as before) that the actual sum for investment within that amount should be fixed by notification with the previous consent of the Secretary of State. It has been fixed since at five millions.

Mint and Currency Pro., July 1870, Nos. 1 to 4.

Mint and Currency, 5th and 6th October 1870.

35. The profits from the investment of part of the paper currency reserve amounted in 1869-70, after payment of all direct charges, to £ 137,801.

36. In 1866 rules were published for regulating the payment by the Paper Currency Department of the value of mutilated or lost notes. The object kept in view was to afford to the presenters of mutilated notes, and the owners of lost notes, every facility for getting payment, consistent with the protection of Government against loss; refinements were introduced, however, in the application of the rules from a desire to prevent, in the interest of the real owners of presented notes, any payments to a fraudulent presenter of them. But this endeavour clashed, in practice, with the obligation of paying the value of a note to the presenter unless there is good reason for supposing that he is not a bonâ fide holder, while it was not practicable to define by rule under what circumstances of loss of a whole note the value should be paid, and in what other circumstances it should not. It was accordingly declared, in supersession of previous rules, that, as regards lost notes, the Government would not pledge themselves by any rules to pay their value. Whenever the Head Commissioner thinks that value thereof should be paid, he will submit the circumstances of loss, and his proposals for the orders of the Government of India.

37. With respect to mutilated notes, the Head Commissioner was required to frame rules for the guidance of circle officers, showing, as far as possible, under what circumstances the Government is so clearly bound to pay the value of a mutilated note as to warrant payment by those officers without a reference to the Head Commissioner. These rules, which entailed further correspondence, were finally settled in 1870-71. Doubtful claims for the value of mutilated notes are reserved for consideration by the Head Commissioner, who will exercise his own discretion, whether to pay or not to pay, availing himself of legal advice whenever necessary.

Mint and Currency Pros., Sept. 1870, Nos 14 to 21.

38. Under these rules, the payments of the value of lost or mutilated notes appear to have fallen off in the Calcutta Office, though from the different ways in which the subject is noticed in the present and previous reports, the fact is not quite clear.

39. The Head Commissioner reports that "in Calcutta a trade is carried on in stolen halves of notes" by joining wrong halves selected for the purpose, and making them correspond by altering the discrepant digit in the number of one of the halves. As the trade may embrace other kinds of fraud, the independent checks upon errors in posting of cancellations in the note registers, which subject the present Head Commissioner of Paper Currency has under consideration, should be perfected.

40. The simplicity of the old pattern notes induced forgery at Bombay shortly after the introduction of the paper currency. In 1869-70, two forged notes of Rs. 100 each were tendered at the Bombay office of issue, but whether of the old or the new pattern is not mentioned. The distinction should be noticed in future reports. In Madras the only forgery in 1869-70 was of the old pattern note.

41. Little or no gold coin was exchanged at the paper currency offices, the premium upon gold, throughout the year, being too high.

42. The experiment of supplying copper and small silver coins to the public at the currency offices appears to have had some success. The Governor General in Council approves of its continuance.

43. The thanks of the Government are due to Colonel Hyde for his valuable report, and for the zealous interest with which he superintended the operations of the Department from the time it was founded until the 17th September 1870, when he made over charge to the Comptroller General who is now the Head Commissioner. Consequent on that transfer, Colonel Hyde, in submitting his report on the 17th November, dated it 17th September.

ORDERED, that a copy of this Resolution be sent to Colonel Hyde, late Head Commissioner of Paper Currency, to the present Head Commissioner, and that this Resolution and the Report be published in the Gazette of India.

PLEADERS, MUKHTÁRS AND REVENUE AGENTS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents. He said that the Bill was intended to consolidate and amend the law on the subject to which it referred; and it would, if enacted, replace the eight different Acts and Regulations in which that law was now contained. It was in fact one of the consolidation Bills of which so many had recently been prepared in execution of the scheme of consolidating the existing laws, and this Bill, he was happy to say, was one of the last.

The opportunity had been taken to introduce certain changes in the law relating to the remuneration of pleaders, mukhtárs and revenue agents. He was authorized to state that the sections dealing with this subject were framed on the recommendation and had the approval of the Hon'ble Sir Walter Morgan, the Chief Justice of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces, who probably had as great experience on the subject in question as any other authority in India. The provisions which it was proposed to adopt were substantially the same as those which were contained in the Act of Parliament passed in the course of last summer for amending the law relating to the remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors, 33 & 34 Vic., cap. 28. Some adaptations had been made both in the arrangement and language of the clauses taken from that Statute, as well as in the substance of the provisions themselves. He need not enter into the details of what was proposed, but the general object of the sections in question was to secure to pleaders and others an easy remedy for the recovery of their fees, and on the other hand to secure to clients a remedy against anything in the nature of oppression or extortion. The course which had been taken to secure these objects was as follows. Under the terms of the existing law, pleaders were able to make any contracts they pleased with their clients, and such contracts could not only be made, but might be enforced by a regular suit. However, when a regular suit was brought, it had been held that it was not open to the Court to look into the character of the bargain itself: it was treated like any other bargain; and if the pleader chose to take advantage of his knowledge of the law and legal experience and the need of his services by his client, to compel him to enter into an extortionate arrangement, he could do so. He need hardly say that the difficulty of permitting lawyers in general, and pleaders and attornies in particular, to enter into any contracts they pleased with persons who were necessarily ignorant of the particular subject-matter of the contract, had been felt so strongly in England, that it was not, until very lately, competent to an attorney to make a bargain with his client for anything beyond just professional allowances, which were subject to taxation by an officer of the Court. For reasons which were obvious in themselves, and to which MR. STEPHEN need not particularly refer, as they were all summed up in famous judgments of the English Courts of Justice, in Swinfen v. Lord Chelmsford and Kennedy v. Brown, it was the law of England that a barrister could not make any bargain at all for his fees for advocacy in litigation, and whether he was paid or not he had no legal remedy against his client. That state of the law could hardly be introduced into this country: it implied a state of things that did not exist in British India. But while the law of India allowed attornies and pleaders to make any bargains that they thought fit, it in point of fact caused to clients very great hardship, and he was inclined to believe, from such information as he had received, that a large proportion of the litigation of this country was due to the cause that pleaders and mukhtárs, some of whom were most unscrupulous, gave themselves an interest in the matter in dispute, made extortionate bargains with their clients, and forced them on by false hopes of ultimate success to appeal from Court to Court. Now that was a state of things which certainly seemed to be open to great objection, and the measure proposed in the present Bill, which rested on the high authority he had mentioned, was that, although pleaders and mukhtárs should be allowed to contract as heretofore, their contracts should be subject entirely to the supervision of the Court, and that they should not be enforced in the ordinary way by regular suit, but that they should be enforced by order of the Court, the Court having power, if it thought proper in the interests of justice, to quash or modify the original contract in any manner it thought fit.

Another clause of the Bill provided that pleaders should not be permitted to stipulate for payment only in the event of success.

With regard to the last provision MR. STEPHEN confessed that he entertained some doubts, and should be glad to hear what could be said on the point by persons of local experience. On the one hand, if you permitted a pleader to enter into a contract on the terms of no cure no pay, you gave him such a strong interest in the suit that, if he was a man capable of such practices, it was by no means impossible that he might suggest every kind of improper defence and iniquitous plea, and might even go so far as to suborn witnesses for the purpose of carrying out these defences, in the same manner as if he were himself the litigant. That was a strong argument on one side. On the other hand, MR. STEPHEN had heard it said that the people in some parts of the country did not dislike this arrangement. That was foreign to English experience. The reason why such an arrangement was not disliked in India was that the pleaders were described as using all manner of means to obtain clients; and when they obtained them the suitor said—"I know very little about you, and I may never see you again, and moreover, I do not in the least believe that you will take any particular care about my suit unless you have an interest in it." That was the other side of the question. He (MR. STEPHEN) did not himself know how the matter stood; it was one on which he could only form an opinion from what he had heard. The Bill would of course be submitted to the Local Governments for the expression of their opinions, and he hoped they would express them upon this as well as other points. But as to the main principle, that a bargain between lawyer and client ought not to be left to the ordinary principle of free trade, but that it ought to be made subject to the strictest supervision by competent authority, which would see that superior knowledge was not abused, he felt no doubt.

Section forty-five of the Bill remedied an existing defect. This section provided that if any advocate, attorney, or mukhtár had been removed or suspended by the High Court, and if he practised after such removal or during such suspension, he would be liable to a fine. The object of that was as follows. The High Courts were necessarily invested with power to remove or suspend advocates and pleaders in this country; it must and ought to be so. But if a man chose to disregard the authority of that Court, and chose to plead and act in other Courts contrary to such order, he ought to be punished. Of course the High Court would not hear him, but if he went to the Courts all over the large provinces under the supervision of the High Court, the probability was that it might escape notice for some time that he was under suspension, and the effect of that would be that he might practise notwithstanding the order of the Court.

MR. STEPHEN thought any one who had anything to do with the administration of justice would be aware that there was hardly any kind of person who could do more good than the really honest and conscientious advocate: on the other hand, no one who could do greater harm, and defeat the ends of justice more effectually, than the dishonest and unscrupulous advocate. He spoke as a barrister having strong professional feelings, and he would just as much stand up to the utmost for the advantages and privileges of the respectable portion of the profession, as he would advocate the punishment of those guilty of professional misconduct. That was the reason why this clause was introduced.

There was nothing more in the Bill requiring notice, except that, at the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, it proposed to restore to all mukhtárs the privilege of appearing, pleading and acting in Criminal Courts, which they formerly enjoyed under Act XX of 1865, and to empower mukhtárs heretofore admitted and enrolled in Lower Bengal as Revenue Agents (section seven) to appear, plead and act in suits in Munsifs' Courts under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 (to amend the procedure in suits between landlord and tenant).

The Motion was put and agreed to.

LOCAL PUBLIC WORKS BILL.

Colonel the Hon'ble R. STRACHEY introduced the Bill to facilitate the construction of works of public utility from Local and Municipal Funds, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in a month. He had explained, when he had asked for leave to introduce the Bill in March last, what were the reasons which led to its introduction. But as some time had elapsed since, he thought it would be better if he re-stated shortly what the general causes were. The intention of the Bill was sufficiently explained by the title. The particular object of the Bill was to facilitate the making of advances by the Government for the purpose of carrying out works of public utility. Of course there was no difficulty in the Government making such advances as far as it desired to do so. But there was a difficulty in getting sufficient security for the recovery of such advances when they were made. The Government were informed that none of the existing minor municipal bodies nor the administrators of the other Local Funds were capable of making a legal assignment on the future revenues of the Municipal or Local Funds, and therefore the Government, in making advances, could obtain no security from such bodies for the repayment of such advances. He excluded those municipalities that were empowered by legislative enactments to incur such debts, but he believed the only bodies of the sort were to be found in the presidency towns. Possibly there might be some others in Madras, but in the other parts of India, so far as he was informed, they did not exist. That being the case, in order to make advances given by the Government for such purposes thoroughly safe, it became necessary to authorize the persons who administered these Funds to enter into agreements with the Government, binding themselves to repay the advances with interest in subsequent years. The first object of the Bill, therefore, was to authorize the repayment of such advances from the incomes of the Funds. At the same time that this was done, it became also desirable to limit the power of the persons who administered these Funds to borrow money within a certain amount. Those were the two essential things with which this Bill purported to deal.

The particular form which was given to the Bill might be shortly stated. The Bill commenced by stating that the persons who administered Municipal Funds and who desired advances should make application for such advances. Thus, the initiative was entirely thrown on the persons who administered the Funds, and the Government had no power of interfering unless on the motion of those persons: therefore there could be no possible undue interference on the part of the Government in these matters in consequence of anything contained in this Bill.

Next, it was provided that it should rest entirely with the Local Governments to determine what advances were to be made in particular cases, subject to certain rules of a general nature to be framed by the Government of India. It had been considered that the Government of India should frame these rules, because this Government was the supreme financial authority in the country, and it would eventually fall on the Government of India to make good any loss which might arise on any transaction in which the advances with interest were not repaid. The chief points to which these rules would refer were, the declaration of the Municipal or Local Funds on account of which such advances might be made, the nature of the works which might be undertaken, and the provisions under which advances were to be made and repaid.

The Bill further provided for the recovery of the advances in case of default being made by the persons who administered the Funds on account of which the advance was made. As the Bill stood, a preference was to be given to Government, in obtaining repayment of advances, over all other claims. To this some objection had been made. This, however, was rather a question of detail, and it might be considered in Committee whether any limitation to such a preference might properly be made.

Another point which was dealt with in the Bill, as he had mentioned before, was the limitation of the total amount which any municipal or other local body should be able to borrow under the provisions of the Bill. It was quite certain that some such limitation was necessary, and whether the particular amount proposed in the Bill was correct or not, it would probably be admitted that the sum which should be allowed to be borrowed in the contemplated way should bear some proportion to the total income which was at the disposal of the borrowing power.

It was also provided that, after the passing of the Act, no loans should be incurred by any such body as those referred to in the Act except under the provisions of the Act. Facts had come to his notice in the course of last year which satisfied him that such a condition was absolutely necessary. He had become aware of some of the loan-transactions of the municipal bodies in Upper India, which satisfied him that bodies of that kind should not be allowed to go into the market to borrow as they pleased. He need not mention the particular places to which he referred, but the transaction was of a very singular description.

That was all that he desired to say as to the Bill as it had been placed before the Council; but the further consideration which he had given to the subject, after he had seen the opinions given by the local authorities, induced him to propose one or two modifications. The first of these had been suggested by one or two of the communications received from the Local Governments on the Bill, and had also been mentioned to him as desirable by the Hon'ble Mr.

Robinson. It was that the Local Governments should have power to authorize loans for these objects from other persons, similar to that which they possessed in giving advances of Government money. It might readily happen that the sum of money the Government had at its disposal for the purpose of making such advances might be exhausted, and if the Government purse was the only source from which advances could be got, some useful works might not be carried out. It might also happen that private persons might be ready to lend money for works in which they were interested even on better terms than the Government itself. At all events, if the same restrictions were put on the authorizing of loans from private parties which were put on advances from Government, it seemed to him that there could be no possible objection to the Local Governments authorizing loans from other sources than from the Government purse. This addition to the Bill he should be prepared to propose to the Committee if the Bill was referred.

The other point was rather a change of form. The eleventh head of the rules which the Governor General in Council was empowered to make under section five, referred to the amount which should from time to time be applied from the public revenues for the purpose of making these advances. On further consideration, COLONEL STRACHEY thought it would be better to put this in a more direct way into the Bill, and to introduce a separate section to declare distinctly that the Governor General in Council should from time to time determine the sum of money which should be placed at the disposal of the Local Governments, and should in like manner regulate the total amount which might be outstanding at any one time on account of these advances. Practically, the way in which the measure would work financially would be, that the Government of India would place at the disposal of the Local Governments a certain fixed sum of money which they might apply to these objects, and when that sum became exhausted no further advances could be made until by the repayment of former advances fresh money was obtained. This was the manner in which the loan-operations for public works were conducted in England, and it was the intention of the Government that the transactions which took place under this Bill should in a general way, and as far as the circumstances of the country would permit, be conducted in a similar manner to that under which they were carried on under the English law.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said that, although he cordially approved of the general principle of the Bill, it was obviously in some respects a financial Bill, and he thought that in its present form it certainly ought to be referred to the Financial Department of the Government of India, so that no clause should be introduced in it which would in any respect be objectionable financially. He hoped, too, that he would be placed on the Select Committee. These two things being done, he dared say that the Bill would be ultimately framed in such a form that he would have no objection to offer when it came finally to be passed in the Council.

Colonel the Hon'ble R. STRACHEY remarked that when leave was given to introduce the Bill, it was placed in the Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple's hands, and therefore, virtually, the Bill was brought to the knowledge of the Financial Department. Further, the Bill had not been brought in till it was approved by the Government of India, and if Sir Richard Temple was put on the Committee, he (COLONEL STRACHEY) did not see what advantage would be got by referring the Bill to the Financial Department.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

Fort William, the 11th January 1870.

No. 145.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following Advertisement :—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rheea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and no doubt might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost, all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included, of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture, to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Arrangements will be made by the Government of India for the supply of carefully dried stems, and specimens of fibre separated from the bark, but subjected to no other process, to mechanical firms and others desirous of competing, on application to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

7. All machinery, &c., must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to a locality which will be notified hereafter, probably in the North-Western Provinces or the Punjab, and there worked under the supervision of their own representatives for a sufficient time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. One year from the date of this advertisement will be allowed for the preparation of the machines and their transport to the locality named for the competition, and the trials will then be made and the decision of the judges announced. If no invention of sufficient merit is received in the above-named period to obtain the prize offered, the Government will continue to allow machines to be tendered for trial till the end of two years from the same date, after which, or on the award of the prize, the offers herein made will be withdrawn.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

The 20th January 1871.

No. 423.—RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council observes that the admission into the service of Government of other than young men tends to throw upon the State an undue liability in respect of pensionary allowances.

His Excellency in Council is accordingly pleased to declare that, as a general rule, no person should be admitted into the Uncovenanted Service of Government after he has attained the age of 25 years. But if, for special reasons, any one is after this date admitted at a later age, then, in the event of his being required to retire under the operation of any rule for the removal of Officers from the service as superannuated on their attaining a particular age, the pension to which he would, but for this rule be entitled, shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of years of pensionable service he has completed bears to 30 years, the full period required for a good service pension.

For instance, if an Officer so retiring has completed 20 years' service, then his pension will be one-third of his average pay multiplied by $\frac{20}{30}$; if he has completed 26 years, then it will be half his average pay multiplied by $\frac{26}{30}$.

Ordered, that the above Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

3. A limited amount of Notes and Coin will be supplied to each from the head office of the Circle of issue, and all applications for exchange, whether for Notes or Silver Coin, will be granted without restriction so far as these funds permit.

4. There is no legal obligation to cash any Notes at these Agencies, but they are established in order to provide facilities for exchange to the public beyond the requirements of the law.

Governor General to make rules.

5. The Governor General in Council shall from time to time make rules for regulating all matters relating to the making of such advances, and the said rules shall provide, amongst other things, for the following;

The Local Government may direct such officer to repay and discharge the advance as aforesaid from any amount so received by him All payments made in that behalf by such officer shall be deemed to be a first charge against the said Fund, and the residue only of any amount so received, after making all such payments, shall be repaid to the person administering the said Fund.

Local Government may direct officer to administer Fund

8. If at any time an advance be not repaid and discharged, according to the conditions on which it was made, and if such advance has been made subject to the condition that an additional rate shall be levied to provide for the due repayment and discharge of the advance, and if the person administering the Fund fails to levy such rate in the manner required under the said rules, the Local Government may order him to do all things needful for the levy of the said rate, and may appoint an officer to levy and receive the same.

An officer so appointed shall, so far as he shall be authorized so to do by the Local Government, and for the purpose of levying and receiving such rate, exercise all or any of the powers commonly so exercised by the person administering the Fund, and in the place of such person; and so long as such officer remains so appointed and to the extent of the authority given to the said officer by the Local Government, such person shall cease to exercise the said powers

An additional rate levied and received under this section shall be dealt with as though it had been received under the section next preceding.

No advance to exceed six times income of Fund

9. No advance under this Act shall exceed six times the gross income of the Fund received during the year next preceding that in which the advance is authorized by the Local Government.

Money not to be borrowed except under this Act

10 No person administering any Local or Municipal Fund who is not authorized by some special law to borrow money on the security of such Fund shall borrow money on such security otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Government of India has recognized the importance of facilitating to the utmost the prosecution of local works of improvement, and has come to the conclusion that a system somewhat similar to that established under the English Public Works Loan Acts may be introduced in India with much advantage The Government would make advances, to be repaid with interest in a term of years, for works of certain classes, the public utility of which was duly ascertained. A certain maximum sum would be placed at the command of the Local Governments, to be applied in making such advances, on which they would operate, the power of extending the advances to new objects being limited by the obligation not to exceed that sum, so that, when the whole authorized sum was once advanced, the earlier loans must be paid off before fresh ones could be made.

It has been ruled, however, more than once recently, that it is not desirable to give the local bodies who deal with local or municipal revenues independent powers of borrowing, and that, when for any special reason it may be expedient that funds should be borrowed for local objects, the Government itself should lend the money. This course has been followed in several cases.

But in most of these cases there is no means of giving the Government a legal lien on the revenues on the security of which the loans are made A municipal body or a person administering local revenues has no power to do more than deal with the revenue as it is received, and cannot give any valid pledge that the income of future years shall be applied in a particular way, unless under express legislative authority, which certainly has no existence in the case of most of the Local Funds in India When the last law regarding municipalities in the North-Western Provinces, Act VI of 1868, was passed, the power of borrowing was deliberately rejected by the Government of India and the Legislative Council.

The present Bill has therefore been prepared in the Public Works Department in order to provide for the making of advances of public money for works of public utility to local or municipal bodies, obtaining at the same time valid security for their repayment from the funds at the disposal of such bodies.

28. The Chief Revenue Authority shall cause certificates signed by such Officer as the Chief Revenue Authority appoints in this behalf to be issued to persons admitted and enrolled under the provisions of this Act as Revenue Agents and entitled to practise as such.

Nothing in this section applies to Agents appointed under section twenty-four.

Power to make agreements with clients.

33. An Attorney-at-law, Pleader, Mukhtár or Revenue Agent may make an agreement in writing with any person retaining or employing him respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of any past or future services, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of business done or to be done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, either by a gross sum, or by commission or percentage, or by salary or otherwise, and either at the same or at a greater or at a less rate as or than the rate at which he would otherwise be entitled to be remunerated, subject to the provisions and conditions in this part of this Act contained:

Provided that when any such agreement is made in respect of business done or to be done in any suit, the amount payable under the agreement shall not be received by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an Officer of the High Court or District Court. If it appear to such Officer that the agreement is not fair and reasonable, he shall refer it to the Court for opinion, and the Court shall have power either to reduce the amount payable under the agreement or to order the agreement to be cancelled, and the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements in respect of the business done to be ascertained in the same manner as if no such agreement had been made.

Agreements to exclude further claims.

34. Such an agreement shall exclude any further claim of the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent beyond the terms of the agreement in respect of any services, fees, charges, or disbursements in relation to the conduct and completion of the business in reference to which the agreement is made, except such services, fees, charges or disbursements, if any, as are expressly excepted by the agreement.

Reservation of responsibility for negligence.

35. A provision in any such agreement that the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be liable for negligence, or that he shall be relieved from any responsibility to which he would otherwise be subject as such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, shall be wholly void.

Examination and enforcement of agreements.

36. No suit shall be brought upon any such agreement.

But the High Court or District Court may examine and determine every question respecting the validity or effect of any such agreement,

And on petition of any person, or the representative of any person, a party to such agreement, or alleged to be liable to pay, or claiming to be entitled to be paid, the costs, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of which the agreement is made,

if the agreement appear to such Court to be in all respects fair and reasonable,

the Court may, by order, enforce it in such manner and subject to such conditions, if any, as to the costs of the petition as the Court thinks fit:

Improper agreements may be set aside.

But if the agreement does not appear to the Court to be fair and reasonable, the Court may declare it to be void, and shall thereupon have power—

(a) to order the agreement to be given up to be cancelled,

(b) to direct the costs, fees, charges and disbursements incurred or chargeable in respect of the matters included therein to be ascertained in the same manner as if such agreement had not been made, and

(c) to make such order as to the costs of and relating to such petition, and the proceedings thereon, as the Court thinks fit.

Every petition under this section shall be chargeable under the Court Fees Act, 1870, as if it were a plaint.

Every order under this section may be enforced as if it were a decree.

shall be enforced by any Court or Revenue Authority.

38. Where an Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent has made an agreement with his client in pursuance of the provisions of this Act and anything has been done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent under the agreement, and before the agreement has been completely performed by him, such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent dies or becomes incapable to act, an application may be made to the High Court or District Court by any party to the agreement, or by the representatives of any such party, and such Court shall thereupon have the same power to enforce or set aside such agreement, so far as the same may have been acted upon, as if such death or incapacity had not happened.

The Court, if it deem the agreement to be in all respects fair and reasonable, may order the amount due in respect of the past performance of the agreement to be ascertained by an officer of the Court, and such officer in ascertaining such amount shall have regard, so far as may be, to the terms of the agreement, and payment of the amount found to be due may be enforced in the same manner as if the agreement had been completely performed by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

As to change of Pleader after agreement.

39. After any such agreement has been made, and before the conclusion of the business to which it relates, the client may, notwithstanding such agreement, change his Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

In case of such change the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, party to such agreement, shall be deemed to have become incapable to act under the same within the meaning of section thirty-nine;

and upon any order being made for ascertaining the amount due to him in respect of the past performance of such agreement, the High Court or District Court shall direct the said officer to have regard to the circumstance under which such change has taken place;

and the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be deemed entitled to the full amount of the remuneration agreed to be paid to him, unless it appear that there has been no default, negligence, improper delay, or other conduct on his part affording reasonable ground to the client for the change.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has two primary objects, one, to consolidate the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents, the other, to amend that law so far as it relates to agreements between certain legal practitioners and their clients.

In Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh, the law on the subject is contained in three Acts (XX of 1865, XXIX of 1865 and IX of 1866): in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay it is contained in Acts I of 1846, XX of 1853, Madras Regulation XIV of 1816, and Bombay Regulation II of 1827, chapter VI; in the Panjáb, Act IV of 1866 (sections ten, eleven, twelve, forty-four and fifty-one), contains some special provisions as to Pleaders in the Chief Court and their fees; and in British Burma the Recorders' Courts Act XXI of 1863 (sections sixteen, seventeen and eighteen) contains similar provisions. The Central Provinces and all British Burma outside the local limits of the Recorders' jurisdiction appear to be devoid of any law on the subject.

The present Bill consolidates and extends to the whole of British India such of the provisions of Acts XX of 1865 and XXIX of 1865 as appear to be generally applicable to the country.

With regard to agreements for remuneration between clients and their legal advisers, Act XX of 1865, section thirty-nine, permits such agreements to be made, and declares that they shall not be enforced otherwise than by regular suit. This provision, which has been held to place such agreements on the same footing as an ordinary contract between private persons, has, for obvious reasons, not worked satisfactorily. A flagrant instance of the evil of the present law is furnished by the recent case of Nuthoo Lall v. Budree Pershad, 1 Allahabad Reports 1; and though the High Court there held that it was not the duty of the lower Courts to decree (as they had done), on mere proof of the contract, the enforcement of an extortionate bargain between a pleader and his client, the legislature should not leave so important a rule to depend on the decision of a single High Court. The Bill repeals the section in question, and replaces it by a set of provisions modelled on the recent English Statute 33 & 34 Vic., Cap. 28 (to amend the law relating to the remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors), sections four, six, seven, eight, nine, eleven, thirteen and fourteen.

Section thirty-three of the Bill declares that pleaders, &c., may make agreements as to their remuneration, but that the amount agreed on shall not be paid until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an officer of the High Court or of the District Court. The Court is empowered either to reduce the amount or to order the agreement to be cancelled. The agreement (section thirty-four) will exclude further claims in respect of the business therein referred to. Provisions relieving the pleader, &c., from liability for negligence will be void (section thirty-five). No suits are to be brought on such agreements, but on petition of either party the Court may enforce or set it aside (section thirty-six). The Bill then declares void (a) purchases by a pleader of his client's interest in future suits or in unsatisfied decrees, and (b) agreements by which the pleader stipulates for payment only in the event of success. Provision is made (section thirty-eight) for the case of the pleader's death or incapacity, and the client is empowered (section thirty-nine) to change his pleader notwithstanding such agreement.

The other novel provisions of the Bill are only two.

At the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, all Mukhtárs are restored to the privilege of appearing, pleading and acting in Criminal Courts, which they formerly enjoyed under Act XX of 1865, and Mukhtárs heretofore admitted and enrolled in Lower Bengal as Revenue Agents are empowered (section seven) to appear and act in suits in Munsifs' Courts under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 (to amend the procedure in suits between landlord and tenant).

Penalties are provided (section forty-five) for Advocates, Pleaders and Mukhtárs removed or suspended by a High Court who practise after such removal or during such suspension.

SCHEDULE.

NUMBER AND YEAR.	TITLE OF ACT.
XXI of 1856	An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.
XXIII of 1860	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal)
X of 1864	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal).
XXVIII of 1864	An Act to provide for the extension of Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal) to the provinces under the control of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.
XXIII of 1868	An Act to give validity to certain Abkári Rules in British Burma.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The law relating to the Abkári revenue in Northern India is now contained in four Acts, XXI of 1856, XXIII of 1860, X of 1864 and XXVIII of 1864. In British Burma the law is in the form of executive rules to which Act XXIII of 1868 gave a temporary validity. The primary object of this Bill is to substitute one enactment for all these Acts and Rules.

The law has been re-arranged, and the wording here and there improved; but no change has been made in its substance otherwise than by the omission of a few sections dealing with matters sufficiently provided for by the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) and the Sea Customs Act (VI of 1863).

The Bill does not extend to the Lower Provinces of Bengal; and the power of the local legislature to deal from time to time with the details of the Abkári law will thus remain unimpaired.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE.

No. 77, (Revenue) dated India Office, London, the 12th October 1869.

From—The Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

I transmit herewith for the information of your Excellency in Council copies of a correspondence which has taken place between this office and the Cotton Supply Association of Manchester regarding the measures which might be taken for improving the quality, and increasing the quantity, of the supply of cotton to this country from India.

Memorial of Cotton Supply Association, 12th March 1869.
Letter to ditto, 30th April 1869.
Letter from ditto, 4th August 1869.
Letter to ditto, 16th September 1869.

2. You will observe that the points to which the Association at present attaches particular importance are the establishment of a Department of Agriculture in each of the several Provinces of India, and the more active employment of the Collectors in matters connected with cotton cultivation. You will communicate to me your opinion on these questions, as well as on the general subject which is discussed in the correspondence.

Dated Manchester, the 12th March 1869.

To—His Grace the DUKE OF ARGYLL, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India in Council.

Memorial from JOHN CHEETHAM, ESQ., President, EDWARD ASHWORTH, ESQ., Vice-President, and ISAAC WATTS, ESQ., Secretary.

SHEWETH,—That your memorialists, notwithstanding the renewed exertions of the United States since the close of the Civil War, have still to deplore the long continued scarcity of cotton, and the consequent losses and sufferings experienced by our manufacturers and the operatives dependent upon them for employment. There appears to be little probability that the production of cotton in America will, for many years to come, be adequate to the requirements of this and other countries. Your memorialists, therefore, believe that India is the great source to which they must look for the large supplies that are so urgently needed, and the best and speediest means of obtaining them is now engaging their anxious consideration. The improvements already effected in the quality of Indian cotton, and the encouraging results of the efforts of a few zealous and intelligent men to extend the cultivation seem to justify the conclusion that with due exertion very much more may be accomplished in the growth of cotton to the mutual advantage both of India and of this country. On previous occasions your memorialists have recommended increased means of irrigation and navigation, the construction of roads, bridges, piers and docks to facilitate the transport and shipment of cotton, and also the appointment of well qualified Commissioners in certain Districts to give advice and assistance, to provide suitable seed and machinery, to promote improved methods of cultivation, and in various other ways to aid the ryots to extend the growth and improve the quality of their cotton, and they gladly bear testimony to the beneficial results of the labors of Mr. Harry Rivett-Carnac, the Commissioner last appointed. Whilst retaining an undiminished conviction of the value of these recommendations, your memorialists now desire especially to urge the adoption of the following measures as likely to be speedily effectual in securing an increased growth of cotton in India.

1. That the Collectors in the chief cotton districts should be required and authorised to make it part of their duty to promote an extended and improved cultivation of cotton in their respective collectorates, and that they be instructed not only to ascertain and report upon the best means of accomplishing the object desired, but to take such steps as they may consider best calculated to be beneficial. The successful efforts of Mr. Ashburner, Collector of Khandeish, and his co-adjutors in producing cotton of a better quality and a higher value than had ever been grown before in that district, encourage your memorialists to hope that other Collectors, not less intelligent and zealous, may be equally successful in increasing the quantity and improving the quality of the cotton grown in their several districts, and some recognition of the services rendered by those gentlemen, either by pecuniary remuneration or civil distinction, might judiciously be made by Government.

2. Your memorialists recommend that in the districts of the Punjab, Sind, Guzerat, Hinghunghat, Berar, and the South Mahratta country, together with the cotton districts in the Presidency of Madras and Bengal, Government should place under the care of the local officers a plot of land of say ten or twenty acres for the purpose of experimental cotton cultivation with exotic and selected indigenous seed, and various kinds of manure found to be successful in the Southern States of America. If this be conceded, your memorialists would appropriate the sum of £100 in each case to be expended upon such experiments in addition to the outlay by Government. In this way improved methods of cultivation, and the use of implements and machinery for economizing labour may be brought under the notice of the ryots, and be productive of great benefit.

3. Your memorialists having been informed that a model farm, on which similar experiments may be made, has been sanctioned by Government in Khandeish under the direction of Mr. Ashburner, the Collector. They respectfully request permission to place a sum of money at his disposal, to be expended in the way he may think best for promoting the object which your memorialists have in view.

4. Your memorialists have recently had their attention directed to the practicability of providing inexpensive means of irrigation, especially in Berar, together with two short Railways, one of about seven miles and the other five and a half miles, to connect the great cotton marts of Kamgaum and Oomrawuttee with the Great Indian Peninsula main line; and they beg respectfully to recommend that these be authorized as speedily as possible. They are informed that Berar especially needs these two short Railways, good macadamized roads, and a system of inexpensive irrigation works, which it is confidently anticipated would greatly tend to develop the resources of that district, and to increase the production of cotton.

5. You memorialists are assured that larger supplies of cotton might be drawn from other districts suitable to its production if better means of bringing it to market were available. With this view, your memorialists would especially recommend the completion and extension of the following lines of Railway, with such branches and macadamized roads as may be needed to give full effect to the main lines as means of communication with the cotton-producing districts:—

(1.) The completion of the Indus Valley Line by supplying "then issuing link" from Kotre to Mooltan, to connect the Punjab system of Railway with the Sind Railway and the Port of Kurrachee.

(2.) The completion of Lord Dalhousie's scheme of trunk line Railways, by continuing the Bombay and Baroda line to Delhi, with branches such as that from (a) Ahmedabad to Deesa,
(b) Ahmedabad to Veerumgaum and Wudwan, with a prospect of ultimate extension to the principal cotton ports of Guzerat and Kattywar;

(3.) The formation of a line from the port of Karwar on the Malabar Coast to Hooblee and Dharwar, with a view ultimately to afford direct Railway communication between the port of Karwar and the districts where the excellent cotton of Dharwar and the South Mahratta country is now grown.

6. Your memorialists believe that a most important reduction in the cost of bringing cotton to market might be made by improving the facilities which naturally exists in India for inland water carriage; and they would therefore recommend that each local administration in India should be invited to suggest means for giving practical effect to the principles which have been so ably laid down by Sir Arthur Cotton and other Engineers of great Indian experience, and which are so entirely in accordance with the practical results in America and elsewhere.

Entertaining a decided conviction that the measures now recommended to the attention of Government are practicable, and that their realization is of the greatest importance to the interests alike of Great Britain and India, your memorialists beg respectfully and earnestly to urge their adoption.

And your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

Dated India Office, the 30th April 1869.

From—H. MERIVALE, Esq., C. B., Under Secretary of State for India,

To—The President, Cotton Supply Association of Manchester.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of a memorial from the Cotton Supply Association, which was delivered to His Grace personally by a deputation from the Association on the 12th March last, and to communicate the following observations.

2. It is perhaps hardly known to the Association that up to the year 1857 it was computed that a sum of not less than £187,000 had been expended under the direction of the Home Government on experimental measures, having for their object the cultivation and improvement of cotton, and it may be added that the aggregate amount of salaries paid to officers whose sole duty at the present time is to superintend the carrying out of experiments in the cultivation, the introduction of improved varieties, the preparation for the market, the prevention of adulteration, and the suppression of frauds, does not fall short of £20,000 per annum, a considerable portion of which is however paid out of the funds raised under the operation of the Bombay Cotton Frauds Act No. IX of 1863.

3. His Grace desires me to call your particular attention to the measures which have been taken since the date of the letter which, by direction of Secretary Sir Charles Wood, was addressed to the Association on the 11th April 1865. That letter concluded with an assurance that "no measure which it is within the power and province of Government to adopt for ensuring so important an object as an increased supply of so essential an article of consumption of a description suitable to the English market, should be neglected."

4. The Association are aware that for some years a special Cotton Commissioner has been appointed for the Bombay Presidency, to whom, besides the general supervision of all matters connected with the cultivation of cotton and its preparation for the market, was also entrusted the charge of the Dharwar Gin Factory, an institution to which further reference will be hereafter made. In March 1866, Secretary Earl de Grey suggested to the Government of India the appointment of another Commissioner to perform similar duties in regard to Central India and the Berars, and in a Despatch, dated the 24th November, (No. 69, 1866) Viscount Cranbourne gave his sanction to the nomination of Mr. J. H. Rivett-Carnac to that post. His Grace observes that the Association bears testimony to the beneficial results of this gentleman's labors.

5. While in this country in 1865 Dr. Forbes, the Cotton Commissioner for Bombay, recommended that the services of a well-trained practical gardener should be procured for the especial purpose of ascertaining whether the cotton of Dharwar could be improved by the application of the method known as the "Hallett" system of selection of seeds. A gardener was accordingly selected and despatched to India; and in a letter dated the 14th March 1868, the Cotton Commissioner speaks in the highest terms of Mr. Shearer's services, and states that, although no decided results had yet been obtained, he had improved his time by devoting himself assiduously to the study of the cotton plant in all bearings, and especially with respect to improvement from the seed, upon which he has conducted some very interesting experiments. Dr. Forbes states that during his recent tour through the Bombay Districts, he has satisfied himself that the general failure which has attended all attempts at experimental cultivation of cotton by Collectors has resulted from the fact that "the practical part of the duty has been entrusted to or undertaken by persons who were not possessed of the qualifications which are absolutely indispensable, and without which no reasonable hope of success could be entertained." He adds—"ordinary cotton growing is a matter that may be undertaken by any one who can attend to the common usage of the country, but cotton cultivation with a view to the improvement of the plant and its produce, as also with reference to the introduction of new varieties, is a widely different affair. It is a science for which special training is absolutely essential, and without which it will be but vain and hopeless to look for success at the hands of any man." In accordance with these views, Dr. Forbes applied for three additional trained gardeners, whose services were in the first instance to be given to the districts of Guzerat, Khandeish and Sind. This request was complied with. Three skilled gardeners were selected under the authority of the Secretary of State, and sent out to Bombay, so that the Cotton Commissioner has now at his disposal four persons competent to carry to a satisfactory issue any experiments which may be entrusted to them, and employed in widely separated localities under that Presidency. It would perhaps be unwise to attempt more until the result of the measures which have been already taken shall have become known.

6. Reference has been already made to the Cotton Frauds Act of 1863, and I am directed to quote the following passage from the last report of the Inspector-in-Chief on the working of the Act for the year 1867. "It is admitted on all hands, even by its most persistent opponents, that beneficial results have followed the measure. Though fraud and adulteration have not entirely disappeared, they have been reduced to a minimum, in spite of the small list of convictions we have to show. The cotton sent to market now is infinitely cleaner and purer than it was four years ago; while as regards the improvement in its quality, we have only to turn to Khandeish for an example."

7. On the death of Mr Harrington Bulkeley, shortly after the submission of this Report, it was resolved by the Government of Bombay to unite the duties of Cotton Commissioner and Inspector-in-Chief under the Cotton Frauds Act in the same person. It was believed that this arrangement would lead to greater harmony of action between the two Departments, and, in view of the increasing importance of the duties appertaining to the Cotton Commissioner's Office, it was proposed to strengthen his hands by giving him suitable assistance for carrying on the experimental measures that have now been instituted in different parts of the country.

8. The operations of the Cotton Gin Factory at Dharwar may be briefly noticed. It would appear from the last report that about two thousand gins have been supplied to the neighbouring districts, and that four hundred more are required. Measures are in progress for increasing the efficiency of the factory, and for providing means for maintaining in good working order those gins which are located at such distances from the factory as to render it impracticable for them to be brought there for repair.

9. I am directed now to refer to the particular points which are brought forward in the memorial of the Association.

10. In the first place the Association desire that the Collectors in the chief cotton districts should be required to make it a part of their duty to promote an extended and improved cultivation of cotton in their respective collectorates. The Duke of Argyll believes that Collectors generally consider it to be a part of their duty to aid in measures having for their object the improvement of the supply of cotton; but I am directed to assure the Association that continued attention will be given to this point.

11. The memorial proceeds to recommend that, in various parts of India, spots of from ten to twenty acres should be appropriated to the experimental cultivation of cotton under the care of the local officers, and the Association offer to supply in each case a contribution of £100 in aid of the experiment. From the foregoing details, it will be seen that measures are actually in progress, and in several cases in the precise localities indicated by the Association, and, for the reasons already given, it may be doubted whether it would be desirable to extend the experiments beyond the limits laid down by the Government. In regard to the proposed contribution, the Duke of Argyll does not see any necessity for supplementing in that manner the funds which the Government are prepared to supply. If, however, the Association desire to apply a substantial amount to the prosecution of the experiments which they have in view, the Duke would venture to suggest that, instead of expending it in small sums scattered over a wide extent of country, with small hope of a satisfactory result, their end might be more certainly accomplished by employing it in the establishment of a model farm in some well selected locality, where the Association, without the aid or interference of Government might by its own agents carry out experiments in the cultivation of cotton, the selection of seeds, the use of suitable manures, and the preparation of the produce for the English market. Such an establishment might, in His Grace's opinion, tend largely to evoke a wholesome spirit of emulation on the part of the officers engaged in carrying on similar operations on behalf of the Government, and could scarcely fail to be attended by the most beneficial results both to India and to this country.

12. The Association further request permission to place in the hands of Mr. Ashburner, Collector of Khandeish, funds to be expended at his discretion in furtherance of the objects which they have in view, on the model farm recently authorized to be established in that district. The Duke of Argyll will not withhold his compliance with this proposal, provided that the Government of Bombay see no objection to it.

13. The memorial concludes by adverting to various schemes connected with irrigation, railway-transit, and inland navigation, and the whole of this subject, I am directed to inform you, is under the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council.

14. With regard to the intimation given in Mr. Watts' letters of the 6th and 23rd instant, to the effect that the Council of the Association have taken measures for sending out to Bombay a quantity of manure prepared expressly for cotton lands for distribution to the ryots, I am directed to state that, on the receipt of further particulars by this office, the Government of Bombay will be instructed to receive charge of any such manure as may be handed over to them by the agents of the Association, and to distribute it in such manner and in such quarters as may in their judgment provide the best means of testing its value for the intended purpose.

Dated Manchester, the 4th August 1869.

From—ISAAC WATTS, ESQ., Secy., Cotton Supply Association of Manchester,

To—The Under Secretary of State for India.

Your letter of the 30th April, conveying the reply of the Secretary of State for India in Council to the memorial presented by a deputation from this Association on the 12th of March last, has been placed before the Executive Committee, and I am directed to request that you will be good enough to convey their best thanks to the Duke of Argyll for the attention which he has kindly paid to the subject, and for the desire expressed to promote the object which they have in view. I am instructed, however, to remark in reply—

1. That the Association was perfectly aware of the experimental measures undertaken by the Indian Government prior to the year 1857, to improve the cultivation of cotton by the employment of certain American planters, whose efforts proved a complete failure and left the growth of cotton in India in much the same state as they found it. Those experiments it is now generally admitted were not conducted in a mode to secure success, notwithstanding the expenditure connected therewith, and which your letter estimates at the sum of £187,000. Their failure, it is submitted, ought neither to depreciate the entirely different course of proceeding recommended by the Association, nor should the expenditure incurred by them prevent the Indian Government now undertaking the very moderate outlay which the plans suggested by the Association would involve. The value of the exports of cotton from India is estimated at 25 millions sterling per annum, and the total expenditure incurred by the Government to secure the permanency of this trade, so important to the interests of India and Great Britain, consists in the salaries paid to two Commissioners and four gardeners, these composing the only staff officially engaged for that object, and even this expenditure appears to be in great measure met by a tax upon cotton itself, raised under the operation of the Bombay Cotton Frauds Act, an Act passed for a purpose is no way connected with the objects the Association have undertaken, viz., the improvement and extension of cotton cultivation in India.

2. In paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 the attention of the Association is drawn to the letter of Sir Charles Wood, of date April 11th, 1865, in which an assurance is given that "no measure which it is within the power and province of Government to adopt for ensuring so important an object as an increased supply of so essential an article of consumption of a description suitable to the English market should be neglected." The only measures with which the Association are conversant since the date of that letter are the appointment of one Cotton Commissioner, Mr. J. H. Rivett-Carnac, and one gardener. Sir Stafford Northcote did indeed promise the appointment of two other Commissioners, but the promise was never fulfilled. The appointment of Dr. Forbes was made previous to the letter referred to, but he never possessed the confidence of the Association, and his course of procedure since he entered upon the office has confirmed the objections originally entertained. When appointed, he was required "to communicate freely on the subject of his duties with the Chamber of Commerce and with all Associations and individuals interested in the subject, and to invite any suggestions which may occur or be offered to him for promoting the great object of improving the cotton of Western India and increasing its supply," but he has seldom thought it necessary to correspond with the Executive Committee, has never sought their advice, or condescended to learn their views, and for some time past has altogether ceased to hold any communication with the Association. His lengthened absence from India within two years of his appointment, and the deterioration of the cotton of Dharwar since he has been in charge of that district, have not tended to raise him in the estimation of the Association. The appointment of a well trained gardener, it was always understood, was suggested to the Government by the Marquis of Tweedale, who had corresponded with the Association upon the subject, and who gave it their support. As to the three additional gardeners which it is said Dr. Forbes recommended for appointment, the Association now hears of them for the first time.

3. In paragraphs 6 and 7, the beneficial effects of the Cotton Frauds Act of 1863 are referred to, and I am directed to say that, however successful that measure may have been, it has, as previously observed, little connection with the objects of the Association, whose decided opinion is that the duties of the Cotton Commissioner are sufficient in themselves to occupy his attention, without adding to them those of the Inspector-in-Chief under the Cotton Frauds Act, and that the connection of the two offices is likely to interfere prejudicially with the success and efficiency of both.

4. As regards paragraphs 9, 10, 11 and 12, which refer to the particular points brought forward in the memorial of the Association, I am directed to observe that, except in a few rare instances, such as those of Mr. Shaw in Dharwar and Mr. Ashburner in Khandeish, no facts have ever come before the Association to show that "the Collectors generally consider it to be a part of their duty to aid measures having for their object the improvement of the supply of cotton." The remarkable success obtained in Dharwar and Khandeish confirms the conviction that, were the Collectors in other cotton districts required to make it specially a part of their duty to promote an extended and improved cultivation of cotton in their respective collectorates, results equally satisfactory might be secured. None of "the measures actually in progress" are accomplishing the object proposed, nor would the establishment of a model firm, which the Duke of Argyll suggests, answer the purpose desired. Such a model farm could only be of local influence in one particular spot, whereas the great object to be attained by appropriating 10 or 20 acres to the experimental cultivation of cotton under the special supervision of the local officers in each district is to demonstrate to the ryots in every Collectorate that, by the adoption of plans which they could see in operation, they might increase the quantity and improve the quality of their cotton. Should it be urged that in many cases the Collectors are already too much occupied to undertake the duties it is desired to place upon them, well qualified Assistants might be appointed to conduct the necessary experiments respecting which the Collector would have to report.

5. The Association has, upon previous occasions, pressed upon the Government the establishment of a Department of Agriculture in each of the Provinces of India. They would now again urge the establishment of such a Department, to which the reports of Collectors or Cotton Commissioners would be made, which reports would afterwards be communicated by it to the public.

By this means information of great value and importance would be obtained, and the interests of the agriculturists and the manufacturer alike be benefited. The duty of the Government to inaugurate and stimulate improvements in cultivating the soil and directing industrial pursuits has been long admitted, and is at this moment in operation in various undertakings in India. It is submitted that there can be no case more important and none of equal urgency, in which this principle should be carried out, than in the improvement of the quality and increase of the quantity of cotton grown in India. It is a remarkable fact that in no other country of the world where cotton is cultivated is the quality so inferior, or the produce per acre so limited, and this is the consequence of neglect and ignorance on the part of the ryot. Wherever attempts have been judiciously made to instruct and direct the Natives, as in the case of Dharwar and Khandeish, improvements both in quality and quantity per acre have resulted. In the former this was effected by the use of exotic seed, in the latter by the introduction of the best indigenous seed, and in both cases the personal influence of the Collector was the medium by which the objection of the Natives to a change of cultivation was overcome. Now what Mr. Shaw and Mr. Ashburner realized in their respective collectorates may be obtained from the adoption of similar means by other Collectors, and therefore the Association would urge upon His Grace as more important than any other mode of action the immediate appointment of every Collector in a district where cotton is cultivated to the official duty of instructing the ryot in the improvement of the quality and how to obtain an increase per acre of the quantity of cotton he cultivates. These objects may be obtained by the introduction of better seed, of improved agricultural implements, and of "fertilisers," in the procuring of which the Association would offer its earnest efforts.

6. I am directed to inform His Grace that the present state of the cotton trade in Lancashire and other districts is an urgent argument for the immediate adoption of the measures suggested by the Association. The inadequate supply of cotton has raised the price so high, that the manufacturers find it impossible to escape from great loss in their operations, and mills are gradually closing or going upon short time, while the operatives are driven to emigrate or become a burden upon the local rates. An increased supply from the United States will, from the disorganization of labor caused by the Civil War, be a work of time, and in other cotton-cultivating countries an inadequate supply of labor limits production, whilst India has no such disadvantage to contend with; and were the measures now suggested undertaken without delay, the embarrassments and difficulties under which this part of the country is largely suffering would ere long be removed, whilst to India would be secured a permanency in the cultivation of cotton, which competition from other countries would hereafter fail to weaken.

7. In reference to paragraph 13, "adverting to various schemes connected with irrigation, railway-transit, and inland navigation, the whole of which is stated to be under the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council," I am directed to urge especially the early construction of those short railways into the cotton districts which would give readier access to markets and afford additional facilities of transport, such as two short branches to connect the great cotton marts of Kamgaum and Oomrawuttee with the Great Indian Peninsula main line, a branch from Ahmedabad to Veerumgaum and Wudwan, as well as one from Ahmedabad towards Deesa, and a line from the port of Karwar to Hooblee and Dharwar.

Dated India Office, the 16th September 1869.

To—The Secy., Cotton Supply Association, Manchester.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th ultimo, on the subject of measures for the increase of the quantity and the improvement of the quality of cotton produced in India.

With reference to the concluding paragraph of your letter, I am directed to state that active measures are in progress for the construction of the lines from the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to Kamgaum, from Ahmedabad to Veerumgaum and Wudwan, and from Hooblee to Karwar.

No. 40, dated 6th April 1870.

From—The Government of India,

To—The Secretary of State for India.

The experience of the last few years has led us to the belief that much administrative and material advantage would be obtained for our Indian possessions, if more systematic measures were taken for securing constant and intelligent efforts, on the part of this Government, for the improvement and development of the agriculture, commerce, and industrial arts of India. We are satisfied that closer attention should be given to the great products which constitute the staples of our agricultural and manufacturing industry, and of our export trade. A very important portion of our fiscal system is that concerned with the management of the revenue derived from those products, or dependent on the commercial transactions of the people, and few more serious duties devolve upon this Government than that of exercising the closest and most rigid supervision over the administration of this branch of the public income.

2. In the construction of canals and railways and other great works of improvement, the Government of India has done, or is doing, more than has perhaps ever been attempted by any Government in the world. By such works the productive powers of the land will be greatly increased, and additional facilities will be given to internal transport. A vast stimulus will thus be afforded to the material prosperity of the country, but a field of improvement of a character not less really important still lies before us.

3. Of all branches of Indian industry, agriculture, which constitutes the occupation of the great mass of the people, is by far the most important. We believe it to be susceptible of almost indefinite improvement. It is not necessary to dwell upon the obvious and vital necessity of increasing, in every practicable way, the supply of food available for the people of India. How this consideration affects all the prospects of the permanent material advancement of the country has, of late years, been painfully and repeatedly shown by the terrible famines which have taken place, and to the recurrence of which we shall ever be liable until the production of cereals is rendered more certain and the facilities of conveyance immensely developed. For many generations to come, the progress of India in wealth and in civilization must be directly dependent on her progress in agriculture. In India agricultural and commercial progress go together. Agricultural products must long continue to constitute the most important part of our exports; and the future development of Indian commerce will mainly depend on the improvement in the quantity and quality of existing agricultural staples, or on the introduction of new products which shall serve as materials for manufacture, and for use in the industrial arts.

4. The efforts of the Government of India and of English enterprise in such a direction have, doubtless, been very beneficial in their results. Thus, important progress has been made in regard to cotton. Large sums of money were spent, in former years, in attempts to improve its cultivation, but with little useful result, owing to the mistaken system under which they were made. Renewed attention has been more recently given to this subject with much better effect, and the extreme importance of doing all that is possible to improve and develop the cultivation of this great staple is fully recognized by the Government. Jute, which not long ago was hardly used, has become an article of first rate commercial interest. The partial success of our tea, coffee, and cinchona plantations shows what has been and may be done in introducing into India new and valuable products; the world derives from India nearly the whole of its supply of indigo. Other illustrations might be given to the same effect, but, speaking generally, it cannot be denied that Indian agriculture is in a primitive and backward condition, and we think that it must be admitted that the Government has not done for its improvement all that it might have done.

5. To state exactly what measures the Government ought to have taken in the past, or what course it should follow in the future, is undoubtedly not easy. It is hardly too much to say that scientific knowledge of agriculture in India has at present no existence. The common belief has been that the Natives of this country can, in respect to the processes of agriculture, derive little or no benefit from any instruction which European science can give them. Such a a belief rests, perhaps, upon observation of the obvious progress which has been made in many of the elementary requirements of agriculture, in regard to tillage, rotation of crops, and so forth. But it has often been lost sight of that this sort of knowledge is only rudimentary and empirical, and that recent experience in all parts of the civilized world shows conclusively that there is no branch of industry in which the effects produced by the intelligent application of science are more certain or more remarkable. We cannot doubt that, when the light of science has been properly brought to bear upon Indian agricultural experience, the results will be as great as they have been in Europe.

6. If the Government believes this to be true, it ought to act on that belief. There is perhaps no country in the world in which the State has so immediate and direct and interest in such questions. The Government of India is not only a Government, but the chief landlord. The Land Revenue, which yields twenty millions of our annual income, is derived from that portion of the rent which belongs to the State, and not to individual proprietors. There can be no doubt that, throughout the greater part of India, every measure which can be taken for the improvement of the land, and for increasing its productive powers, immediately enhances the value of the property of the State, and adds ultimately to the public resources without the imposition of any fresh burden on any class of the community.

The duties which in England are performed by a good landlord fall in India, in a great measure, upon the Government. In England a constant stimulus is given to the improvement of the land by the action of intelligent landlords and farmers who know the value of the application of practical and scientific knowledge. In India such stimulus can hardly be given, under present circumstances, except by the Government, and, speaking generally, it may be said that the only Indian landlord who can command the requisite knowledge and capital is the State.

7. The Government has always, if not by extensive practice, at least by its legislation, recognized the duty which devolves upon it of giving assistance to the proprietors of land, for the construction of permanent works of agricultural improvement. The system of giving advances of public money, usually called tuccavee, for these purposes, has prevailed more or less since the passing of Regulations II and XIV of 1793, up to the present time. The security is complete since the land is responsible for the repayment of the advances made. This system is identical in principle with that which has been carried out in England and Ireland, with admirable results, by means of the Land Improvement Acts. We are satisfied that this principle may receive a much wider development in India than has hitherto been given to it. No sounder or more useful principle could be acted upon by a Government which desires to make the resources of the State available for the promotion of the wealth and improvement of the people.

8. The class of works for the construction of which the assistance of the Government might properly be given to the owners and occupiers of land, would not be difficult to define. Advances of money should be usually given for that description of work only which can be designed and carried out efficiently under the direction of the local proprietors themselves. These advances should not be made for great works requiring, in their design or construction, engineering skill of a high order, or the employment of large bodies of laborers. Such works must necessarily be undertaken by the Government through the Department of Public Works. The works for which advances might properly be made would commonly fall into some one of the following classes :—

(1.)—Wells and other works for the storage, supply, or distribution of water for agricultural purposes, and the preparation of land for irrigation;

(2.)—Drainage;

(3.)—The reclaiming of land from rivers;

(4.)—The protection of land from floods;

(5.)—The reclaiming, clearing, and enclosing, of waste lands for agricultural purposes;

(6.)—The clearing of land from stones or other obstacles to cultivation.

9. It will not be difficult to devise and bring into operation a system under which advances of money might be made by the Government for works of this description, mainly through the agency of the District Officers of the Government, and with complete security against loss; and the benefits derived from such an application of capital to the permanent improvement of the land might be of almost incalculable importance. We think that there are no objects to which a portion of the loans which we propose to raise every year for reproductive works, could be more advantageously and properly devoted. The extension of Irrigation Canals, and the development of our Railway system, will necessarily stimulate agricultural industry, and the importance of facilitating to the utmost the prosecution of minor works of land improvement will, under such circumstances, be especially great. This subject has been, for some time past, under our consideration, and we hope to be shortly in a position to deal with it in a comprehensive manner.

10. Another matter in which much may undoubtedly be done by the Government, is the improvement of the breeds of horses and cattle, and of other domestic animals. The Government studs have hitherto done little in this respect for the benefit of the country at large. They have been maintained primarily for military purposes, and have been managed on a very costly system under which little advantage has been obtained for agricultural or other interests.

Measures are also urgently required for preventing and alleviating the destructive murrains which so frequently occur in this country, and which are lamentable and ruinous causes of injury to Indian agriculture.

Our attention, as Your Grace is aware, has recently been directed to the fisheries of India. This is a subject which has hitherto been little cared for, but which appears likely to prove of considerable economic importance.

11. It is unnecessary to enlarge on the measures that may be taken by the Government itself for the improvement of the stock and quality of the great staples of Indian agriculture, and for the introduction of new products. The Government must ordinarily, in respect of such matters, act chiefly by indirect means. Excepting under special circumstances, it cannot with advantage attempt to carry on any of the operations of agriculture. In regard to this, as to other branches of industry, the State may do much to foster and encourage the efforts of private individuals, but it can do comparatively little through the direct agency of its own servants. Nevertheless, the exceptions to this rule will, in this country, be important, and we believe that it may often be the duty of the Government to act as the pioneer to private enterprise. It has done this to some extent already. Thus, for example, the introduction of tea and cinchona cultivation into India has been mainly due to the Government.

The improvement of Indian cotton, by the introduction of exotic seed, has been attempted by the Government, but, hitherto, without much practical effect. It has become manifest that the results that are so much desired can only be secured by careful and prolonged experimental cultivation, and there can be little doubt that this may be more effectively conducted under Government supervision than by any other means. Similar remarks will be applicable to the improvement of other Indian fibres, for which a very large demand might be established in the markets of Europe. We have, as your Grace is aware, within the last few months, taken special measures with the object of improving and facilitating the preparation of Rhea fibre, which has such remarkable capabilities for use in textile fabrics.

The cereals of this country demand similar attention. Rice, wheat and other grains are frequently of an inferior description, and by the careful introduction and continued use of selected seed of a superior character great improvements might unquestionably be made. The same may be said of the oil seeds, the pulses, and other products.

12. In their well-known despatch of the 19th July 1854, on the subject of education in India, the Court of Directors referred with approval to proposals that had been made for teaching practical agriculture. Quoting the words of Dr. Mouat, they said that there was "no single advantage that could be afforded to the vast rural population of India that would equal the introduction of an improved system of agriculture." Unfortunately the means of obtaining agricultural instruction are no better now than they were when this despatch was written fifteen years ago. We do not disguise from ourselves the difficulty of affording to Indian landlords and cultivators the means of obtaining scientific and practical knowledge for the improvement of agriculture. But the difficulty of the work ought not to discourage the Government from doing everything in its power to develop this important branch of education.

13. In Europe, progress in the direction to which we have referred has been mainly based on private effort, and on the application of the intelligence of the agricultural classes themselves to the ends in view. In almost all civilized countries, however, in which, unlike England, the form of Government is centralized, the efforts of the people are powerfully aided by the co-operation of a State Department of Agriculture, which works in part directly through its own agency, and in part through agricultural and other societies. Even in India such societies have been extremely useful, and they might properly receive more encouragement from the Government than has hitherto been given to them. But we cannot expect to obtain in this way any great results. The work that is performed by the great Agricultural Societies of Europe must be performed in India by the Government, or not at all.

We are thus brought to the conclusion that the formation of a separate Department of the Government for the care of these great interests ought no longer to be delayed.

14. Such a Department would take cognizance of all matters affecting the practical improvement and development of the agricultural resources of the country.

The general scope of this part of its operations has been already sufficiently indicated. Its functions, however, would not be confined to the active direction of such measures.

The periodical collection and publication of agricultural statistics is another duty which properly devolves upon the Government, but to which little attention has hitherto been paid. The knowledge derived from such statistics, which give the results of the experience of the past, must form one of the main foundations of measures of improvement. Such records will, at the same time, be of the greatest practical value to the agricultural and trading communities, by giving to them trustworthy information regarding the actual results of each year's harvests, and by affording them solid grounds for anticipating the resources and the wants of the future. We are satisfied that it is possible to obtain, with little difficulty, a mass of information which would possess great interest and value. The machinery for collecting such data, year by year, in a regular and systematic form, already exists in many parts of India, and could be put into operation for these purposes with little or no additional expense. The accuracy and value of the returns would continue to increase with each year's experience.

15. The administration of the land revenue, and the matters naturally associated with it, the settlements, the surveys, and generally the laws and customs which directly affect agricultural industry, would fall within the cognizance of the Department which we propose to constitute.

16. The administration of the forests would also properly belong to a Department of Agriculture. The forests have hitherto been placed under our Public Works Department, because, in the absence of any special branch of the administration to supervise the improvement and development of the vegetable productions of the country, that Department seemed best fitted to deal with the requirements of the forests. The formation of a special Agricultural Department would provide the most suitable means of controlling the Forest Administration.

17. Similar reasons to those which have led us to propose the formation of a separate Department of Agriculture, satisfy us that a special organization is also necessary for protecting the interests of commerce and the industrial arts. As we have already observed, commerce and agriculture are in India so closely connected, that it is impossible to consider one without considering the other also. We are convinced that if there had been a Department, the special business of which was to make itself thoroughly acquainted with all facts of importance regarding the commercial transactions of India, to observe intelligently the operations of external and internal trade, and to watch the effect produced upon the commerce of the country by our fiscal system, our legislation would have been very different from what it has actually been. If such a Department had existed, we doubt whether the export duties which we now levy on some of the main staples of agricultural produce, and even on articles of Indian manufacture, could have been imposed or maintained. If such a Department had existed, it could never have tolerated the continuance of duties such as those which are still levied on sugar exported from the North-Western Provinces across the Inland Customs line. These duties are transit duties of the worst description, levied on one of the most important articles of the agricultural produce of Northern India.

18. Such a Department would not only deal with such questions of commercial taxation, but with all branches of the statistics of trade, both external and internal; the development of growing branches of manufacturing industry; the law of patents; the mineral resources of the country; questions relating to the census and to emigration; and all other kindred subjects connected with the development of the material resources of India.

19. The great and constantly growing necessity for giving increased attention to the mineral resources of British India has become more and more apparent with the rapid extension of our railway system, of other great public works, and of steam navigation. The importance of providing cheap fuel in all parts of the country daily becomes more obvious. The search for coal, and stimulating its abundant and economical production, are matters which have assumed an altogether different character within the last few years, and they will continue to demand the earnest attention of our Government.

The development of the manufacture of iron and steel, according to European methods, has for some years been an object of interest, and, as your Grace is aware, it is now again coming more prominently forward, in connexion with the probability that the products of such a manufacture might be applied to the construction of rails and other materials for railway purposes and machinery.

The production of petroleum, which is already carried on in several parts of India on a limited scale, suggests a possible addition to our mineral wealth, which may lead to most important results, especially in those districts where coal is not found and wood fuel is scarce and costly.

20. Nor is it only to the working of such products that our attention is likely to be required. The time may not be distant when the development of industrial arts and manufactures will proceed with a vigour that has hitherto been impossible. Evidence of this has already been given in the cotton and jute spinning and weaving mills that have sprung up and attained a healthy existence in several of our larger towns. The spread of a practical knowledge of mechanical engineering is beginning to render the use of machinery possible where only a few years ago it would have been out of the question. Encouragement given by the Government to the growth of industries which are suitable to the people and to the natural resources of the country, may be productive of most valuable results, not only to India, but to other countries in which a demand for its products exists or may arise.

The establishment of a suitable system of industrial education would form a proper duty for a Department of Commerce to undertake. The preparation of popular treatises in the languages of the country on industrial subjects, and their dissemination among the artizan classes, might probably have a most useful effect.

21. It is hardly necessary, however, to dwell at length on the duties which would devolve on a Department of Commerce. They are sufficiently obvious, although they have hitherto not received in India the attention which their importance fairly demands. The experience of the English Board of Trade could probably at once supply much information necessary for placing the operations of an Indian Commercial Department on a satisfactory footing.

22. It is clear to us that the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce, so far as their control by the Government of India is concerned, should be placed under a common head; and the time may come in which it will be found desirable to constitute for this purpose an entirely separate Department with a separate Secretariat. For the present, however, this is not essential, and we think that a more economical arrangement may be adopted which would enable us to meet the immediate requirements of the case. This arrangement would involve the necessity of making certain modifications in the existing organization of the Home and Financial Departments.

23. In considering what these modifications should be, it becomes clear that no satisfactory system now exists for the administration of several important branches of our revenue, closely connected with the development of the agriculture and external and internal trade of the country. Thus, for example, the management of the opium revenue has not been conducted on uniform principles, and it is to be feared that one of the most important sources of the public income may thus have been jeopardized. At the present time totally different systems are followed in Bengal, in Bombay, in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and elsewhere, for the collection of the opium revenue, all of which systems can hardly be right.

The management of the Salt Department has not been more satisfactory. Thus, we have established in Northern India a system under which the people obtain, with a maximum of vexation and expense, an insufficient supply of salt, and pay to the State a minimum of revenue.

We have already referred to some unsatisfactory points in the character of our Customs Tariff and of our commercial legislation.

We are of opinion that the administration of the Opium, Salt, and Inland Customs Departments, and perhaps, hereafter, of some of the other sources of income which are technically called "Separate Revenue," would fall naturally and properly within the province of the new office which we propose to constitute.

24. Until the year 1863, the management of the Customs, Salt, Opium, Stamps, and Excise was entrusted to the Home Department, but under a Resolution of the Government of India, dated the 30th October of that year, the management was transferred to the Financial Department. This was done in accordance with the recommendation of Sir Charles Trevelyan, and with the approval of the Secretary of State. Although the Secretary of State was apparently of opinion that the administration of the land revenue should also be included in the transfer, it was thought that so many judicial and technical considerations were connected with that branch of the revenue, that it was desirable that it should still be conducted under the primary responsibility of the Home Department, which is also charged with the judicial administration.

By a Resolution in the Foreign Department, dated 16th September 1864, No. 1229, the separate and miscellaneous revenue business connected with the Non-Regulation Provinces was transferred to the Financial Department.

The business connected with the Income Tax and other assessed taxes has been administered in the Financial Department since 1860.

By a Resolution of the 24th April 1867, the Post Office was transferred from the Home to the Financial Department.

Thus it has come about that the entire administration of the branches of the revenue that have been named above has been entrusted to the Financial Department.

25. It is in the branches of the Separate Revenue that an intelligent and active administration by the Imperial Government might probably lead to great improvements in the income of the State. It is only the Central Government that can readily obtain a knowledge of the various systems under which the revenue is raised in the different provinces of the Empire, and can apply the experience of one province to the improvement of the systems obtaining in others.

In the Salt, Opium, and Excise Departments the system differs under almost every Local Government and Administration, and without a complete knowledge of the various systems, and careful supervision of their working, the central administration cannot be efficient.

The means of obtaining and applying such knowledge and such supervision do not at present exist in the Financial Department. There is no branch of that Department specially and expressly charged with the duty of superintending the administration of these sources of revenue, and mere departments of account, such as those which actually exist, have no sufficient means of managing or of supervising the proceedings of executive departments of the Government.

On the whole, it may be said that the administration of these branches of revenue by the Imperial Government has been rather of a passive than an active nature, and that interference has been usually confined to matters expressly referred by the Local Governments for orders.

26. The Salt Department in Northern India affords a good illustration of the difficulties under which the administration of these branches of revenue is now conducted. The local manufacture of salt in Oudh and in the North-Western Provinces, under a system of excise, has, as your Grace is aware, been lately sanctioned. The Government of India has also concluded a Treaty with the Jeypore and Jodhpore States, under which the whole management of the manufacture and export of salt from the Sambhur Lake, the chief salt source of Rajpootana, will be placed under the control of the British Government. The operations which we are undertaking are of a totally different kind to any which have hitherto been attempted, and we trust that they may ultimately lead, if successful, to a large increase in the supply of salt, and to a great reduction in its price. Success or failure will depend entirely on the intelligence with which they are carried out. The duties to be performed are almost solely of an executive character, and it is hardly to be expected that they should receive in the Financial Department that sort of supervision which they require.

27. We propose to constitute a Department of Agriculture and Commerce as a separate branch of the Home Department, and to place it under the supervision of a specially qualified officer, to be called Director General of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce. We would give to this Officer a salary of Rs. 3,500 per mensem. He would hold a position in the Home Department analogous to that held in the Public Works Department by the Inspector General of Irrigation. To this branch of the Home Department would be transferred all that portion of the business of the Home, Financial, and other Departments which is connected with the subjects which have now been indicated. The functions of the Director General of the new Department would embrace all matters connected with the administration of the Land Revenue, Salt, and Opium, with the development of all branches of the material resources of the country, and with statistics of every description.

28. The formation of a new branch of the Home Department in the manner that has been proposed would enable us to carry out other administrative reforms. The work of the Home Department has for many years gone on constantly and steadily increasing. In 1867 it was more than double what it had been ten years before, and its amount was then found to be so excessive that it became necessary to transfer a considerable portion of the business to the Financial, Foreign, and Military Departments. The relief thus given to the Home Office was, however, only temporary. Although during the past year it has been relieved of the business connected with the Legislative Department, the work has again risen to the level of 1867, and there can be little or no doubt that in the current year it will be greater than ever. The work is already so excessively heavy that it is with difficulty the existing establishments of the Secretariat can perform it. Efforts have been made to reduce, as far as possible, all routine and unnecessary work, but the real cause of the yearly increase of business is the growing wealth and civilization of the country and the constant improvement of the Administration.

The creation of a new branch of the Department under a separate officer in the manner that has been proposed would give to the Home Office the relief which has already become very necessary, and which cannot possibly be much longer postponed. The Director General of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce would virtually be a Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, and he would relieve the Secretary in the Home Department of a large amount of work.

We should also be thus enabled to carry out another measure, the necessity for which has long been felt. A considerable part of the business connected with the internal administration of the Punjab, of Oudh, and of the Central and other Non-Regulation Provinces is still conducted in the Foreign Department. This arrangement was originally one of evident propriety and necessity, but the circumstances of the more important of the so-called Non-Regulation Provinces are now entirely different from what they were some years ago. Both the substantive law and the laws of procedure which are there in force are now, for the most part, identical with those of the older provinces, and it is inconvenient and anomalous that the Foreign Department should have to deal with matters of a precisely similar character to those which come before the Home Department from other parts of India. This portion of the business of the Foreign Department, which has no connection with any Foreign or Political affairs, would have been long ago transferred to the Home Department, had not the work of the latter Department been so extremely onerous that it seemed undesirable to throw a fresh burden on its already too heavily taxed establishments. The relief given to the Home Office by the formation of the proposed new office would enable us to make this transfer, and to confine the Foreign Office to its own proper duties.

The supervision of the Home Department and of the new duties connected with Agriculture and Commerce would be divided between the two Civil Members of the Government.

29. If these measures were carried out, a portion of the establishments now attached to the Foreign Department would be transferred to the new branch of the Home Department.

We cannot now assert that the proposed changes will not lead eventually to some further expenditure; but the only additional charge of importance which it would be necessary immediately to incur would be that on account of the salary attached to the new appointment of Director General of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce. This we have proposed to fix at the rate of Rs. 3,500 per mensem. We are satisfied, after very careful consideration, that it is not possible, under present circumstances, to obtain the services of a thoroughly competent officer for the post at a smaller salary than this, but it might be understood that the amount would be open to revision hereafter.

30. The foregoing observations refer exclusively to the organization of a Department of Agriculture and Commerce under the Government of India. As to the subsidiary arrangements which would be necessary for the extension of its operations to the various Provinces of India under the Local Governments, it would be premature to attempt to enter into any detailed discussion. We feel little doubt that by undertaking a careful revision of all the local establishments which would come under the control of the new Department, we should be able to meet the necessary charges on this account, without addition to the expenditure incurred at the present time.

We need hardly assure your Grace that, in every part of the new arrangements, we should exercise a strict and vigilant economy; and, whatever might be the cost of the new establishments which were entertained, we are satisfied that the measures which we desire to take would be highly beneficial to the country, and that we might reasonably anticipate that they would ultimately lead to an important increase of the public income. It is hardly necessary to say that, if we were not firmly convinced that this is true, we should not have thought it right, in the present state of the finances, to bring forward these propositions.

31. The proposal to create a special Department of Agriculture and Commerce has, as your Grace well knows, been, of late years, not unfrequently discussed in Parliament and elsewhere by persons interested in the welfare of this country. The latest representations on the subject which have reached us were contained in the memorial of the Manchester Cotton Supply Association, which was forwarded to us with your Grace's Revenue Despatch No. 77 of the 12th October 1869, and which reached us after the present despatch had been drafted. The conclusions that have now been stated will explain to your Grace that, after prolonged and careful consideration, we thoroughly assent to the necessity of thus strengthening the Administration. We trust that the specific proposals which have been made will receive your Grace's approval.

No. 61, (Revenue), dated India Office, London, the 22nd September 1870.

From—The Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

I have had under my consideration in Council the despatch from your Excellency in Council in the Public Department, dated the 6th April last

(No. 40), in which you propose for my acceptance a plan for the establishment of a distinct branch of the Secretariat, to which shall be confided the supervision of all measures having for their object the improvement and development of the agriculture, commerce, and industrial arts of India.

2. Before expressing any opinion as to the necessity of appointing an additional department of the Secretariat for these purposes, I would remark on the plan under which the revenue, agricultural, and commercial affairs of Government have hitherto been conducted. The several Revenue Boards of Bengal, Madras, and the North-West Provinces, and the Revenue Commissioners in Bombay, have been specially charged with these very duties, and although commercial interests have possibly not met with the support which those connected with commerce demand, the Government of India and the subordinate Governments have been always forward in the promotion of schemes for the improvement of agriculture and the development of the resources of the Empire.

3. The plan which you propose to me involves little more than a return to the system formerly prevailing under the Government of India, when the supervision of all matters connected with revenue, agriculture, and commerce, from whatever province they might emanate, was concentrated in the office of the Secretary for the Revenue Department.

4. The relations in which the Government stands to the owners and occupiers of land in India is altogether peculiar, and, however that relation may be described, it is certain that, with the exception of the permanently-settled Provinces of Bengal, the Government has a direct and immediate interest in the improvement of agriculture which is possessed by no Government in Europe.

5. The Government of India has never held the doctrine that agricultural improvement is a matter to be left entirely to private enterprise and private interests. It has concerned itself, at great expense, and with marked success, in the improvement of existing methods of cultivation, and particularly in the introduction of new products. Among the branches of industry to which the attention of the Government has been directed, those mentioned in the margin may be particularly enumerated.

Cotton.	Oil-seeds.
Tea.	Jute, rheea and other fibres.
Coffee.	Iron.
Sugar.	Coal.
Spices.	Teak and other forest products.
Linseed.	Agricultural exhibitions.
Cinchona.	Silk.
Saltpetre.
Soda.

6. The reasons for including the land revenue in the same Department with agriculture appear to be conclusive. The application of measures for the improvement of agriculture must in the last resort be mainly left to the Collectors of Districts, and there is no other agency spread over all India which is capable of attending to the matter. The development of the agricultural resources of the districts committed to their charge has already been regarded as one of their primary duties, and numerous instances might be quoted to show that it has not been neglected.

7. The Forest Department, now under the Public Works Secretary, would, of course, form part of the proposed branch of the administration, as also all measures for the development of the mineral resources of India, and of the fisheries, to which considerable attention has recently been paid.

8. I am, indeed, generally of opinion that the subjects mentioned in the early portion of your Excellency's despatch will fall naturally within the purview of the Department proposed to be formed. Some few, however, such as the "law of patents," and "questions relating to the census and to emigration," referred to in your 18th paragraph, seem to me to have no direct or immediate connexion with the matters forming the general business of the Department, and had better probably remain with those Departments to which they are now attached.

9. With regard to the Miscellaneous or Separate Revenues,* I shall have some remarks to make in a later portion of this despatch, but I may here state my general views on each particular item.

Opium.	Abkaree.
Salt.	Stamps.
Customs.	Income Tax.

10. Of Opium, it may be said that it is not only a product of the soil, and, as such, capable of improvement in its mode of cultivation, but it is also to a large extent, manufactured as an article of commerce under the direct agency of the officers of Government. Opium, therefore, would seem to fall naturally under the cognizance of a Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

11. Much the same may be said of Salt. The manufacture of that article on Government account has ceased in the Bengal Provinces, but active measures are now in progress for carrying on the manufacture in the North-West, particularly on the Sambhur Lake, the saline resources of which have been recently ceded to us, under treaty, by the Rajahs of Jeypore and Jodhpore. Much attention is paid to the production of salt in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, under excise regulations, by private agency. The salt mines in the Punjab are worked on Government account. The supply of salt in the Madras Presidency is still under the control of Government. In view of these facts, I am of opinion that the supervision of the salt revenue of India should properly be committed to the same Department.

12. I am more disposed to hesitate in regard to the transfer to that Department of the Customs revenue of India, which would, however, seem properly to attach itself to its commercial branch. It may seem that the regulation of the trade of India, so far as the Government is concerned, has little to do with the agricultural branch of the Department. But it must be remembered that the trade of India is dependent on its exports, and that the exports must in the present and probably long-future state of things in that country be provided from its agricultural products. It is, therefore, quite possible that one Department of the Government might be stimulating the production of a particular article, and incurring considerable expense thereon, while another Department, in the supposed interest of the revenue, might be supporting a fiscal policy, the direct tendency of which would be to repress the trade encouraged by Government in another Department. It may also be observed that the opium revenue, whether from the produce of Malwa or the Bengal Agencies, is merely an export duty, levied in an irregular form, on the opium shipped to China and the Straits from Calcutta and Bombay; and that the salt revenue of Bengal is almost entirely due to the duty levied on the import of the article into Calcutta, while in the North-West the revenue is mainly dependent on the Customs duty levied on the import of the salt across the land frontier line. On a consideration of all these circumstances, I am disposed to think that the Customs revenue should be placed under the control of the Department.

13. In regard to the minor branches of the Miscellaneous Revenue (Abkarree, Stamps, and Income Tax), they involve few administrative considerations, and require little more than the due collection of amounts fixed by the law. Their supervision might, as it seems to me, be left either with the Finance Department, where it now lies, or be transferred to the proposed Department, as considerations of convenience might suggest.

14. The projected consolidation into one Department of the various kindred matters referred to in the preceding paragraphs, has necessarily led Your Excellency to a consideration of the manner in which the several subjects are now distributed among the different branches of your Secretariat. It has thus been prominently brought to your notice that, while matters relating to the administration of the Land Revenue in Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, as well as references on the same subject from the Governments of Madras and Bombay, have been dealt with in the Home Secretariat, all questions involving similar principles which may arise in the Central Provinces, the Punjab, Oudh or the Berar Districts are referred to you through the Foreign Secretary. The Miscellaneous Revenues are administered by the Financial Department, while the superintendence of the Forests and Fisheries is committed to the Public Works Department. Thus the work which is done, as well as that which is left undone, and which, under a logical or scientific arrangement, would form the business of one homogeneous department, is scattered over four branches of the Secretariat, each of which has its own proper work to perform, and probably regards these matters as extraneous and intrusive, and deals with them accordingly in a manner more or less perfunctory.

15. I am accordingly prepared to express my concurrence with the views expressed by your Lordship in Council, so far as regards the formation of a special Department, to be charged with the duties mentioned in your despatch, but I am unable to give more than a provisional sanction to the arrangement in the shape in which it is presented to me.

16. It is obvious from the papers before me that your Lordship's original intention was to propose the establishment of "an additional Secretariat to the Government of India," and that this scheme has, with the view of conciliating the opposition of the dissentient Members of your Council, been reduced to the more moderate dimensions of recommending the appointment of a Director General of Agriculture and Commerce under the Home Secretary, whose functions are to "embrace all matters connected with the administration of the Land Revenue, Salt, and Opium, with the development of all branches of the material resources of the country, and with statistics of every description."

17. It appears to me to be hardly possible to place an officer charged with these important duties in even nominal dependence on a Secretary whose general work would be of an altogether different character. It will, I consider, be necessary in the first instance to make a much more complete inquiry into the present distribution of work among the several branches of the Secretariat than has yet been attempted, with the view of ascertaining precisely the amount of relief that will be afforded by the withdrawal of the work which will be transferred to the proposed Department, the extent of the work still remaining to each office, and how far they will be able to contribute, out of their existing establishments, towards the formation of the working staff of the new office.

18. You will of course endeavour to keep the cost of the remodelled Secretariat within moderate limits; and it appears to me that some reduction of work will probably be found practicable, without detriment to the public service, in the discontinuance of returns, reports and references, which are now in many instances needlessly required from the subordinate Governments and Administrations. It should be remembered that the chief revenue work of the Empire is conducted by the Local Government, by whom all measures of improvement must chiefly be carried out. These Governments, from their constitution and experience of the districts which they administer, are fully competent for the duties required of them, and can only be embarrassed by a too minute interference with their proceedings. It seems to me essential that the proposed office should be founded on the understanding that, at least so far as the Governments of Madras and Bombay and the Lieutenant Governors are concerned, its duties will be most efficiently performed by confining them to a general supervision of the principles of revenue administration, and by scrupulously avoiding all interference with details and with the ordinary powers of the local authorities. Special care must be taken that the concentration of the work under one head does not lead to the creation of business.

19. The head of the proposed Department will, I presume, require one, if not two skilled Assistants, selected for special competency; but I should hope that the general staff of the office might be altogether provided from the clerks who might be transferred from other branches of the Secretariat, which will then find themselves relieved from an appreciable portion of their present work. You will furnish me with a full statement of the proposed establishment of the new office, showing its cost, together with the savings which may be effected in other Departments, and also carefully prepared information as to the duties which will remain to be performed by those Departments; but I desire that no action may be taken in the matter until my formal sanction shall have been received.

20. The proposed Department, if established, should be designated the "Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce."

21. It appears to me that, in devising and commencing measures of agricultural improvement, much advantage might be gained by gradually extending the scope of the duties and the sphere of the operations of the Cotton Commissioner in the Central Provinces and the Berars. The reports of that Officer show that he has not limited his care to the particular duties for which he was appointed, and which he has discharged with acknowledged success, but that he has also bestowed much attention on Indian agriculture generally.

22. In inaugurating the Department, to which will be committed the charge of the general supervision of all the great branches of revenue, it appears to me that great care must be taken in clearly defining its relations with the Finance Department, which depends on those sources for its means of action.

23. With regard to the Land Revenue, on which the Finance Minister cannot operate for Budget purposes, its administration may be left without other control than that of the Supreme Government. In respect, however, to the miscellaneous branches, particularly Salt, Opium, and Customs, it would appear necessary that some means should be devised to obviate any antagonism which might possibly arise between the views of the Financial Minister, proposing to legislate in the interest of the revenue, and the views of a Department specially charged with the support of the interests of commerce and agriculture. From the remark in paragraph 17 of your despatch, that "if such a Department had existed, it could never have tolerated the continuance of duties such as those which are still levied on sugar exported from the North-West Provinces across the Inland Customs line," it is clearly your Excellency's intention that such a Department should possess a potential voice in matters of commercial legislation. Such a course might cause embarrassment to the Minister charged with the control of the finances, and it seems to me important that means should be taken to guard against it.

24. The distribution of business among the Members of Council rests of course with the Governor General for the time being. It would seem to be scarcely possible to place in the hands of the Financial Member, possessing, it may be, no Indian experience, the supervision also of the Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce, but it is open to remark that such an arrangement, if found practicable, would effectually remove all danger of antagonism.

25. Under existing rules, all propositions for expenditure, in whatever Department they may arise, are subjected to the scrutiny of the Financial Department before they are submitted for sanction. In the same manner, it appears to me, while the ordinary administration of the miscellaneous branches of revenue might be left to the supervision of the proposed Department, it might be laid down as a rule that all suggestions for changes directly affecting their financial results, such as alterations in the rates of Customs duties, in the duties on Salt, in the rates of Malwa Opium Pass Duty, in the prices to be paid for Bengal Opium, should, in the first instance, be submitted to the Financial Department, and be brought before the Council by the Member having charge of that Department. Such a course of proceeding would, as it seems to me, reduce to the lowest point, even if it did not altogether remove, all risk of inconvenient antagonism.

26. Having said thus much, I shall only add that I attach much interest to the consolidation into one Department of all matters affecting Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce, on the basis, though not in the precise form, which is suggested by your Excellency in Council, and that I shall anxiously await your reply.

PROPOSALS RELATIVE TO THE LOCATION OF THE CARWAR RAILWAY.

No. 100 R, dated 17th January, 1870.

Extract from a letter from Major E. C. S. WILLIAMS, R. E., Deputy Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. DEPT., to the Secretary to the Government of Bombay, P. W. Dept., Railway Branch.

Arrange at once for completion of survey for Railway from Carwar to Hooblee or other suitable place to be carried out under Bombay Government. Works to be suited to a narrow gauge.

This arranged in communication with Governor of Bombay.

Referring to my telegram as per margin of the 3rd instant, and to your letter No. 2173, dated the 18th November 1869, and Secretary of State's despatch to the Government of Bombay, No. 47 of the 4th idem, I am directed to state that, under the present circumstances of the case, the Government of India considers it best that the Government of Bombay should at once order the commencement of the surveys it thinks necessary to complete the information which is required to admit of a final conclusion being come to on the location of the line of Railway from Carwar towards Hooblee.

* * * * * *

4. I am to add that the Government of India has very little doubt that this line should be on a narrow gauge, and the survey should, therefore, contemplate such a line, and be suited to the narrower formation which would in that case be sufficient, and the sharper curves which with the use of bogie trucks may be adopted. The Government of India would further be disposed to regard a ruling gradient of 1 in 40 as quite sufficiently good for locomotive power, and the question of adopting steep inclines with fixed engines at the Ghâts should be carefully considered as suggested by Colonel Trevor. A very large traffic can certainly be worked in this way without difficulty. It is supposed that the heavy traffic will chiefly be down the incline, so that the objection to their being somewhat steep is much lessened.

5. The Government of India considers, on the information now before it, that the system of Railways in the southern portions of the Deccan, extending even to Bangalore, should all be on a narrow gauge; and having in view the eventual development of such a system of lines, it seems desirable to locate the Ghât section in the way likely to be most suitable and convenient for the whole system rather than for any mere communication to Hooblee, or any other specific locality. The Engineers should therefore generally consider, in connexion with the present enquiry, what might probably be the direction of such lines in the vicinity of the junction at Hooblee or elsewhere.

6. It should be borne in mind that the first essential in the preparation of this project is that it shall be shown to be financially successful. If the goods likely to be carried at the rates that could properly be charged are not likely to cover the necessary outlay and interest on capital in a reasonable time, the Government of India could not assent to the prosecution of the work at present. There can be little doubt that a far better prospect of financial success will be obtained by a narrow gauge line than a broad one in this case. Under any circumstances, however, the works both on the Ghât and on the lines in the Deccan leading to it will be heavy, and the cost of a narrow gauge line will probably be much less than that of a broad gauge: Provided the system of narrow gauge lines is extended, as the Government of India has no doubt it should be, into the cotton-producing districts, for which Carwar is to be the outlet, the question of break of gauge will not in practice arise as regards the essential traffic to be dealt with.

7. On the whole, the Government of India is disposed to assent to the views indicatad in paras. 17 and 35 of Colonel Trevor's Report on the subject of the line best calculated to serve the interests of the cotton trade, and on the question of hauling the traffic over the Canara Ghâts by means of fixed engines; and to regard with favour Major Goodfellow's proposal for carrying the line by the south, instead of the north bank of the Gungavelly River, the requirements of the Hooblee and Dharwar being met by a transverse line of Railway to the north, which might be eventually extended to Belgaum, Kolapoor and Sattara, so as to join the Great Indian Peninsula Railway at some suitable point east of Poona. The line from Bunkapoor towards Guduk might be made to serve for a junction with Bellary, and a line to the south from Bunkapoor could connect the Carwar Line with Mysore.

8. Colonel Trevor's conclusions in para. 41 of his Report that the line from Sholapoor to Bunkapoor would be a more remunerative undertaking for Government, and more advantageous to the general public, but would not be as beneficial to the cotton interest as a Railway from the cotton districts to Carwar, do not seem to be based on a sufficiently large view of the question. No doubt if the only question were a single line to join Hooblee or Bunkapoor with the sea on one side, and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway at Sholapoor on the other, the conclusion of Colonel Trevor that the latter is preferable in view of the general convenience of the community, irrespective of the cotton trade, may be sustained. But it does not seem right to the Government of India to deal with the question in this partial manner, and the future extension of lines in connexion with the approach to the harbour of Carwar is an essential consideration.

9. Having overcome the expected difficulties of the Ghât, it is manifest that a new highway for the export by sea of all produce from the centre of the Indian Peninsula is given, and it is in this light that the new line of Railway should be chiefly viewed, and not as mere local convenience.

10. In conclusion, I am directed to communicate for information copy of a memorandum, in which are embodied the general views of the Government of India on the subject of the character of the new lines of Railway to be carried out by the State.

No. 1586, dated 5th December, 1870.

To—The Offg. Secretary to the Government of India, P. W. DEPT.

With reference to your No. 100 of the 17th January last, I am directed to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the result of last season's work on the location of the Carwar Railway, and of the conclusions which have been arrived at therefrom by this Government. The operations of the survey parties were principally confined to the endeavour to obtain a better line than Mr. Buchanan's by the Arbyle Ghât route, and to obtain a new line by the Wuddy Ghât, as suggested in para. 7 of letter from the Government of India under reply.

2. Mr. Shaw also examined the Kyga Ghât, and country below the Barbully ; but, finding the country above and below the former would require heavier works than by the Arbyle route, that in the latter there would be a very difficult ascent to make, and that in both cases the line would run into Carwar in a most inconvenient manner, did not consider it worthwhile to prosecute the surveys of these passes. In this conclusion this Government concur.

3. On the Arbyle Line the trace below the Ghât has been much improved. The principal point to ascertain, however, was the respective merits of the Arbyle and Wuddy Ghâts, and the following data have been obtained, from which a comparison can be made :—

5. The principal points that were urged in favor of the Wuddy over the Arbyle were as follows:—

1st.—That it would probably prove more healthy.

2nd.—That an easier and cheaper line would be obtained.

3rd.—That it would be preferable for the cotton trade to take the line to Guduk viâ Sirci and Bunkapoor, than viâ Yellapoor and Hooblee.

6. With regard to the 1st point, Mr. Shaw reports that—

"At the conclusion of the Wuddy Ghât survey on the 12th June, out of a survey party of 7 Europeans and 3 Natives, 6 Europeans and 2 Natives were sick, and the coolies also suffered severely."

7. With regard to the 2nd point, actual survey has shown that an easier and cheaper line is obtainable by the Arbyle Line, which also avoids an expensive crossing over the Gungawully River, and has the advantage of a made road in close proximity the whole way.

8 With regard to the 3rd point, the Government of India having declared that the line to Carwar down the Ghât was to be regarded not as a local convenience, but as an outlet to a new seaport of the products of the centre of the Indian Peninsula, and having also stated that lines are to branch off from it to the north to Belgaum, Kolapoor, &c., to the south to Bangalore, and to the coast to Bellary, it is obviously desirable that a large centre of trade like Hooblee should be selected as the converging point of these several lines, instead of a small village like Bunkapoor. A line from Bunkapoor to Guduk would run for half its length through Native States, while a line from Hooblee to that town would pass exclusively through British territory; and it does not appear that the former, as regards the cotton traffic, would have any advantage over the latter.

9. The above points having been taken into consideration, this Government have finally determined in favor of the Arbyle Ghât route, and Mr. Shaw has been directed to complete the survey from Carwar to Guduk, laying out the line between Yellapoor and Hooblee, with a view to a branch to Bunkapoor.

10. The result of the changes on the Arbyle Ghât route may be summed up as follows:—

1st.—The length of the Railway has been increased from 55½ to 61¼ miles.

2nd—The ruling gradient on the Ghât is now 1 in 30, instead of 1 in 17.

3rd.—The ruling gradient on the remainder of the line has been lowered from 1 in 60 to 1 in 85.

4th.—The curves have been sharpened from a minimum radius of 12 to 4½ chains.

5th.—The length of the tunnelling has been reduced from 3,019 to 398 lineal yards.

6th.—The average depth of earth-work is now 9, instead of 10½ feet.

7th.—The cost of carrying out the work is reduced by about 10 per cent.

11. The mileage cost of a 3 feet 6 inch gauge Railway, with curves of minimum radius of 4½ chains, as far as it can now be arrived at, will probably be £10,000. It is probable that this average may be still further reduced by a reduction of the gauge to 2 feet 9 inches, by reducing the curves to a minimum of 3 chains, and by the extensions proposed over the easier country above the Ghâts.

12. In para. 25 of Colonel Trevor's printed Report, the net profits are calculated at Rs. 6,000 per mile, without taking into account the indirect profits alluded to in his para. 26. It is therefore considered that the financial prospects of the line are sufficiently encouraging to render the active prosecution and completion of the survey both advisable and important.

No. 68 R, dated 13th January, 1871.

From—MAJOR E. C. S. WILLIAMS, R. E., Depy. Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. DEPT.,

To—The Secy. to the Govt. of Bombay, P. W. Dept., Railway Branch.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1586, dated the 5th December last, summarising the results of the last season's surveys of the alternative routes for the Railway from Carwar to the Deccan near Dharwar, and intimating that the Government of Bombay prefer the Arbyle Ghât route, and have issued instructions for the completion of the survey from Carwar to Guduk, the line between Yellapoor and Hooblee being laid out with a view to a branch to Bunkapoor.

2. The previous Reports submitted to the Government of India have little room for doubt that Hooblee with its 50,000 inhabitants, probably the most populous town in the Deccan south of Poona, and the centre of a large and valuable trade, should be on any line of Railway constructed in this District. Dharwar with its 30,000 inhabitants also has strong, though secondary, claims. Bunkapoor is a large village, but a place of no trade. The best New Orleans cotton is grown in its vicinity, but the growers find their market at Coompta and not at Bunkapoor, which, equally with Hooblee and Dharwar, is on the margin of the cotton-field. Some extension into the heart of the cotton-field, perhaps to Guduk, may, therefore, be proper, but the alignment of an eastern extension should not be made without reference to a future connection with the Madras Railway system.

3. The North and South Line of the Southern Mahratta Railway will probably pass from Mysore through Bunkapoor, Hooblee and Dharwar. Wherever, then, the point of junction with the Carwar Line may be, Bunkapoor, as well as Hooblee, will, sooner or later, be included within the Railway system, and it is important that the least amount of line in the aggregate shall be constructed. In this view, the minor proposal of the Bombay Government to deflect towards Turrus the line between Yellapoor and Hooblee commends itself for adoption as an advantageous deviation from the direct line viâ the Arbyle Ghât, the general conclusion of the Bombay Government in favour of which is accepted by the Governor General in Council, in so far as the information placed before the Government of India allows of an independent judgment of the merits of the two lines.

4. The question as to the method of working by a fixed incline and what Ghât is best suited for that, is not touched upon, but the ascent to the top of the Wuddy is 141 feet higher than to the summit of the Arbyle Ghât. The former is upwards of 1 mile longer, and has 1½ miles more of gradients under ⅙. The terminus inland, whether Bunkapoor or Hooblee, is, however, considerably higher than the summit of either Ghât, so that this concentration of ascent by the Wuddy Ghât might, other things being equal, prove an advantage. The Government of India would wish to see the sections last run by the Arbyle and Wuddy Ghâts, the former viâ Yellapoor, the latter viâ Sirci and Bunkapoor, and I am directed to request that they may be forwarded.

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT OF IRRIGATION AND RAINFALL FOR THE YEARS 1868-69 AND 1869-70 IN CANAL DISTRICTS OF THE N. W. PROVINCES.

No. 2293I, dated 19th December 1870.

OBSERVATIONS—By the Government of the North-Western Provinces.

Read—

Annual Statement A No. 2—Comparative Statement of Irrigation and Rainfall for the years 1868-69 and 1869-70 in Canal Districts of the North-West Provinces.

OBSERVATIONS.—The area irrigated in the khurreef harvest was shown in Resolution No. 1338I. of 26th July, to be 16,299 acres more than in the unprecedented khurreef of 1868-69.

But the rubbee irrigation was so unfavourable that the total area irrigated in the whole year, amounting to 1,088,832 acres, is 353,086 acres less than in last year.

This is accounted for by the season having been very favourable for rubbee cultivation without artificial irrigation. The Statement A. 2. published in the North-Western Provinces Gazette of the 24th August last shows that the September rainfall which moistens the soil for sowing, and which was wholly wanting in 1868, was fairly distributed and generally in abundance in 1869 in the irrigated districts of the North-Western Provinces; whilst a plentiful and universal downpour in the month of March brought the cereals to maturity without need of canal water. In wheat alone the falling off was 214,333 acres.

Yet the revenue, which was estimated at Rs. 30,29,617 in 1868-69 is assessed at Rs. 25,70,815 in the following year, so that the diminution of revenue earned in 1869-70 will be but 16 per cent. less than that of 1868-69, although the area irrigated was 24 per cent. less.

This result is presumptive of the advantages of canal-irrigation even in a year of plentiful rain; and the steady increase of the more valuable staples, exhibited in the review of khurreef operations,* bears testimony to a corresponding advance in the prosperity of the country.

* Government, North-Western Provinces, Irrigation Branch, Resolution No. 1338I. of 26th July 1870

Large as is the fallings-off from 1868-69, there is an increase of 10 per cent on the area of 1866-67 (983,389 acres), which is the maximum previous to 1868-69.

In the interval no new canals have been completed, and the expansion of the benefits of canal-irrigation is due only to a fuller development of the existing works and to progressive management.

CATTLE TRESPASS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Cattle Trespass be taken into consideration. He said that the amendments proposed by the Select Committee related almost entirely to matters of detail, and were chiefly in the direction of giving a greater latitude to the action of the local authorities in the working of the Act by relaxing the somewhat minute restrictions of the existing law in regard to such matters as the authority under which, and the places where, pounds may be established; the persons to whom the fact of impounded cattle remaining unclaimed should be reported; the manner in which such cattle should be disposed of; the determination of the place at which, and the persons by whom, the sale of cattle should be held, and the mode of transmitting to the Magistrate the proceeds of such sale; and, lastly, the persons by whom trespassing cattle may be conveyed to, or taken out of, a pound.

The grounds on which the amended provisions of the Bill in regard to these matters rested were so obvious as to need no further comment. He (MR. COCKERELL) passed on therefore to notice the other proposed changes.

As the law now stood, police officers were under an obligation to aid in the seizure of trespassing cattle whenever they might be required by the seizer to render such assistance. The want of some restriction in this matter had been found to lead to great abuse in the indiscriminate employment of the police in the conveyance of seized cattle to the pound. The intention of the law obviously was simply to prevent a breach of the peace resulting from resistance to attempted seizures, or attempts to rescue cattle which had been seized, whilst they were being conveyed to the pound. In the amended Bill (section 10) compliance with requisitions for the aid of the police was limited to the above contingency.

As the postponement of the sale of impounded cattle, the owner of which had brought a complaint before the Magistrate alleging the illegality of their seizure, and on that account declined to pay the fines and expenses incurred, frequently caused the feeding charges resulting from the protracted detention of the cattle to exceed the amount recoverable by their sale, it had been thought expedient to provide (section 15) that the cattle might be released on the deposit, pending the decision of the Magistrate on the owner's complaint, of the amount due on account of the fine and other charges.

In the event of the owner refusing or neglecting to make the required deposit, the cattle would be dealt with as if they were unclaimed.

The appropriation of surplus fines and unclaimed proceeds of the sale of impounded cattle was, by the present law, limited to expenditure on the construction of roads and bridges and works of a like nature. This restriction had been found to work inconveniently, and rested upon no intelligible principle: it was now proposed to allow the application of funds derived from this source to any purpose of public utility.

The word "forcibly," which occurred in the corresponding provision of the existing law, had been omitted from the second clause of section 24 of the amended Bill. It had been represented that the release of seized cattle was more frequently effected by stratagem than by force, and it was thought expedient that any form of rescue should be made a criminal offence. At the same time, to prevent this alteration of the law working harshly in any case, it was provided that, in order to constitute the offence of "rescue," there must be some person in charge of the seized cattle, doing some overt act in furtherance of the object of the seizure.

Section 27 of the amended Bill, which provided for the punishment of a pound-keeper convicted of dereliction of duty with fine which might amount to fifty rupees, was new. There was no corresponding provision in the existing law. Elsewhere in the Bill the pound-keeper was declared to be a public servant within the meaning of the Penal Code, and was thus made punishable under the general law for any graver offence in connection with his office; but it was thought desirable that there should be some means of awarding punishment, other than dismissal, for such acts or omissions as were specified in this section, and especially for neglect to take proper care of cattle committed to his charge. At present, the only remedy that the owner had in such cases was a suit against the pound-keeper in the Civil Court, a remedy which was, for obvious reasons, insufficient and unsuited to the circumstances of the case.

There were other minor amendments which called for no special remarks.

It had been suggested that the provisions of section 26, which made punishable the negligently suffering damage to be caused by the trespass of pigs, should be extended so as to include the case of other trespassing cattle.

The Committee, after a careful consideration of the matter, had not adopted this proposal. Section 26 was thought to involve a wrong principle, the operation of which should not be extended. There were peculiar difficulties in the way of seizing and conveying pigs to a pound, and it was probably this consideration which led to the original enactment of the special provision of the law in regard to them, and the omission to include them in the list of animals in respect of which a pound-fine was leviable. The injury sustained in such cases was a civil injury, properly referrible, for the purpose of obtaining redress, to the Civil Court and not to the Magistrate; for the act or omission by which such injury was caused was quite compatible with the exercise of good faith, and ought not, therefore, to be dealt with as a criminal offence. It might be said that the fine inflicted in such cases was to be regarded simply as an award of damages; but in that case the Civil Court was the fittest place for the adjudication of the questions which had to be considered in determining such award.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PRISONS' ACT EXTENSION (COORG) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN moved that the Bill to extend the Prisons' Act, 1870, to Coorg, be taken into consideration.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN also moved that, in the last line, for 'January' the word 'February' be substituted.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

CUSTOMS DUTIES BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE introduced the Bill to amend the law relating to Customs Duties, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in two months. He said that this Bill was in the main a consolidation measure, but the opportunity had been taken to introduce one or two amendments in procedure. As the Statement of Objects and Reasons was before the Council, he would not take up the time of the Council in explaining what the amendments were. He trusted that the Bill would be considered in Committee and passed in time for its introduction in the Budget.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PAPER CURRENCY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Government Paper Currency. He said:—"My Lord,—Although it is not altogether usual, when presenting the report of a Select Committee to the Council, to make any general observations, yet as it is desirable that full time should be given to the Council to consider all that may be said in regard to the Bill, I beg your Lordship's permission to state what I have to say upon this occasion. This Bill, as the Council knows, was originally a consolidation measure, but ultimately, as it passed through Committee, a clause has been inserted, with the sanction of the Executive Government, to enable us to issue Notes of lower denominations than have been hitherto adopted. It is this point to which I wish particularly to advert on this occasion. My hon'ble friends Mr. Bullen Smith and Mr. Cowie will recollect that, on the last occasion when the Bill was before the Council, they made certain very appropriate observations, and I told them then that these very points had been for a long time under the consideration of the Government of India in the Financial Department, and that before the Bill passed through Committee, I hoped to be in a position to state what the Government of India have to say upon this important question. I now beg your Lordship's permission (for the satisfaction of my hon'ble friends and this Council generally, and the public who may be concerned in the matter) to redeem that promise. I will divide my observations into two parts—first, the reasons why we propose to have five-rupee Notes, and secondly, the measures we are resolved to adopt in the executive department for facilitating the cashing of these Notes in particular, and of the Currency Notes in general.

Now, as regards the five-rupee Notes, it will be in the recollection of the Council that this is a matter which has excited a good deal of discussion, and upon which authorities have very much differed. This is by no means the first time that the question has been brought before this Council. I will give the history of the measure, if I may be allowed to recapitulate the proposals that have from time to time been made. First, Mr. Wilson proposed to have five-rupee Notes; afterwards, in Mr. Laing's time, the Council of that day were of opinion that Notes should not be issued of a lower denomination than twenty rupees. After that, when the Committee's report was brought before the Government of India, the then Government determined to have ten-rupee Notes as the lowest denomination. When this decision of the Government reached the Secretary of State, Sir Charles Wood (who as the Council knows was not only Secretary of State, but one of the greatest living authorities on matters of currency) remarked that it would have been much better to have accepted Mr. Wilson's proposal for the five-rupee Note. However, the Government of India adhered to its decision to have ten-rupee Notes as the lowest denomination, and at last Sir Charles Wood, when reviewing this decision, did not think fit to interfere with the determination of the Government of India, but said that he would allow ten-rupee Notes to stand as the limit, but regretted the decision regarding the exclusion of five-rupee Notes. That, then, was the history of the transaction at the time; and from that time to this, as the Council knows, there has been no Note of a lower denomination than ten rupees.

In order that the Council may be in possession of the views of such eminent authorities as Mr. Wilson and Sir C. Wood, I will read a few sentences which explain their opinions. Mr. Wilson stated in 1859:—

'In the first instance I would propose to begin with Notes of the denomination of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, and 500 Rupees. The effect of these denominations would be that remittances would be made in the larger Notes, and exchanged for daily use, not in coin, as would be the case if there existed Notes only of a high denomination, but into Notes of the lower denominations. All payments below five Rupees, and fractional payments above, would be made in silver and copper.'

Afterwards, in a speech before this very Council, he developed his opinions in this form:—

'Then, Sir, we have next to consider what ought to be the denomination of the Notes so issued. This is a subject upon which much difference exists, both in opinion and in practice, and it will be obvious that it can only be properly determined by a reference to the character of the transactions of a nation, whether, as a rule, they represent very small and minute sums, or whether they represent generally larger sums. In England, the lowest denomination of Notes is £5; in Scotland and in Ireland it is £1; in France it is 100 francs; in the United States it is one dollar or about 4*s.* 2*d.*; in some of the North American Colonies one-dollar Notes freely circulate; throughout Germany the Thaler Note, of value little more than 3*s.*, is the most common circulation; in Mauritius the circulation consists of Notes of five Rupees or 10*s.* and upwards; in Ceylon the Notes are of 10*s.* and upwards; formerly they were of 5*s.*, and by a report on the subject which I recently received from the able and accomplished Governor of that Colony, Sir Henry Ward, it appears that the suppression of Notes of that denomination had been attended with inconvenience to the planters and others, of which complaint had been made.'

That was Mr. Wilson's opinion.

Sir Charles Wood, in the course of the communications which I have already alluded to, remarked as follows:—

'In regard to the amount for which the Notes are to be issued, I am of opinion that raising the lowest denomination from five to ten Rupees is unadvisable; it is not with a view to deriving profit from the issue of Notes, or that they contemplate the withdrawal from India of the silver which is in the country, either in the shape of coin or otherwise, that the Government have introduced this measure. Their main object is to substitute an economical and convenient currency as far as the people will adopt it for the more expensive, and, from its bulk, inconvenient, circulation of silver.

'The sums required for payment of wages, or for the ordinary purchases made by the mass of the population in India, must, in each instance, be infinitely smaller than the sums required for similar purposes in this country.

In England, however, the value of the lowest coin above silver coin for change, and the denomination of the lowest Note in Scotland and Ireland, is a pound. Your proposal is to have no Note in India of a lower denomination than ten Rupees, which is equal to a pound.

'The same reasons which fixed the amount for this country would, when applied to the circumstances of India, clearly point out that the minimum denomination of Note beyond small coin should be lower than what is found necessary in this country, where the ordinary amount of small payments must necessarily be larger than in India.

'Unless Notes are issued for sums small enough to be used in making payments in ordinary transactions, the silver coin will not be displaced except for the small number of payments of higher amounts, and the benefit of the introduction of Paper Currency will be rendered comparatively trifling.

'I am of opinion, therefore, that the lowest denomination of Notes should be, as proposed by Mr. Wilson, of five Rupees. It is my desire that the Bill should in this respect be restored to its original form.'

Then, when the Government of India were not able to adopt this view and decided that a ten-rupee Note should be the lowest denomination of the Notes, Sir Charles Wood finally remarked:—

'In my financial despatch, dated the 2nd May last, No. 75, I conveyed to you generally the opinions of Her Majesty's Government on the subject of the Bill to provide for a Paper Currency, and I stated that, with the exceptions of the limitation of the denomination of the Notes to Rs. ten and upwards, which I considered should be lowered to Rs. five, and of the stipulation that the silver coin for which Notes might be demanded must be of full weight, thus excluding coins legally current, I had no alteration to suggest in the words of the Act, as the alterations in practice which I recommended were not inconsistent with its provisions.

'I regret to find that, as regards the first of those objections, the lowest denomination of Note has been fixed by the Act at Rs. ten. For the reasons stated in my despatch above referred to, it was my desire that the lowest denomination of Note should be Rs. five, and I see no reason to doubt that experience will prove that it would be expedient to use Notes of that amount.'

Thus the Council will observe that Sir Charles Wood then expressed the confident hope that experience would prove that it would be expedient to issue Notes of five Rupees. Now, as regards the experience which has been since had, I contend that it shows that Notes of the lowest denomination are the most popular. Next to Notes of the lowest denomination in popularity there come the Notes of the highest denomination. It is the medium Notes, or those which come between the highest and lowest denominations, that prove a comparative failure. The greatest increase however is in Notes of the lowest denomination. For instance, we had in 1864, 436,000 of the ten and twenty-rupee Notes in circulation. We have now close upon a million, that is more than 100 per cent. increase. And of the medium Notes, those of 50 and 100 Rupees, we had 186,000. We have now 280,000, that is an increase of only 60 per cent. As for the higher denominations, 500 and 1,000-rupee Notes, we then had 42,000. We have now got 76,000, which shows an increase of something less than 100 per cent.; that is, Notes of the lowest denomination have more than doubled, while medium Notes have only increased 60 per cent. and Notes of the highest have not quite doubled. But the more important test consists in the percentages which the different denominations bear to the total number of Notes, and the proportion which their value bears to the total value of the circulation. When we began in 1864, our lowest Notes were, in number, 66 per cent. of the total circulation. They are now 73 per cent. The medium Notes were 28 per cent.; they are now only 21 per cent. The highest denomination Notes were then 6 per cent.; they are still 6 per cent. and a fraction. So that the real increase in the circulation has been solely and entirely, by that test, in the Notes of the lowest denominations. But take the value, which is another test. When we began, the lowest Notes were 10 per cent. of the value; they are now 12 per cent. The medium Notes were 25 per cent.; they have now gone down to 21. The highest Notes were 65 per cent.; they have gone up to 67. The material increase of 10 to 12 per cent., an increase of fully one-fifth, is in the lowest Notes, and in them alone has this increase been remarkable. Well, I submit that the inference from this is that people are more inclined to use Notes of the lowest denominations than Notes of any other. The Committee of 1861 voted against five-rupee Notes. I have no time here to criticise all the objections in detail; they apply nearly as much to ten and to twenty-rupee Notes as to five-rupee Notes; moreover, the Committee who voted so strongly against this measure objected even to ten-rupee Notes. They proposed to have notes not lower than twenty Rupees. They said that ten-rupee Notes would excite "suspicion and discontent" in the minds of the Natives of India.

The value of that opinion has been tested by experience, and most unquestionably their anticipations were erroneous in respect to ten-rupee Notes. I am confident that they would prove equally erroneous in respect to five-rupee Notes. Still, there have been objections made, sometimes with great authority, and repeated, I may observe, in several influential organs of Native opinion. The matter is of such importance that I may be allowed to notice these objections.

Now, the first objection, perhaps the most important, is that issuing these Notes would cause them to circulate among the poorer classes of the people, both in the Presidency towns and the interior of the country. The classes alluded to are, I believe, domestic and menial servants of all kinds, day-labourers, farm-labourers, in short the very important class designated under the name of "coolies" and small shop-keepers. Now, it must be remembered that the circulation of Notes is really for the most part confined to the Presidency towns, and these classes have in the Presidency towns very great facilities for cashing these Notes. But no doubt these Notes may, and I hope will, go far into the interior of the country, and sometimes even to the remote frontiers. But then we hold that it is practically impossible to force a paper circulation upon a reluctant people. The mercantile members of the Council will bear me out in that. Of course, Notes being legal tender, once an obligation has been incurred, once an article has been delivered, once a man has given his service as labourer or a servant, he must take the Notes in payment. But when he finds he has to pay a discount upon them, he will say "very well, I will quit and leave this employment." Every employer of labour knows that the employer cannot afford to break with his people. It is the same with domestic servants and small shop-keepers. If they find they are refused payment in coin, they may say, "we won't deal with you any more and will quit your service." Thus things will find their own level, and people will soon obtain their own remedy. There may be cases, perhaps, in which a labourer, having been long under an engagement, must take payment in these Notes. But such cases will be exceptional, and partly by the good sense of the employers who cannot afford to make their people discontented, and partly by the just measures adopted by the Government for affording facilities for the cashing of these Notes, the force of this objection will be mitigated and no special danger incurred.

The second objection which has been raised is that there is a liability to fraud by the issue of these Notes; it was supposed that there would be an increased circulation among a very ignorant population, and that they would be easily imposed upon. I do not think that there is much in that, for it must be known that our Notes are perhaps the best and most costly got up Notes in the world. Their workmanship is extremely good, their paper is most difficult of imitation, and though we have had many millions issued amongst a population at least as skilful in forgery as any other, the amount of forgery has been very little, and, since the issue of the new pattern, next to nothing.

The third objection is that the five-rupee Notes will find their way into the hands of the most ignorant classes of the population, who are the most readily frightened and most likely to make a run upon our currency offices for cash. Well, if these classes feel frightened, let them make a run upon our currency offices. We are always in a strong position with our large reserves of all kinds, and they are able to meet all such runs. If there is a demand for encashment, we can fully supply it. It will not do for a great Government like this to be afraid of issuing these Notes, because there is a probability of their being presented for encashment. That is an objection which could not be urged with propriety in this Council, or, if noticed, only noticed for refutation.

The fourth objection is that these Notes are not easily distinguishable by the ignorant people, and that they might not understand which is the five-rupee and which the ten-rupee Note. I do not myself see the force of the objection; but if there is any, there is an easy way in which it can be met, namely, by having a different Note; not a Note of a different paper or workmanship, but simply a Note of a different size. Our present Notes are very large; nothing is easier than to cut them down by one-third or one-half, and then people can instantly distinguish ten and five-rupee Notes. If that precaution were taken, the objection would not stand. So, for all these reasons, I contend that an experiment ought to be made, the experiment, namely, of issuing these Notes. We have certainly more eminent authority on our side than we have against us. We have Mr. Wilson and Sir C. Wood, and also Sir Bartle Frere, who, at the very time the Committee voted against the issue of these Notes, was the only man who stood up for them, and actually proposed an amendment for their legalization, which unfortunately was lost. I contend therefore that primâ facie the presumption, both by theory and practice, is that there should be Notes of a lower denomination than ten rupees. Truly the great peculiarity of India is that, though it is a large country, though it has a vast population, though its aggregate wealth is very considerable, yet the wealth of individuals is extremely small for the most part, and in general the transactions are very diminutive. What is the condition of the metallic currency? Half of the exchange work of the country is done by shells and extremely debased copper, and the remainder almost entirely by silver; gold coins are scarcely used as yet in this country. Precisely the same reasons apply to the paper currency. The Notes should be of an extremely low denomination, gradually rising to the high denomination. For all these reasons, I am sanguine that this Council will unanimously, or at least with a large majority, give me the authority required for the issue of a five-rupee Note.

There is a further point to which I would allude, namely, that we are prepared, if the public desire, to ask the Secretary of State to let us have these five-rupee Notes of a smaller size than the other Notes. There are questions of expense connected with this, which I think it would be interesting to explain to the Council. I would observe that this involves an extremely small expense. To give an idea of the cost of manufacture, I would explain that the Notes of our currency, according to the old pattern, cost three pies, or the quarter of an anna a piece, and on the new pattern, the cost is seven pies, or over one-half an anna, being more than double the cost of the former. Now, let us consider these rates of three and seven pies a piece as determining the cost of manufacture of our existing paper currency. Suppose we issue two millions of Notes (pieces) per annum, at three pie a piece, that would give about Rs. 30,000 a year, and at seven pies would give Rs. 70,000 a year, which is about what the cost now is. Now, suppose we were to manufacture the Notes of the lowest denomination at the cheap rate, we should have to pay Rs. 15,000 a year for a million of such Notes (pieces), and at seven pies, Rs. 35,000; so the Council will see that the matter of cost is really not very great; Rs. 10,000 or 18,000 might be lost or saved to the Department in a year, by extravagance or economy in the manufacture of Notes. I do not say that even this amount is to be despised. I only mention this because it is supposed by some that the cost of manufacture does make some important difference. But it really does not.

Reverting now to the general question, I apprehend that the Council generally, and the mercantile members in particular, will consider that if we are going to scatter Notes of five rupees broadcast all over the country, we ought to do something more than we have done to facilitate the cashing of Notes, and this brings me to the second part of my subject.

Now, in order to illustrate what we have done, I must for a few moments ask the Council to let me explain the position of our silver and security-reserves, respectively, in the Paper Currency Department. There is no doubt that greater facilities are really required in the interior of the country for cashing Notes. A variety of symptoms have pointed of late in this direction. In the first place it is to be remembered that our currency as regards the Presidency towns is not wholly owing to the action of the Government. It was based and had its origin in a great degree on the previous circulation of the Presidency Banks. Where we acted with originality was in the interior of the country. Where we established circles of issue for the first time, there we made a good start six or seven years ago, but we have not maintained the pace at all. Our circulation rapidly rose to $1\frac{1}{8}$ millions in those circles, and at that point has apparently stopped. Out of a total circulation of $10\frac{2}{3}$ millions, only $1\frac{1}{3}$, or one-seventh, pertain to the interior circles; the remainder belonging to the Presidency circles. There has been a decrease, particularly in the last year or two, and want of vitality in these interior circles. In Nágpúr and Karáchí, for instance, the circulation has flourished; the real cause of that is clearly the connection with the seaboard trade of Bombay. But those circles in the North-West, which were really more independent of the Presidency, did not flourish. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, which were included in the Allahabad Circle, the circulation goes on with considerable fluctuation. As for the Panjáb itself, I am sorry to say that the circulation has been steadily falling for the last four years. Then, again, it is unsatisfactory to observe the very large amount of Notes which continue to be held in the cash-balances of the treasuries of the interior. Of course it is an advantage to the State to hold a portion of our cash-balances in Notes. But the intention of sending these Notes to the interior was, in part, that they should be issued from the treasuries to the public in exchange for cash. It is to be regretted that they were not thus applied for, and not thus issued to the extent desired. I will just present some figures to give the Council an idea of the proportion of our nominal circulation which is really not in active use, but is lying in our treasuries. In the Bengal treasuries there are 61 lákhs lying in the vaults. In the Bombay treasuries 42 lákhs, in the treasuries of the North-Western Provinces 12 lákhs, in the Madras treasuries 9 lákhs; all which, together with other items, make up an amount of 162 lákhs, or more than a million and a half out of our total circulation, really held in our own treasuries; and this is a considerable deduction from our gross paper circulation, which now stands at ten millions and a half. Well, all these various symptoms have for some time caused a certain amount of anxiety, and rendered us anxious to strive to improve the circulation in the interior of the country.

Having said this much, I will ask the Council to recall the conditions of the reserves in cash and in securities. Probably many members now present may recollect that I was obliged to trouble the Council with two long speeches in March last, whereby permission was obtained to raise the limit of investment in securities from four to six millions. For various reasons we have not yet availed ourselves in any degree of the powers the Council was then good enough to concede to us in this respect. At the most recent date, the first of January of this year, our cash-reserves were very high, our reserves in securities rather low. Out of a circulation of $10\frac{1}{2}$ millions, $3\frac{1}{4}$ millions only were supported by securities, while the rest, namely, upwards of seven millions, was backed by silver and coin. It will be apparent from this that we have large cash-reserves. Having such reserves, we possess this great advantage, that we have a large amount of coin at our disposal that we can make available for cashing Notes in the interior of the country. The maintaining of these strong reserves has indeed the disadvantage of diminishing the profits to the State from the paper currency, but it has this great advantage, that it will enable us to carry out the measures for facilitating encashment, to the ultimately great extension of the circulation; that is to say, we sacrifice (if I may use the simile) the minnow of present profit, in order to catch the whale of future increase.

Now, what have we done hitherto for facilitating the cashing of Notes in the interior of the country?

Before answering this question I should like to remind the Council of the existing state of our obligations by law to cash Notes in British India. The Calcutta Circle has two subordinate Circles, one called the Allahabad Circle and the other the Lahore Circle. The Allahabad Office must by law cash Notes of its own Circle, and the Lahore Office those of its Circle. The Calcutta Office must by law cash, not only the Notes of its own Circle, but also those of the Allahabad and Lahore Circles. On the other hand, the Allahabad and Lahore Offices are not bound by law to cash Notes of the Calcutta Circle. Thus far does the obligation by law extend, and no further. Similarly, the Madras Circle has three subordinate Circles—Vizagapatam, Trichinopoly and Calicut; they are of lesser importance, but, mutatis mutandis, the application of the obligation by law is the same for them as for the Calcutta Circles. The Bombay Circle has very important subordinate Circles, namely, those of Karáchí, Nágpúr, and Akola. Well, the Offices at Karáchí, at Nágpúr, and at Akola must by law each cash the Notes of their own Circles respectively. The Bombay Office must by law cash the Notes of its own Circle and of its three subordinate Circles. But the subordinate Circles are not bound by law to cash Bombay Notes. Now, although this absolute obligation by law is quite as much as we can undertake, still it manifestly leaves a very great deal to be done by executive action for the public convenience. Everybody knows how troublesome it often is that a Calcutta Note may be refused encashment in Northern India, or at Bombay, or at Madras; that a Bombay Note cannot always be cashed in Central India, or in Sindh, or at Calcutta; that the holder of a Madras Note cannot demand cash at either of the other Presidencies, and so on. This sort of inconvenience cannot be obviated by law; the remedy, so far as it is possible, can only be effected by executive management. Having explained this much, I will revert to the question, what have we done for thus facilitating the encashment of Notes in the interior of the country?

I need not trouble the Council with a recapitulation of small measures authorizing Treasury officers to cash Notes of any Circle for the accommodation of travellers, for inducing Railway Companies to receive such Notes for the payment of fares, and the like, but I will refer to the rather important measure which was carried a year ago in the Executive Government for this purpose. We then ruled, in January last, just a year ago, that all Offices of Issue of Circles in the interior of the country might cash Notes of other Circles to the full extent to which their own Notes had been cashed by other Circles. The result is that Notes to a vast amount, of distant Circles, may be cashed at all the great centres throughout India. That was a very important concession, which placed upwards of one million available for cashing Notes in the above manner. But after a year's trial I am sorry to say it has met with the scantiest success. I would ask the Council to consider for a moment the scope of the measure and the very limited results which have accrued within the first year of trial. According to that test, there were, by the returns of the first week of the present month, 112 lákhs available in the Circles of the interior of the country for the cashing of Notes of distant Circles in all parts of India. Now, within the first year the public availed themselves of that privilege to the extent only of seven lákhs, leaving in our boxes 105 lákhs, or more than one million pounds sterling, waiting to be paid in exchange for Notes if presented. I apprehend that my hon'ble colleagues, the mercantile members, may be surprised when they hear that such is the case. But why is it that the public have so scantily availed themselves of what was intended to be so benevolent a provision ?

I apprehend that, in the first place, the meaning of the notification may not have been correctly understood. But the concession was also unfortunately clogged with certain conditions in regard to Notes being used for purposes of remittance. The conditions did not exactly prescribe that a Note should not be cashed if it were manifestly being used for remittance, but they did virtually direct that enquiry should be made by the cashing officer, as to whether the Note of another Circle, presented under this notification for encashment, was being used for purposes of remittance. I presume that the necessity of answering questions of this kind, of being catechised as it were, has deterred people from presenting Notes from distant Circles for encashment, and left the impression that the Notes could not be cashed without some sort of inconvenient enquiry being made. I can only account in this way for the extremely small extent to which an important privilege has been made use of. The poverty of result has been remarkable in one or two cases. In the Allahabad Circle they had 35 lákhs available, but only 6 lákhs were so taken up. In the Lahore Circle there were 25 lákhs available for encashment, of which only one lákh was asked for, leaving 24 lákhs available. The comparative failure, in the first year, of this plan has rather led us to look for a better one. It may be thought that the plan just described deserves a further trial. But on the whole, inasmuch as we have been able, by certain changes in our system, to bring the Currency Department into more immediate relation with the Treasury Department, we have, after careful consultation with the Comptroller General, considered that we may safely introduce a revised plan, which we have accordingly resolved to adopt, and which I will take this opportunity of explaining.

Our revised plan is to take the circulation of a certain Circle, to calculate the minimum amount to which that circulation could be reasonably expected to fall, as being the amount of Notes which the public must have and cannot afford to cash. The minimum thus ascertained need not be supported by cash on the spot. Deduct that from the total circulation, and the remainder will represent the amount which must be locally supported by cash. Thus you get the amount of cash which must be held in the office of the Circle. Compare that with the cash which is actually held. If the actual amount prove to be in excess, then that excess will represent the amount available for general cashing of Notes of other Circles. We propose then to make that sum available for cashing Notes of other Circles. To show, for the moment, how this plan would work, I will give some actual figures. Take the Allahabad Circle. Its circulation on the first of this month stood at 44 lákhs. After careful consideration, our Comptroller General is of opinion that the circulation of that Circle cannot fall below 20 lákhs, which practically must be held in Notes by the public, which Notes they cannot afford to cash. This is what we call the minimum circulation. This amount then need not be locally supported by cash. If it be deducted from the 44 lákhs total circulation, there remain 24 lákhs in circulation which must be supported by cash. Thus 24 lákhs at least of cash ought to be kept up in that particular office as the safety limit. But what amount is actually kept up ? Why, 68 lákhs, that is, 44 lákhs beyond the safety limit, or more than we really require. Therefore we propose to say that, at Allahabad, Notes of other Circles may for the present be cashed up to a limit of 44 lákhs. Take the Lahore Circle. Its circulation now stands at 20 lákhs. This circulation according to calculation could not fall below 10 lákhs, which therefore need not be supported by cash. Deduct 10 from 20 lákhs, which would leave 10 lákhs as an amount which must be supported by cash, which amount in cash must be kept up at Lahore. But what amount is actually kept up? Why, 39 lákhs, which is 29 lákhs more than is required for safety. The 29 lákhs would therefore be available for cashing Notes of other Circles. We would therefore allow Notes of other Circles to be cashed at Lahore within a limit of 29 lákhs. I might go through all the Circles in the same way, but it would perhaps take up too much time. I think I have stated enough to illustrate the plan proposed to be adopted. In this way (all Circles taken together) we should have 260 lákhs available, or upwards of 2½ millions, in our cash-reserves in different parts of the country for cashing Notes on the "universal Note" principle, that is, without reference to place of issue or boundary of Circle; you may take the Notes of any Circle all over India, and get them cashed at the great centres of issue, within certain limits of amount as above explained. As regards these centres, I believe that at present this will be sufficient for all necessary purposes. The limits of amount as set forth may from time to time require modification, and of this due notice would always be given.

My honorable friends the mercantile members will probably remark that this plan applies only to the offices of issue, that is, to the great Treasuries at the centres of Circles. They may ask, what are we going to do at the smaller treasuries? Well, what we propose to do is as follows: Out of our cash-reserves we intend to give to the Collector of each principal district throughout the country a certain sum, say a lákh of Rupees, which he is to hold in a separate chest as Agent for the Paper Currency Department. From this chest he may cash all Notes presented, of whatsoever Circle, till the chest runs dry. We also propose to give him a certain quantity of Notes, which he should try to issue in exchange for cash. If he succeeds therein, his hoard of cash will be proportionably augmented. It is to be supposed that, when the district people find that any Note is as good as silver at the Collector's treasury, which in their eyes is the centre of the world, they will begin to take out the Notes and pay cash for them. In this way some Collectors may fortunately find their currency chests rapidly filling, and may have enough cash in their store to sustain a considerable circulation as trustee for the Paper Currency Department.

To give some idea, for the moment, of the extent to which we intend to adopt the system, I would explain a few instances. Take the North-Western Provinces. We intend to make available at least 10 lákhs of the currency cash-reserves for the district treasure-chests, as above explained. That would give a lákh each for the treasuries of Benares, Mirzapore, Cawnpore, Meerut, Agra, Bareilly, Futtehgurh, Roorkee, Muttra, Moradabad. That number embraces most of the great centres of trade in those provinces. In the same way we would give 10 lákhs to Bengal Proper, that is to say, a lákh each to Berhampore, Backergunge, Dacca, Gowhatty, Patna, Muzufferpúr, Hazáríbágh, Cuttack, Darjíling, Chittagong. These embrace most of the principal places in Bengal. In the same way for the Panjáb we would give 10 lákhs. One lákh each to Delhi, Ambála, Simla, Amritsar, Mooltan, Jullunder, Ferozepore, Pesháwur, Rawul Pindí, Murree. I only state these arrangements now in the rough. Before prescribing the details, we shall of course consult the Local Governments. In some district chests we may have to keep up more than the amount I have named, at certain seasons. In some cases we may have to replenish the chest when it runs dry, and so on.

In the same way we would give 10 lákhs to Bombay treasuries, and also 10 lákhs to Madras, but in the presence of distinguished gentlemen from those presidencies, I need not give the names of particular districts to which the allotments would be made. We shall consult them or their respective Governments as to the stations, and the amount to be allotted to each, and I am sure we may count upon the co-operation of the authorities in those Presidencies.

Now, by these two plans I hope our honorable friends opposite will see that we shall be getting practically some way towards the long-hoped-for desideratum of a universal Note. By the first plan great facilities will be afforded at the head-quarters of each Circle in the interior of the country for cashing Notes of other Circles. The second or subsidiary plan will give facilities at all the principal treasuries in the districts for cashing Notes of any Circle; also, if at more treasuries than those we propose, the establishment of currency treasure-chests is asked for, we shall strive to find a few more lákhs from our reserves for this purpose ; we further desire that the cashing of Notes under both these plans shall be free from all condition and from all questions about their being used for remittances. They are to be cashed as presented for payment, without question or hindrance. Of course we may modify from time to time the terms under which Notes should be cashed elsewhere than in their own Circle; we do not bind ourselves by law to cash them in this manner. We remember the distinction which is to be drawn between a legal absolute obligation and a conditional practical executive undertaking. We are very jealous of incurring absolute legal obligations, which are quite stringent enough by the law as it now stands; but we intend to be as liberal as we possibly can in respect to conditional and practical undertaking. But though we would not absolutely bind ourselves, we intend to avoid modifying our undertaking unnecessarily, and we hope for the present to meet to a large extent the public requirements.

I will conclude by making a few remarks about the currency Notes being used for remittance. I believe that there was a good deal of jealousy on the part of the treasury and financial officers on this point. Perhaps it was not unreasonable at first. But until we give up being jealous on this point, we shall never get our currency properly developed. People will use Notes for remittances when they can profitably do so. They will use the Notes as they like, and for whatever purpose they choose, or they will not use them at all. Experience is tolerably certain in that respect. If we interfere, we may give up all hope of extending our paper-currency, or hope for increased profit to the State from this legitimate source. It appears to be considered that, if it can only be shown that Notes are used for purposes of remittance, there is a reductio ad absurdum. I think it is a reduction to something very reasonable, and not absurd. It is indeed difficult to say the extent to which Notes are used for remittances. It is commonly supposed, as the Council are aware, that Notes used for remittance are sent in halves through the Post Office. It is possible that all, or nearly all, Notes cut in that manner, are used for the purposes of remittance. Now, it might be useful to know what is the proportion of Notes which are in halves, and are commonly termed " cut Notes."

Take the return for last year of the cut Notes received at the Currency Offices. The percentages of cut Notes on total receipts were as follows:—Of ten-rupee Notes it was 9 per cent.; of the twenty-rupee Notes it was 13 per cent.; of the fifty-rupee Notes it was 22 per cent.; of the hundred-rupee Notes it was 20 per cent.; of the five hundred-rupee Notes it was 19 per cent.; and of the one thousand-rupee Notes it was 9 per cent. Well, the Council will see that these percentages were not very high. If the proportion of cut Notes be taken as a test, then the quantity of Notes used for remittances would seem to be small. However, the test is not by any means perfect, but as far as it may be valid at all, it would show that the proportion is not so great as is commonly supposed. But if it really be that the Notes are used for remittance to a great extent, then it is presumable that the Notes so used would chiefly or largely belong to the highest denomination, Rs. 1,000. If remittance is greatly done by Notes at all, it must be by one thousand-rupee Notes. Now if these Notes were constantly or usually used for remittances, it would follow that their circulation would not increase : as fast as they went out, they would come in again, and so the circulation would continue much the same. But what is the fact? In 1864-65, of one thousand-rupee Notes we had out 3½ millions. In 1869-70 we had out 7 millions. It is within these few years that the circulation has doubled. How then is this to be accounted for? If these Notes were used simply for remittances, and were constantly coming in to be cashed, this would be quite inconsistent with the fact of this cent. per cent. increase. It would appear either that they are taken out for other purposes besides remittance, in the first instance, or that, having once got out for remittance, they stay out for circulation. Partly, also, the increase is to be accounted for by the fact that the banks in the Presidency towns and wealthy individuals use these Notes as money-reserves. That is, of course, undeniably a most legitimate use for these Notes. On the whole, this increase shows that it is very doubtful whether these Notes are used for remittances pure and simple to the extent commonly believed. But assuming that they are so used, I say that this is not a matter to which we should offer any impediment or objection whatever. In the first place, the use of these Notes, even for remittances, greatly accustoms the influential classes of the Natives of India to the sight of paper-money. By using them, the Natives get accustomed to handle them, to post them, to cut them, to despatch them, to receive them, and then, by constantly presenting them for payment at offices of issue and by taking silver for them across the counter, they come to consider them as good as silver. All this tends to establish the popularity of Notes.

Then, these are the very classes whom we want to indoctrinate with ideas of a Paper Currency. These are the very people whom we wish to teach how to receive Notes without discount whenever presented to them by their customers. If they came to consider the Notes to be as good as silver, they would regard them in that light when presented, and receive them accordingly. We should hear then much less of shroffs (Native bankers) refusing to receive these Notes without discount. In fact, I cannot imagine anything more beneficial to the propagation of our circulation than the accustoming of these influential people to the use of Notes for any purpose whatever, be that purpose what it may. Then, again, the use of these Notes for remittance must be a great convenience to trade. Now, if we can subserve or promote purposes of commerce without any undue loss to the State, or without the violation of any sound economic principle, in the name of common sense, what objection is there to this? For what are all these arrangements made, unless for the public convenience?

There is special reason why we should facilitate the circulation of Notes in India, for, as compared with European countries, the circulation of our Notes occupies a very large proportion of the general medium of exchange.

In England, as everybody knows, one of the largest elements in the medium of exchange consists of bills and cheques. In London 97 per cent. of the exchange appears to be done by bills, 2 per cent. by Notes, and about 1 per cent. by coin. But in India, as the mercantile members of the Council know, our currency is not so largely supplemented by bills. We have no clearing house; we have not those infinite facilities for the use of bills and cheques. I am not sure that I can state what proportion of the medium of exchange in Calcutta consists of bills. There are indeed statistics available, but I am informed that they are not reliable. However, I may say that, so far as we know, in our medium of exchange, bills do not bear a larger proportion than sixty per cent. Compare that with the 97 per cent. in London. Well, the 60 per cent. of bills in Calcutta appears to leave 30 per cent. consisting of Notes, the remaining 10 per cent. consisting of coin. I say that I am not sure that these proportions regarding Calcutta are quite correct. But even if they are approximately correct, they show the large place occupied by Notes in our medium of exchange, and the immense importance of paper-money to the mercantile community in India; that is one reason why we should do all we can to facilitate the circulation of Notes of all denominations, high and low.

Still, there are certain objections urged by persons of great authority against our being too ready to acquiesce in the use of Notes for the mere purpose of remittance. And I will, for one moment, ask the permission of the Council to answer some of these. We are told that the practice interferes with hundíána, that is, the premium or commission which is charged by Native bankers upon their bills of exchange. Now, suppose that it does interfere. Nobody complains of that. Why, this very class who receive hundíána are the persons who use Notes for remittance and advocate the practice. Of course, they cannot complain that their own hundíána is disturbed or interfered with by a method which they themselves were the first to introduce and to foster. I suppose it would be regarded by them as a matter of profit and loss. It is probably in their eyes as broad as it is long; on the one hand they would make less money by hundíána on the bills they grant to others, on the other hand they would save hundiána on the bills they have to obtain for themselves. It simply comes to this, that, as a medium of remittance, they prefer Government Notes to the Native hundí or bill of exchange. Probably they assume that the Government Note is more certain to be cashed than the Native hundí, while the rate is never unfavourable. At all events, they are the best judges of their own interests in the matter, and it is useless for us to trouble ourselves about it, considering that the classes most interested do not complain. Then, I am told that it would compel us to keep up larger cash-balances all over the country. But you may remember that the fact of these Notes getting out in great quantities indicates that precisely similar amounts must have been paid into our cash-balances, as Notes are issued only against coin. If so many millions worth of Notes get out, there must have been so many millions of cash paid in somewhere. In that case, then, the general cash-reserve must be proportionally strong, and our task would be to distribute it where most needed to support our paper-money.

It was urged, thirdly, that to sanction this practice would be merely to put upon Government a charge for remittance. I fully acknowledge that such an expense might occasionally accrue, but I would ask the Council to consider what such charge might amount to. The expense of transporting a million in coin might be one-half per cent., in reality, in most conceivable instances, one quarter per cent. Now, what would this amount to on one crore of rupees or one million sterling? Only half a lákh, or £5,000, at half per cent.; and at a quarter per cent. Rs. 25,000. At an expense of two lákhs, or £20,000, we could move about four crores of silver at half per cent.; while, at a quarter per cent., we could do it for one lákh or £10,000. The above is rather an extreme case, and even in that case the cost would be small. But we should probably never have to move so much as this, and the cost would ordinarily be much less. But supposing we did have to incur an expense of, say, one lákh in moving four crores about the country for the purpose of cashing all the Notes of the highest denomination used for purposes of remittance, that would so far diminish the profit to Government from the Currency Department. Now, what are these annual profits? The gross profit for the last year, 1869-70, was 16½ lákhs. Out of that we spent 2¾ in the establishment and other charges of the Department, leaving a nett profit of 13¾ lákhs. Well, if we have to spend a lákh in moving silver for meeting remittances pure and simple, the effect would be to deduct one lákh from 13¾ lákhs of profit. The question then arises, whether it is worth while to incur that risk and that charge. I say without doubt that it may well be worth while. I should not be very sorry to see such a state of things occur. We might have a run upon our cash-reserves, and we should meet it with the utmost promptitude and efficiency, and having so provided for it, I should expect that our Paper Currency would thereafter be increased. The prestige of the Department would rise and the public confidence would be strengthened. This circulation ultimately expanding, the limit of investment of securities would be extended, and the profit of the State would increase. Thus, a lákh spent in moving about the silver would in the highest sense be reproductive, and would fructify a hundred-fold in future years.

Such, then, are the various points which I have to bring before the Council in reference to the two parts into which I have divided my speech; firstly—as to the five-rupee Notes—the reasons why we propose to issue them; and, secondly, the measures we are resolved to take for facilitating the cashing of Notes all over the country; being, so far as they go, steps directly towards the establishment of the "universal Note." I dare say that, in the course of a not very long time, we may extend facilities for cashing Notes still further. I am sanguine that the Council would consider these to be important improvements in a monetary point of view. The Council will remember that, in past years, much attention has been given to the Paper Currency by the Financial Department of the Government of India. The late Head Commissioner,

Colonel Hyde, gave much consideration to this subject. The present Head Commissioner, Mr. Harrison, whose ability is well known to the Council, and his very able Deputy, Mr. Gay, have been giving the same continuous attention to these matters, especially to those which I have brought before the Council today. I hope that the results will show that our management of this Department is such as to justify the confidence which the Council has from time to time evinced in sanctioning legislative measures for establishing a sound Paper Currency throughout British India."

PLEADERS, MUKHTÁRS AND REVENUE AGENTS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN introduced the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in six weeks.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ÁBKÁRÍ BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS introduced the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Ábkárí Revenue in Northern India, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report in six weeks. He said that the object of the Bill was to consolidate the Ábkárí law now contained in four Acts; and to extend the provisions of the revised enactment to British Burma, in place of the rules now in force there under Act XXIII of 1868.

The law had been re-arranged and the wording improved; and a few sections, rendered unnecessary by subsequent legislation, had been omitted. The only substantial alteration proposed to be made in it was in the section which empowered a licensed retail vendor to surrender his license at any time, on giving fifteen days' notice and paying a fine equal to the amount of the license for fifteen days.

This provision had been found to work inconveniently. The period of the year when the Ábkárí licensees made their greatest profits was in the spring and early part of the summer. They now surrendered their licenses when this profitable season had passed, and loss was entailed on Government by the licenses being resold at lower rates, and frequently to the former holders.

The proposed amendment would remedy this, by requiring that a licensed vendor who might wish to surrender his license must give one month's previous notice to the Collector, and, if sufficient reason for the surrender was not shown, might be called upon to pay such fine, not exceeding the amount of the license for six months, as the Collector might determine.

The Bill had been sent to the Local Governments.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The following Select Committees were named:—

On the Bill to amend the law relating to Customs Duties—The Hon'ble Messrs. Stephen, Bullen Smith, Cockerell, Inglis, Cowie, and Robinson and the Mover.

On the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents—The Hon'ble Messrs. Cockerell, Inglis and Robinson and the Mover.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 20th January 1871.

No. 476.—Erratum.—In the third line of the Notification of this Department, No. 5519, dated 16th ultimo, announcing the arrival in India of Mr. F. C. Channing, of Her Majesty's Civil Service, for 1st instant, read 25th ultimo.

No. 478.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following advertisement in substitution of the one published under Notification No. 145, dated the 11th January 1870:—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rhea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and, no doubt, might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost—all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included—of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Owing to the delay that has taken place in maturing the preliminary arrangements, the Government of India has decided that the competition will not be held until the 1st April 1872, thus affording a much longer time than was originally intended for the preparation of machines and their transport to the locality appointed for the competition. The Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore, in the North-Western Provinces, has been fixed as the place where the public competition will be held, and the Government of India will provide one or more small steam-engines to work the machines during the public competition.

7. All machinery, &c., intended for trial must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to the Saharunpore Rhea Plantation, and kept ready before the 1st April 1872, to be there worked under their own supervision, or under that of their representatives, for a sufficient length of time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. Arrangements have now been completed for the supply of dried Rhea stems to intending competitors, both in this country and in Europe, to enable them to form a correct idea of the nature of the plant which their machinery will be required to deal with. Persons in Europe desirous to obtain small supplies of dried Rhea stems for the above purpose, should apply to the Secretary of State for India. Intending competitors in this country, desirous of obtaining supplies of the article, must submit applications to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, in the Form A hereto annexed, prior to the 1st of March 1871; and those who are desirous of testing their machinery on the fresh Rhea at the Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore during the year 1871, must submit their applications to the same authority, in the Form B hereto annexed, prior to the 1st April 1871. The former will have to pay the expenses that may be incurred in packing and despatching the stems. The latter will have to provide all labor and motive power necessary for, and to pay all expenses connected with, their experiments: the fibre turned out by their machines during such experiments to become the property of Government.

9. In order to enable the Government to arrange for the provision of a sufficient stock of fresh Rhea stems for the purposes of the formal competition in April 1872, it is necessary to ascertain beforehand the number of machines that are likely to take part in it; and intending competitors are therefore requested to submit, prior to the 1st May 1871, and in the Form C also hereto annexed, notices of intention to compete.

MINT AND CURRENCY.

The 24th January 1871.

No. 451.—Rules prescribed by the Governor General of India in Council in exercise of the powers conferred by the Indian Coinage Act (No. XXIII), 1870, Sections 16 and 28:—

1. All Officers in charge of Government Treasuries, and Commissioners, Deputy or Assistant Commissioners of the Paper Currency Department are hereby authorized to act under the Act and Sections named above.

2. On the tender to any such Officer of silver coin purporting to be that of the Government of India, he shall, if he has reason to believe that it is genuine coin, but has been called in by proclamation, or has lost by reasonable wearing more than 2 per cent. in weight, by himself or another cut or break the coin, and either return the pieces to the person tendering the coin, or, at the option of the latter, receive it at the rate of one rupee per tola.

3. If such Officer has reason to believe the coin to be counterfeit, or to have been reduced in weight otherwise than by reasonable wearing, he shall cut or break the coin and return the pieces to the person tendering it.

4. All Officers condemning coin under these rules must personally see it cut or broken and rendered unfit for currency.

These rules, so far as they relate to light weight coins, must be considered permissive. It is not the desire of Government to interfere with the circulation of good coin which passes unquestioned in currency, even though it may in exceptional cases have lost something more than 2 per cent. by fair wear. On the other hand, where there is reason to suspect reduction of weight by other means, and still more in the case of counterfeit coin, the law should be rigidly enforced.

Nothing in this section applies to Agents appointed under section twenty-four.

Power to make agreements with clients.

33. An Attorney-at-law, Pleader, Mukhtár or Revenue Agent may make an agreement in writing with any person retaining or employing him respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of any past or future services, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of business done or to be done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, either by a gross sum, or by commission or percentage, or by salary or otherwise, and either at the same or at a greater or at a less rate as or than the rate at which he would otherwise be entitled to be remunerated, subject to the provisions and conditions in this part of this Act contained:

Provided that when any such agreement is made in respect of business done or to be done in any suit, the amount payable under the agreement shall not be received by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an Officer of the High Court or District Court. If it appear to such Officer that the agreement is not fair and reasonable, he shall refer it to the Court for opinion, and the Court shall have power either to reduce the amount payable under the agreement or to order the agreement to be cancelled, and the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements in respect of the business done to be ascertained in the same manner as if no such agreement had been made.

Agreements to exclude further claims.

34. Such an agreement shall exclude any further claim of the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent beyond the terms of the agreement in respect of any services, fees, charges, or disbursements in relation to the conduct and completion of the business in reference to which the agreement is made, except such services, fees, charges or disbursements, if any, as are expressly excepted by the agreement.

Reservation of responsibility for negligence.

35. A provision in any such agreement that the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be liable for negligence, or that he shall be relieved from any responsibility to which he would otherwise be subject as such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, shall be wholly void.

Examination and enforcement of agreements.

36. No suit shall be brought upon any such agreement.

But the High Court or District Court may examine and determine every question respecting the validity or effect of any such agreement,

And on petition of any person, or the representative of any person, a party to such agreement, or alleged to be liable to pay, or claiming to be entitled to be paid, the costs, fees, charges or disbursements in respect of which the agreement is made,

if the agreement appear to such Court to be in all respects fair and reasonable,

the Court may, by order, enforce it in such manner and subject to such conditions, if any, as to the costs of the petition as the Court thinks fit:

Improper agreements may be set aside.

But if the agreement does not appear to the Court to be fair and reasonable, the Court may declare it to be void, and shall thereupon have power—

(a) to order the agreement to be given up to be cancelled,

(b) to direct the costs, fees, charges and disbursements incurred or chargeable in respect of the matters included therein to be ascertained in the same manner as if such agreement had not been made, and

(c) to make such order as to the costs of and relating to such petition, and the proceedings thereon, as the Court thinks fit.

Every petition under this section shall be chargeable under the Court Fees Act, 1870, as if it were a plaint.

Every order under this section may be enforced as if it were a decree.

38. Where an Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent has made an agreement with his client in pursuance of the provisions of this Act and anything has been done by such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent under the agreement, and before the agreement has been completely performed by him, such Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent dies or becomes incapable to act, an application may be made to the High Court or District Court by any party to the agreement, or by the representatives of any such party, and such Court shall thereupon have the same power to enforce or set aside such agreement, so far as the same may have been acted upon, as if such death or incapacity had not happened.

The Court, if it deem the agreement to be in all respects fair and reasonable, may order the amount due in respect of the past performance of the agreement to be ascertained by an officer of the Court, and such officer in ascertaining such amount shall have regard, so far as may be, to the terms of the agreement, and payment of the amount found to be due may be enforced in the same manner as if the agreement had been completely performed by the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

As to change of Pleader after agreement.

39. After any such agreement has been made, and before the conclusion of the business to which it relates, the client may, notwithstanding such agreement, change his Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent.

In case of such change the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent, party to such agreement, shall be deemed to have become incapable to act under the same within the meaning of section thirty-nine;

and upon any order being made for ascertaining the amount due to him in respect of the past performance of such agreement, the High Court or District Court shall direct the said officer to have regard to the circumstance under which such change has taken place;

and the Attorney, Pleader, Mukhtár or Agent shall not be deemed entitled to the full amount of the remuneration agreed to be paid to him, unless it appear that there has been no default, negligence, improper delay, or other conduct on his part affording reasonable ground to the client for the change.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has two primary objects, one, to consolidate the law relating to Pleaders, Mukhtárs and Revenue Agents, the other, to amend that law so far as it relates to agreements between certain legal practitioners and their clients.

In Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh, the law on the subject is contained in three Acts (XX of 1865, XXIX of 1865 and IX of 1866): in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay it is contained in Acts I of 1846, XX of 1853, Madras Regulation XIV of 1816, and Bombay Regulation II of 1827, chapter VI; in the Panjáb, Act IV of 1866 (sections ten, eleven, twelve, forty-four and fifty-one) contains some special provisions as to Pleaders in the Chief Court and their fees; and in British Burma the Recorders' Courts Act XXI of 1863 (sections sixteen, seventeen and eighteen) contains similar provisions. The Central Provinces and all British Burma outside the local limits of the Recorders' jurisdiction appear to be devoid of any law on the subject.

The present Bill consolidates and extends to the whole of British India such of the provisions of Acts XX of 1865 and XXIX of 1865 as appear to be generally applicable to the country.

With regard to agreements for remuneration between clients and their legal advisers, Act XX of 1865, section thirty-nine, permits such agreements to be made, and declares that they shall not be enforced otherwise than by regular suit. This provision, which has been held to place such agreements on the same footing as an ordinary contract between private persons, has, for obvious reasons, not worked satisfactorily. A flagrant instance of the evil of the present law is furnished by the recent case of Nuthoo Lall v. Budree Pershad, 1 Allahabad Reports 1; and though the High Court there held that it was not the duty of the lower Courts to decree (as they had done), on mere proof of the contract, the enforcement of an extortionate bargain between a pleader and his client, the legislature should not leave so important a rule to depend on the decision of a single High Court. The Bill repeals the section in question, and replaces it by a set of provisions modelled on the recent English Statute 33 & 34 Vic., Cap. 28 (to amend the law relating to the remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors), sections four, six, seven, eight, nine, eleven, thirteen and fourteen.

Section thirty-three of the Bill declares that pleaders, &c., may make agreements as to their remuneration, but that the amount agreed on shall not be paid until the agreement has been examined and allowed by an officer of the High Court or of the District Court. The Court is empowered either to reduce the amount or to order the agreement to be cancelled. The agreement (section thirty-four) will exclude further claims in respect of the business therein referred to. Provisions relieving the pleader, &c., from liability for negligence will be void (section thirty-five). No suits are to be brought on such agreements, but on petition of either party the Court may enforce or set it aside (section thirty-six). The Bill then declares void (a) purchases by a pleader of his client's interest in future suits or in unsatisfied decrees, and (b) agreements by which the pleader stipulates for payment only in the event of success. Provision is made (section thirty-eight) for the case of the pleader's death or incapacity, and the client is empowered (section thirty-nine) to change his pleader notwithstanding such agreement.

The other novel provisions of the Bill are only two.

At the recommendation of the Government of Bengal, all Mukhtárs are restored to the privilege of appearing, pleading and acting in Criminal Courts, which they formerly enjoyed under Act XX of 1865, and Mukhtárs heretofore admitted and enrolled in Lower Bengal as Revenue Agents are empowered (section seven) to appear and act in suits in Munsifs' Courts under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 (to amend the procedure in suits between landlord and tenant).

Penalties are provided (section forty-five) for Advocates, Pleaders and Mukhtárs removed or suspended by a High Court who practise after such removal or during such suspension.

SCHEDULE.

NUMBER AND YEAR.	TITLE OF ACT.
XXI of 1856	An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.
XXIII of 1860 ...	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal).
X of 1864	An Act to amend Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal).
XXVIII of 1864	An Act to provide for the extension of Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkaree Revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal) to the provinces under the control of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.
XXIII of 1868	An Act to give validity to certain Abkárí Rules in British Burma.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The law relating to the Ábkárí revenue in Northern India is now contained in four Acts, XXI of 1856, XXIII of 1860, X of 1864 and XXVIII of 1864. In British Burma the law is in the form of executive rules to which Act XXIII of 1868 gave a temporary validity. The primary object of this Bill is to substitute one enactment for all these Acts and Rules.

The law has been re-arranged, and the wording here and there improved; but no change has been made in its substance otherwise than by the omission of a few sections dealing with matters sufficiently provided for by the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) and the Sea Customs Act (VI of 1863).

The Bill does not extend to the Lower Provinces of Bengal; and the power of the local legislature to deal from time to time with the details of the Ábkárí law will thus remain unimpaired.

PAPER CURRENCY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the Government Paper Currency be taken into consideration. At the last meeting, a week ago, he had, in presenting the Report of the Select Committee, submitted a somewhat lengthy explanation of the views and intentions of the Government. He would therefore not trouble the Council with any further remarks at present, but would merely move that the Report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration. Any further remarks could best be made after he had had the advantage of hearing what Hon'ble Members had to say on the subject.

The Hon'ble MR. COWIE wished to express his satisfaction at the improvements and alterations in the working of the Currency system, which the Hon'ble the Financial Member so ably propounded to the Council last Friday. He (MR. COWIE) believed they would conduce to the profit of the Government, and the advantage of all those classes who were fortunate enough to have to deal with Currency Notes. If he were disposed to take exception to any part of the arrangement, it would be to the comparative smallness of the sums allotted to certain large towns for the encashment of Notes of other Circles. The Council would readily understand that, in some of the great centres of trade,—in cotton, jute or seed-producing districts,—a lákh of rupees was a mere drop in the ocean. Still, as he conceived the arrangement to be a tentative one, and believed the Executive Government would readily expand it when that could be done with safety, he offered no opposition.

MR. COWIE had heard the measures now introduced by the Hon'ble Member described as steps in the direction of that desirable consummation—a universal Note. If this meant that, throughout the length and breadth of this vast country, the holder of a certain piece of paper would always and everywhere be able to demand current coin for it, he confessed he thought the idea somewhat Utopian.

It might come in the course of years—so might chronic surpluses in financial budgets; but he (MR. COWIE) hardly expected to live long enough to see either.

The Hon'ble MR. BULLEN SMITH had already ventured to express his opinion in favour of the chief change made by the Select Committee in their report, and desired now only in a few words to express the great satisfaction which he felt at the unanimity with which this change had been determined on in Select Committee, and his hope that the Hon'ble Member might this day find the Bill in its amended form received with an equally unanimous expression of approval by the Council generally. It was only natural that, since this subject had been before the Council three weeks ago, a good deal of discussion should have taken place out of doors; but without wishing to undervalue the opinions of those who differed from him on this point; without saying that there was nothing to be said on the other side, he did not hesitate to say that he had heard nothing of sufficient weight to alter his previously conceived opinion, or to make him hesitate as a Member of this Council to give to the Executive the further discretionary power proposed by the Bill Only one of the many objections which were noticed and refuted by Sir Richard Temple at the last meeting of the Council, seemed to him at first sight to carry any real weight; it was the one specially put forward by the Committee of the British Indian Association, in the paper lately circulated, who stated broadly that, in their opinion, the time had not come for the issue of Notes of a lower denomination than now existed, and that the introduction of a five-rupee Note would be attended with loss and inconvenience to the poorer classes. Now, he could not but remember that equally strong objections had been entertained ten years ago to the ten-rupee Note, which had yet been a success, if any part of our currency could be said to have succeeded; and the more he thought upon the subject and looked into the manner in which the actual monetary transactions of the poorer classes of the people were carried on in this country, at least in Lower Bengal, the less did he fear any such result as that apprehended by the Committee of the British Indian Association, and the more was he convinced that the opinion expressed in this paper was likely to prove greatly exaggerated, and that the introduction of a five-rupee Note would not be attended with anything like the evil effects anticipated. He observed that the Committee of the Association spoke of this Currency being forced on the people, but the Committee had apparently forgotten that the Bill merely gave a discretionary power to the executive Government to issue this smaller Note at such time and to such extent as they deemed expedient. Looking to the extreme caution and absence of anything like precipitancy which had marked the procedure of Government in time past in reference to the Paper Currency, there was found a guarantee that there would be no attempt to force this new Note.

It seemed to him that if there was one single expression which was altogether inapplicable to the probable action of the Government in this matter, it was that expression. In the face of the opinions of general authorities of such eminence as the late Mr. Wilson and Sir Charles Wood, and in the face of the opinions of many having intimate local knowledge of India, such as the late Governor of Bombay and others, this Government had for ten long years abstained from issuing any Note smaller than ten rupees; he believed that the time had now come when the Government might with perfect safety and advantage, and indeed ought to, go a step further. He did not for a moment believe these five-rupee Notes would be the source of any inconvenience. On the contrary, he was of opinion that their issue would be a material benefit, which would be more and more acknowledged as time went on; their immediate and extensive circulation in the rural districts he did not expect, but he looked for steady increase, and was firmly convinced that these five-rupee Notes would gradually and slowly bridge over the great barrier hitherto existing between the Paper Currency scheme and the monetary transactions of the people generally.

As to the statement made by the Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple regarding the executive measures which were proposed to be adopted for facilitating the circulation of the currency, he could only say that he had listened to it with extreme satisfaction. These measures did not go so far as some desired; they did not go so far as he (MR. BULLEN SMITH) hoped Government would hereafter see its way to advance; but they were unquestionably a material move in the right direction, and in as far as general opinion on the subject had reached him, he believed there was no measure which, taken as a whole, would be received with greater satisfaction than that which the hon'ble gentleman now desired should pass.

The HON'BLE MR. ELLIS said that it would be mere waste of time if he detained the Council at length on the matter before them, as he had only to express his entire concurrence with what had fallen from the Hon'ble Mover and other Members. There was one point, however, which he would wish to notice; it was a point which had already been adverted to by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowie. It seemed to him that the sums which it was proposed to set apart at the different centres of trade up-country to meet the demand for Notes under this new system were wholly and entirely inadequate, and, as regards the great places of business for cotton in Western India, with which he (MR. ELLIS) was best acquainted, the proportion of a lákh of rupees set apart for the cashing of Notes seemed, as the Hon'ble Mr. Cowie had described it, a mere drop in the ocean. But MR. ELLIS would assume that it was not intended to proceed at these great centres of trade in a half-hearted way, and we might, he thought, assure the public that trade would be dealt with most liberally, and that, as far as was consistent with safety, every encouragement would be given to the extension of the system. Of course more than this no one could ask for; thus much at least, he was sure, his Hon'ble Colleague, Sir Richard Temple, would be prepared to assure us he would grant.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE said he would then, before moving that the Bill be passed, make a few brief observations on the remarks which had fallen from his hon'ble colleagues who had just spoken.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cowie had remarked with great justice upon the project often mooted, of having a universal Note: he considered that we were a long way off from such a desideratum, and hardly hoped he could live long enough to see it. SIR RICHARD TEMPLE believed he might say on this point that we had more nearly approached such a consummation than the hon'ble member at present probably imagined. He must observe that the phrase "a universal Note" might have two meanings: it might mean that a Note was a legal tender everywhere, or that any person might take any Note of any denomination or of any Circle to any Treasury in India, and obtain cash for it. It was in the second sense that he believed the phrase had been used. Now, that being the case, he submitted that the realization of that principle was not quite so Utopian as might be imagined. For, by the explanation which he had the honour to submit to this Council on the last occasion it would be apparent that, within certain limitations, which he had already once explained, and which he would further explain shortly, a person might now, or rather at an immediately future time, take any Note, of any Circle or of any denomination, to all the principal treasuries throughout India, and obtain cash for it. It was only a question of limitation. Up to a certain limit we had already something very much like a universal Note.

Well, that point brought him to the consideration of the limit. His hon'ble friends Mr. Cowie and Mr. Bullen Smith, and his hon'ble colleague Mr. Ellis, had all three remarked with great force on the apparent inadequacy of the amount we proposed to set apart at the principal district treasuries for the cashing of Notes. He must just explain further what that limitation really meant. He stated, no doubt, last Friday, that it was proposed, in the first instance, to place a lákh of rupees at each one of these principal treasuries, as a sort of primary reserve—as something to start with—as a nucleus for further operations. The hope was, of course, that as soon as the public found that, at certain Treasuries, Notes could be cashed by the Collectors, they would begin themselves to take out Notes from those Treasuries for local circulation. Such an operation would cause a further considerable increase to the cash-reserves; because Notes were only issued in exchange for cash. At certain seasons there would be a considerable demand for Notes in exchange for silver; and at others there would be a demand for cash in exchange for Notes. So there would be at many seasons a very considerable accumulation of cash in the Currency chests. Well, there being that accumulation, the chests could stand a considerable run—a very considerable drain—at certain other seasons. Seeing that effect on the Treasury chests—seeing there was a large number of Notes out in a certain district,—seeing that the Currency chest was assuming large dimensions, it would be our endeavour to support its operations freely by providing rather larger reserves in the District Treasury to meet a season of withdrawal, so far as permitted by the state of the general reserves and the cash-balances of the country, which were also pledged for the security of the Paper Currency. It would be done in this way. It might be that, at the great centres of trade, the Presidency towns and other places, we had not only very large cash-balances at the General Treasuries, but we had also very extensive Currency reserves in cash, far exceeding what we were bound to maintain by law. If we observed that, at such places as the cotton districts, Akola, Dharwar and Ahmedabad, and at Dacca in the Eastern Provinces, where there were very large transactions in jute, and certain other places which would no doubt occur to the Council,—when we saw that the Currency operations at such places were getting so large, we might from our cash-balances strengthen our cash-reserves at those places to support the Currency, and we could recoup ourselves by taking an equivalent from the Currency reserves at other places. So that the Council would see we had the means and the power, if we liked, to "deal liberally with the trade of the country," as his hon'ble friends had observed, "to help it as far as we possibly could," and to facilitate increased circulation in the manner which we had so lately undertaken, and that we had the intention to do so. In that respect he fully bore out what had fallen from his hon'ble colleague, Mr. Ellis, who very justly observed that it was the intention of the Government (it was certainly SIR RICHARD TEMPLE'S intention, as far as he was able,) to make the measure as successful as we could; to do something more than contribute "a mere drop in the ocean," and "not to halt half-way;" to deal with the trade most liberally as far as might be consistent with the safety of the Currency. All these expressions he cordially adopted. He had only to add that he hoped that if we dealt liberally with the trade, the trade also would deal fairly with us. There must in these matters be a certain amount of trust: we were not to suppose that a lákh of rupees would be put into a Treasury to be instantly drained to the disadvantage of the Paper Currency. It was expected that the trade would perceive the advantages of the Paper Currency; that they would take out Notes sometimes, and demand cash at others, in exchange for their Notes. He was sure that if our arrangements were appreciated, and a local circulation added in the manner he anticipated, there would be no practical difficulty whatever.

There was one more point to which he asked permission to refer. He had seen it stated in various quarters, in respect of the five-rupee Notes, that if the measure was so extremely clear as he had represented it to be,—if the arguments and objections against it were so easily refuted,—then why, in the name of common sense, had not this been done some years ago? Why had we waited for "ten long years of preparation?" He conceived he had a very clear answer to that: he had plain reasons to give for the delay. It must be remembered that the proposition for the issue of five-rupee Notes ten years ago was deliberately rejected by the Government of India, and that that rejection was adhered to despite the adverse criticism of such an eminent authority as the then Secretary of State for India. That was the serious decision of the highest authority in India, and could not be set aside lightly, although, in the estimation of the present Government and of this Council, the arguments in favour of a five-rupee Note were very clear. That was not the universal opinion, but he hoped it was the preponderating opinion. Still, it must not be forgotten there were many well-informed persons who thought differently. A prominent instance of this had been brought forward to-day, for, as had been observed, the British Indian Association were deliberately against it: though we thought our course clear, the Association did not think so. The main objection formerly raised was that we must test these Notes by experience. The only answer to that was by reference to actual facts, which could not be tested without the lapse of some years. The advantage now was that we were able to answer these objections with a long array of facts. Again, we were rather unwilling to bring forward a project for the issue of five-rupee Notes a second time without being able to state to the Council and the public what additional facilities we were prepared to offer for cashing our Notes in the interior. He was sanguine that these reasons would be considered by the Council as fully valid to account for the delay which had occurred in bringing forward this measure.

Before he concluded he would desire to offer, on his own part, his thanks to his hon'ble friends the mercantile members of the Council for the support they had given to Government in this matter,—a matter in which their opinion necessarily carried very great weight; and he could assure his hon'ble friends that it was his conviction that the remarks they had made from time to time in this Council on this subject had proved, and would continue to prove, of very material assistance to the Financial Department of the Government of India.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

COLONEL the Hon'ble R. STRACHEY moved that, in section 11, clause (b), for the words "thousand tolas," the words "one hundred and eighty thousand grains" be substituted.

Also that, in the last paragraph of section 17, for the words "hundred tolas," the words "eighteen thousand grains of standard fineness" be substituted.

The Motions were put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION.—Arrangements have now been completed for transmitting to the Secretary of State, for the use of would-be competitors in Europe, five tons of dried stems of the Rhea and two tons of semi-prepared fibre in that state to which it is readily reduced by existing machinery.

2. Dr. Jamieson reports that Rhea cultivation is being vigorously pushed forward at Saharunpore, and it seems probable that by the 1st of April a few tons of dried stems will be available for distribution to parties in India desirous of making experiments with the same. These stems will be distributed gratis, but applicants must pay for the carriage of the same from Saharunpore to the locality at which they wish to receive them, as well as for all packing expenses.

3. Regard being had to the delay which has unavoidably occurred, and must still occur, in furnishing would-be competitors in Europe and India with specimens of the plant for experimental purposes, His Excellency the Governor General in Council has resolved to postpone the commencement of the regular trials until April 1872. During the whole hot weather and rains of 1871, however, considerable quantities of the fresh stem will be available at Saharunpore, and during this period intending competitors whose machinery is in a sufficiently forward state, and who may be desirous of testing the same on the green plant, will be afforded all practicable facilities for doing this at the Government Plantation, so far as the material available will permit. During these preliminary experiments the owners of machinery must provide such motive power as may be necessary to test their machines to their own satisfaction, but during the regular trials the Government proposed to place one or more small steam engines at the plantation to work the machines which may be allowed to compete.

4. Persons desirous of obtaining supplies of the dried stem for experimental purposes in this country must submit applications in the Form A prior to the 1st of March 1871, and persons desirous of testing their machinery at the Government Plantation at Saharunpore during the hot weather and rains of 1871 must submit their applications in the Form B prior to the 1st of April 1871. Applications in either Form are to be addressed to the Secretary to Government of India, Home Department.

5. It being essential, in view to the provision of a sufficient supply of the fresh Rhea stem for the trial of the machinery, to ascertain beforehand the number of machines that are likely to take part in the competition, it has been decided to fix the 1st May 1871 as the date prior to which notices of intention to compete for the Government prizes should be submitted. Machines, in regard to which notice has not been given prior to that date, will only be admitted to the competition after a sufficient supply of stems has been allotted for the trial of those machines in regard to which the requisite notice has been duly filed prior to the 1st May 1871. Notices of intention to compete should be in the Form C, and should be addressed as in the case of Applications A and B.

NOTIFICATIONS.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 26th January 1871.

No. 478.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following advertisement in substitution of the one published under Notification No. 145, dated the 11th January 1870 :—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rhea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and, no doubt, might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost—all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included—of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

Owing to the delay that has taken place in maturing the preliminary arrangements, the Government of India has decided that the competition will not be held until the 1st April 1872, thus affording a much longer time than was originally intended for the preparation of machines and their transport to the locality appointed for the competition. The Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore, in the North-Western Provinces, has been fixed as the place where the public competition will be held, and the Government of India will provide one or more small steam-engines to work the machines during the public competition.

All machinery, &c., intended for trial must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to the Saharunpore Rhea Plantation, and kept ready before the 1st April 1872, to be there worked under their own supervision, or under that of their representatives, for a sufficient length of time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. Arrangements have now been completed for the supply of dried Rhea stems to intending competitors, both in this country and in Europe, to enable them to form a correct idea of the nature of the plant which their machinery will be required to deal with. Persons in Europe desirous to obtain small supplies of dried Rhea stems for the above purpose, should apply to the Secretary of State for India. Intending competitors in this country, desirous of obtaining supplies of the article, must submit applications to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, in the Form A hereto annexed, prior to the 1st of March 1871; and those who are desirous of testing their machinery on the fresh Rhea at the Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore during the year 1871, must submit their applications to the same authority, in the Form B hereto annexed, prior to the 1st April 1871. The former will have to pay the expenses that may be incurred in packing and despatching the stems. The latter will have to provide all labor and motive power necessary for, and to pay all expenses connected with, their experiments: the fibre turned out by their machines during such experiments to become the property of Government.

9. In order to enable the Government to arrange for the provision of a sufficient stock of fresh Rhea stems for the purposes of the formal competition in April 1872, it is necessary to ascertain beforehand the number of machines that are likely to take part in it; and intending competitors are therefore requested to submit, prior to the 1st May 1871, and in the Form C also hereto annexed, notices of intention to compete.

To Government of Madras (telegram), dated 24th January 1871.

RESOLUTION.—Ever since the introduction of the cultivation of the cinchona plant in this country, the Government of India has watched with the deepest interest the progress of the experiment, feeling convinced that its success would be fraught with the most beneficial results to the whole population of India. The advantages to be derived from the successful cultivation of cinchona cannot be over-estimated, as the object is to secure to the country at large the greatest medical boon that could be afforded to it,—that is, to place within the reach of the masses of the people, at the lowest possible rates, the only effective specific that science has yet discovered for the commonest of Indian diseases.

2. That the cinchona plant, C. succirubra, at any rate, can be grown to any extent in British Sikhim has now been indisputably established by the results that have already been achieved at the Government plantations. And the Governor General in Council fully believes that at little present cost, and with a certainty of considerable future revenue, forests of cinchona may be reared in Sikhim which, by furnishing large quantities of quinine, may hereafter prove a blessing not only to India, but to the civilized world.

3. Already the Government plantations in Sikhim yield a considerable supply of excellent bark, and year by year a rapid increase in this supply may be looked for; the Governor General in Council, therefore, thinks that the time has come for a preliminary decision as to how this supply can best be utilized. This view of the case is confirmed by a very interesting report submitted by Mr. Clarke in regard to the experimental manufacture of amorphous quinine at Da jeeling. His Excellency in Council is of opinion that the best mode of settling the many doubtful points connected with this important question is the appointment of a Commission to enquire into and report on the whole subject; and in communication with His Excellency the Governor of Madras and His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, he is pleased to nominate the gentlemen named in the margin to form the proposed Commission.

Mr Clarke, Dr Simpson, Mr. Broughton. } Members

4. His Excellency in Council is well aware that any conclusions that may now be arrived at will doubtless need considerable modifications, when a larger experience affords better data than at present exist. He is at the same time of opinion that it is essential to adopt without delay some regular system, the best that can be devised in the existing state of our knowledge, for dealing with the yearly increasing produce of the cinchona plantations.

5. The Commission will have to consider, among other matters, whether on general as well as economical grounds, it would be best—

(1) to send home the whole of the bark which bears a marketable value; or

(2) to extract by a single process all soluble matter from the bark, and send home the gross proceeds of the first precipitation; or

(3) to proceed further with the manufacture in India; and, if so, how much further; whether (a) only so far as is necessary to separate the several alkaloids from the resin, coloring matter, and other foreign elements which the first precipitate will contain; or (b) as far as the manufacture of the pure sulphate of quinine?

6. Should the Commission recommend the second or third alternative, they will have to consider what processes will, under all the circumstances of the case, be most likely to prove appropriate.

7. A certain percentage of the total yearly yield of bark will, owing to its extreme poverty in alkaloids, always be unfit for the home market; and it will be for the Commission to decide how this bark may be most profitably dealt with here.

8. It is also believed that a valuable febrifuge can be readily extracted from the leaf of some species of the cinchona; and this point also, as well as many other kindred questions which will suggest themselves as the enquiry proceeds, will appropriately form subjects for the consideration of the Commission, whose sittings should be in the first instance in Calcutta, but who may later, if it be considered desirable, be deputed to visit the plantations themselves.

9. The Commission will carry on their enquiries under the orders of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, and will submit their final report to that authority.

ORDERED, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Government of Bengal for information and guidance.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

Fort William, the 19*th December* 1870.

No. 1175 of 1870.

In order to prevent any misunderstanding and the necessity for further references on the subject, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council is pleased to notify that, subject to the charge for rent laid down in G. G. O. No. 859 of 11th October 1866, Warrant Officers of grades below that of Deputy Assistant Commissary are entitled to be provided with quarters by the Public Works Department, whether by purchase, hire, or erection, agreeably to Chapter XI, Section II, paragraph 1 of that Department's Code.

2. The rules prescribed in the Public Works Department Code, as extracted in the margin for facility of reference, will be strictly adhered to in all cases in which it may be necessary to hire houses for the accommodation of the Warrant Officers alluded to.

Extract from Chapter XI of Public Works Code, 3rd Edition

SECTION II, para 1.—"It will be the duty of the Officers of the Public Works Department, under the orders of the Government, or in cases of emergency on requisition of the local authorities, to provide quarters and all other necessary buildings, to the extent allowed by the Regulations, for troops and public Military establishments entitled to and requiring accommodation, and for the families of soldiers on actual service. The Executive Engineer will arrange this under sanction as above, by allotting public buildings which may be vacant, or which can be vacated, or where no suitable or available public buildings already exist, by erecting purchasing or hiring buildings, as according to his judgment may be most advantageous in each case, obtaining previous sanction when there is time to do so, and reporting his proceedings through the usual channel for the information of Government."

SECTION II, para 3.—"Should buildings be hired by the Military authorities without the intervention of the Public Works Department, and without the sanction of the Government of India, the Executive Engineer shall not be at liberty to defray the charge from the funds of the Public Works Department until sanction is obtained."

SECTION II, para 4.—"Excepting in the case of buildings required for the accommodation of troops, &c., as above limited in paragraphs 2 and 3, and for buildings required for the use of the Public Works Department, Executive Engineers shall in no case disburse the rent of hired premises, unless specially ordered to do so by the Government or Administration under which they are serving."

SECTION IV, para 28.—"In cases where rent for public quarters in charge of the Barrack Master has to be charged to Warrant or Non Commissioned Officers on staff employ, Barrack Masters are required to submit a monthly statement of such quarters to the Executive Engineer, who will recover the amounts from the Departments to which the occupants belong."

3. On account of quarters provided to the Warrant Officers in question in Presidency towns, the Public Works Department will, in addition to the rent payable by those Officers, be entitled to receive credit for the amount of Presidency house-rent admissible to them, in conformity with the ruling contained in Financial Department's Resolution No. 1069 of 14th August 1868, in the case of the Presidency house-rent of Commissioned Officers.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Report by the Directors of the Bank of Bengal for the Half-year ended 31st December 1870.

The Directors have the pleasure to submit to the Proprietors their usual periodical report on the Bank's transactions at Head Office and Branches.

The money market during the past half-year has been characterised by uninterrupted dulness and inactivity, the rates at which the Bank offered to discount remaining unchanged during the whole period. Meanwhile the nature and safety of the Bank's advances has had the special attention of the Board, and measures have been taken to restrict the discounts at Head Office and Branches within safe limits.

The Bank's operations for the past six months at Head Office and Branches show a clear profit of Rs. 6,81,259-9-5; from this, after making ample provision for all bad and doubtful debts, the Directors have declared a dividend at 5½ per cent. per annum free of Income Tax, and carried forward the balance of Rs. 5,935-14-2 to credit of Profit and Loss for the current half-year.

The Directors have the satisfaction of informing the Proprietors that the Branches continue to work satisfactorily.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND,
The 27th January 1871.

"Mr. T. B. Tracy having requested that the General Meeting will decide whether he is liable under Article I of the Rules to pay subscription while on furlough, the Managers submit the particulars of his case.

"Mr. Tracy, vacating his appointment, proceeded on furlough on the 10th of January 1868. He was then in the receipt of a furlough allowance of £500 per annum on which no Fund subscriptions were exacted.

"The new Furlough Rules came into operation from 1st July 1868, and he had the option given him by Government of electing whether the remainder of his furlough should be taken under the new Rules or the old. He elected the new Rules, because the moiety of his average salary for the three years previous to his taking leave amounted to £514-1-6 per annum, and accordingly on his return to India he was informed that subscription was due under Article 1 of the Rules from 1st July 1868, the date of his accepting the new Rules, to the date of his return, 17th December 1869, and the sum he was called upon to pay was Rs 315.

"Mr. Tracy allows that he was permitted to draw the equivalent of his average salary for the three years preceding his departure on furlough, but urges that as he held no appointment, he cannot properly be said to have drawn salary while on leave within the meaning of Rule 1.

"The Managers are of opinion that the Rule covers his case."

Proposed by Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Westland, that the accounts be passed, and the Managers' proceedings in Mr. Tracy's case be confirmed.

Carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Westland, seconded by Mr. Wilson, that the following gentlemen be elected Managers for the ensuing year, 1871:—

V. H. Schalch, Esq.	A. M Monteath, Esq.
The Hon'ble A. Eden.	H. Beverley, Esq.

W. M. Souttar, Esq.

Carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman.

"The rules that have been amended are IV, VIII, and XXX.

"To Article IV has been added the following paragraph:—

"The subscriptions of annuitants or retired subscribers shall be regulated in the manner provided in Article VIII."

Article VIII has been amended as follows:—

FORMER RULE.

"First—Subscribers, who may hereafter retire from the service on annuities, wishing to secure to their widows and children the full benefits of the Fund, must, on retirement, make up the amount of their subscriptions with interest to Rs. 25,000, and must also continue their contributions at the same rates on their annuities as those levied from subscribers in the service on their allowances, and under the same conditions in regard to minimum payments and liability to increase or decrease of rates; an option being allowed to each subscriber of paying up once for all, either at the time of resigning the service or at any subsequent period, the full value of his contributions, according to the Tables of Mortality, which, on the advice of an Actuary, may be adopted by the Managers. This commutation will be calculated at 5 per cent. in the following manner: ordinary subscriptions, on the life of the subscriber alone, additional subscriptions on the joint lives of husband and wife, and extra contributions for children on the joint lives of father and child. But such settlement will be open to re-adjustment, if the necessities of the Fund should be found to require an enhanced rate of subscription, and every retired subscriber will also be liable to pay in the same manner for each child afterwards born, and, in case of subsequent marriage, the additional premium as a married subscriber."

"Second.—But subscribers hereafter so retiring from the service may, at their option, by making up the amount of their subscriptions with interest either to Rs. 12,500, or to Rs. 6,250, and by contributing or compounding for their contributions at the same rates on their annuities as those levied from subscribers in the service on their allowances, secure to their families, on the same conditions as above, in the former case one-half, and in the latter one-quarter of the amount of pensions and other allowances granted to the family of a subscriber dying in the service, or of an annuitant who has made up on retirement the full amount of Rs. 25,000."

AMENDED RULE.

"First.—Subscribers, who may hereafter retire from the service on annuities, wishing to secure to their widows and children the full benefits of the Fund, must, on retirement, make up the amount of their subscriptions with interest to Rs. 25,000, and must also continue their contributions on their annuities at half the rates levied from subscribers in the service on their allowances, and under the same conditions in regard to minimum payments and liability to increase or decrease of rates; an option being allowed to each subscriber of paying up once for all, either at the time of resigning the service or at any subsequent period, the half value of his contributions, according to the Tables of Mortality, which, on the advice of an Actuary, may be adopted by the Managers. This commutation will be calculated at 5 per cent. in the following manner, the total being reduced thereafter by one-half: ordinary subscriptions on the life of the subscriber alone, additional subscriptions on the joint lives of husband and wife, and extra contributions for children on the joint lives of father and child. But such settlement will be open to re-adjustment, if the necessities of the Fund should be found to require an enhanced rate of subscription, and every retired subscriber will also be liable to pay in the same manner for each child afterwards born, and, in case of subsequent marriage, the additional premium as a married subscriber."

"Second.—But subscribers hereafter so retiring from the service may, at their option, by making up the amount of their subscriptions with interest either to Rs. 12,500 or to Rs. 6,250, and by continuing or compounding for their contributions on their annuities at half the rates levied from subscribers in the service on their allowances, secure to their families, on the same conditions as above, in the former case one-half and in the latter one-quarter of the amount of pensions and other allowances granted to the family of a subscriber dying in the service, or of an annuitant who has made up on retirement the full amount of Rs. 25,000."

"Third.—Provided that in the case of a subscriber marrying after retirement his contributions or commutation payment in lieu thereof shall, for his wife and for his children, the issue of such marriage, be taken at full rates."

"To Article XXX has been added the following additional paragraph:—

"Provided also that the Managers may continue the whole or any part of his pension to any son of a deceased subscriber, who, at any time subsequent to the 31st March 1868, may have attained or may attain to the age of 21 years, and who may be proved to their satisfaction to be wholly incapacitated from gaining his livelihood, such incapacity being produced by causes beyond his control, and being duly certified from time to time in such way as to the Managers may seem sufficient."

The widow of the late Mr. A. A. Roberts having applied for the continuance of her son Lawrence Henry's pension beyond the age of 21 years as provided for under Article 30 of the rules recently amended, the Managers have informed her that, subject to the confirmation of this meeting, they are willing to continue her son's pension, but that for the protection of the Fund it is necessary that she should submit in original the certificate of a Member of the Medical Board of the India Office, testifying to the inability of her son to earn his livelihood. A like certificate must be furnished every five years, while it will also be necessary for her to forward annually a certificate from her family physician of the continuance of the incapacity. Messrs. Coutts and Co. have received instructions to advance one quarter's pension in anticipation of the receipt of the certificate.

The Managers have received a similar application from Mrs. Craigie on behalf of her son Manson who attained his majority on the 18th November 1867, but as the rule expressly provides that only those sons of deceased subscribers, who came of age subsequent to 31st March 1868, are to be admitted to these new benefits, they have informed her that her son cannot claim anything further from the Fund.

The attention of annuitants has been called to the amended Article VIII of the rules, and a letter has been addressed to each annuitant who has compounded, informing him of the amount of commutation payment refundable, and requesting him to apply for the refund.

The amount to be refunded is £6,825-18 or Rs. 68,259. Mr. Brown calculated that the sum refundable would be Rs. 88,731.

This difference is mainly owing to the fact that the actuary assumed that all annuitants were in the receipt of the full annuity of £1,000.

A letter has also been addressed to annuitants who subscribe quarterly from their annuities, advising them of the reduced subscription payable in future, and informing them at what reduced rate a commutation may be affected.

The contributions from retired subscribers for the quarter ending 31st October amounted to Rs. 14,408. The future quarterly receipts will be Rs. 7,204 only.

The actuary calculated the loss by composition from annuitants to be Rs. 2,56,990. The detailed calculation in the Fund Office shows that the actual loss will be Rs. 2,34,323.

Mr. P. H. Egerton has under Article V of the rules of the Fund incurred a fine of Rs. 50 on account of his failure to report the birth of his son within the prescribed period of a month. Mr. Egerton urges that the omission was accidental, and that notice was given in good time to secure payment of the subscription. He has been informed that the reason assigned is in view of the stringency of the rule not sufficient to exempt him from the penalty.

Enquiry having been made whether, under the revised Article XXX, a son incapacitated from earning his livelihood would on his father's death be admitted to Fund benefits even though he were at that time over the age of 21, and had therefore never as a minor been an incumbent on the Fund, the Managers have decided that such cases are not within the rule. They are however desirous of having the rules amended so as to meet such cases. They will under Article XVII (18) of the rules advertise amendments of Articles IV and XXX as follow—

That to Article IV be added the words:—

"It shall be optional to a subscriber to continue his payments at ordinary or at widower rates as the case may be on account of any son who may on his attaining the age of 21 years be reported to the Managers to be wholly incapacitated by reason of infirmity from earning his livelihood. Such payments must be continued up to the date of the subscriber's decease, and the Managers must be satisfied that the infirmity was not produced by causes within the control of the invalid."

And that to Article XXX (31) be added the words:—

"Provided further that the Managers may, under similar conditions as to medical certificates as in the above case, admit to Fund benefits either in whole or in part the son of a subscriber even though such son shall have previously attained his majority, if he is wholly incapacitated from earning his livelihood, provided that subscriptions have been paid on his account under Article IV up to the date of his father's decease. Should the Managers decide to reject such an application for admission to Fund benefits, they shall refund to the legal representatives of the subscriber, but without interest, all subscriptions received on account of such incapacitated son from the close of his twenty-first year."

This rule, it is proposed, shall have effect from 1st January 1871.

The accounts of the past year, 1869-70, are submitted.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

FISH-PASS FOR ANICUTS OR WEIRS ON INDIAN RIVERS.

Nos 15-23 I., dated 18th January 1871.

RESOLUTION—By the Govt. of India, P. W. DEPT.

Read the following letter :—

Dated 10th January, 1871.

From—F. DAY, ESQ., M. D.,

To—The Secy. to Govt. of India, P. W. DEPT.

After I had examined some of the Madras anicuts, I suggested the construction in two of them of a new form of fish-pass to enable the Hilsa and other fish to pass those obstructions for the purpose of breeding. I have now some additional propositions to make respecting that fish-pass, and which, if carried out, will remove the necessity of constant superintendence to work it, as well as improve its efficiency.

I would first observe that having been to Europe for a few months on sick certificate, I have availed myself of the opportunity of inspecting most of the principal Salmon ladders in England and Wales, more particularly at the following places :—Tewkesbury, Worcester, and three others within 9 miles of that town, Llangollen, Ervistock, and two in Northumberland on the Coquet at Acklinton and Felton.

The principle for Salmon passes is to permit the passage of migratory breeding fish, over or through obstructions, but they are not intended for assisting the descent of the fry which pass over these obstructions during floods.

A free gap, when the height of the weir is not too great, is undoubtedly the best. This might be likened to one of the under-sluices in a Madras anicut in which a narrow gap extends through the weir to the bed of the river, but unless the height of the weir is not very considerable, the current is too impetuous for fish to stem, and this is invariably the case in the narrow Indian under-sluices. It is different, however, where there are large openings, as in the Cuttack and Midnapoor weirs, where sufficient facilities exist for fish to pass either way, provided those sluices are left open at least one day a week, except in the very dry season, when fish do not require to ascend or descend streams.

The second European plan is that of ladders, steps or a series of small pools which, by a gradual ascent, allow fish to ascend one side of an obstruction, or up its face, and these may be straight or bent at various angles. I do not consider any of these forms suited to our Indian rivers, provided anything superior can be constructed for admitting ? they allow breeding fish to ascend, they have no means by which the fry could descend as the river begins to subside.

In my reports I have already entered pretty fully upon what the majority of the fishes which frequent the Indian fresh-waters are, and have divided them into the strictly fresh-water ones that are either migratory or non-migratory; and the marine varieties which ascend large rivers to breed, or to prey upon their weaker neighbours. As a natural result, in rivers entirely blocked by anicuts, the annihilation of the migratory species must sooner or later inevitably occur, unless some remedy is applied, and which will not only allow the breeding fish to pass the anicut up-stream to deposit their ova, but allow the young fish to descend.

Fish ascend rivers when the water is discoloured and rising, being evidently aware that only at that time will the fords be covered, and then they can pass upwards, but they do not appear to attempt this during very heavy freshes. The fish-pass to be desired should permit the ascent of a sufficient number of breeding fish during moderate freshes, and the descent of the fry as the river falls, but it is not required during the very dry season of the year.

Report to the Madras Government, dated 1st December 1868.

I proposed* employing the vents of the under-sluices as passes by forming them into a species of lock by instituting a second series of shutters at the lower end as explained in the plan in the margin, or else by extending the piers down the apron, but on the same principle. I suggested "the lowest one, and a half foot of the shutter should be in the form of a movable trap-door, which can be elevated by chains from the inside;" in fact, that the lowest 1½ feet of the shutters could be raised at pleasure, and that a shutter-man should be employed to work these doors on the same principle as a lock, but regularly twice daily, keeping the upper one closed when the lower is open, and vice versâ.

Plan of pass

The above principle I still believe will succeed, but certain modifications will be necessary.

First, there must be a covering or ceiling over the anterior half, or two-thirds of this under-sluice, or the water will dash over the upper-shutter into the chamber, and may wash out or injure the fish, whilst the whole of the chamber forming the pass cannot be covered in for reasons to be specified.

Having thus planned the chamber with its anterior half or two-thirds covered by ceiling, it has to be converted into a passage for fish. The plan in the margin shows the two openings I propose making in the front shutter. The lower opening I would have 1½ feet square, and the upper one 1 foot square. These openings, of course, let water into the chamber.

Elevation of Front Shutters

At the lower-shutters I would also propose a somewhat similar plan, only with one opening only, 1½ feet square, and at the opposite corner from the one in the front shutter. These openings, which are quite large enough for migratory breeding Indian fresh-water fishes, may have trap-doors, so that the Irrigation Officers may close them when necessary.

In this chamber more water is entering than can go through the lower opening, consequently it will be kept full, the surplus flowing over the top of the lower shutters; owing to this chamber being full, the upper openings are backed up by the water in it, decreasing the force of the rush, and leaving such a passage that fish can go through.

Apron
Elevation of Lower Shutters.

As fish only ascend during the moderate floods, the opening in the lower-shutter will be backed up by the water in the river, the depth of which will be several feet above the level of its upper margin. Whilst by having it close to the side of a pier, the fish can slip round to the opening.

I constructed one on a scale of an inch to a foot when in England, and having had it properly fixed in a stream, I tried some gold carp, and three passed through. I do not, however, assert it is sure to succeed, for only experiments can prove such, but it obviates manual labour; it leaves a free passage through for fish ascending or descending, whilst the cost would be very inconsiderable, and the result most probably successful.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this communication be forwarded to the Government of Madras, in continuation of Public Works Department No. 185 I, dated 24th June 1869, to which an early reply should be submitted.

Ordered also, that a copy of the communication be forwarded to the Local Governments and Administrations marginally noted, for information, and for circulation generally in the Irrigation Branch of the Public Works Department.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF 1871.

DATE FIXED BY HER MAJESTY'S COMMISSIONERS FOR THE RECEPTION OF INDIAN ARTICLES AT KENSINGTON.

No ____, dated ALLAHABAD, the 11th January 1871.

FROM

HARRY RIVETT-CARNAC, ESQ., C.S.,

Member of, and Honorary Secretary to, the Central Committee in India for the International Exhibition of 1871;

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE LOCAL COMMITTEE IN*

SIR,—I am directed by the Central Committee to forward for your information copy of a letter from Colonel Scott, intimating that Her Majesty's Commissioners for the International Exhibition have been pleased to accede to the recommendation of the Central Committee, and to extend until the 31st of March next the time fixed for the receipt at Kensington of articles from India.

2. The Central Committee are confident that the Local Committees will spare no effort to meet the wishes of Her Majesty's Commissioners, who, although they have, at the pressing request of the Central Committee, granted this concession, are at the same time most anxious that the Indian collection should reach Kensington at as early a date as possible.

3. The contributions sent by the Bombay route should reach that port by the second week in February, the cases being addressed, as noticed in my Circular E, to "The Agent to the Central Committee, Bombay." The Committees at the other seaports will be able to ascertain, in communication with the Agents of the several Steamship Companies, the latest safe date for despatching their collections, so that they may reach London by the last week in March.

4. The Central Committee particularly beg that the preliminary lists and catalogues, noticed in my Circular C, and required by Her Majesty's Commissioners, may be forwarded to the Honorary Secretary at Allahabad as soon as possible.

5. Some of the lists and catalogues have already been received from the Committees in Bengal, the Punjab, and Oudh, and a portion of the Oudh collection has been despatched to Bombay The Central Committee hope that the arrangements of the other Committees will soon be in an equally forward state.

I have the honor to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient Servant,

HARRY RIVETT-CARNAC,

Member of, and Hony. Secy. to, the Central Committee.

ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITIONS OF SELECTED WORKS OF FINE AND INDUSTRIAL ART AND SCIENTIFIC INVENTIONS:

Under the direction of Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851.

UPPER KENSINGTON GORE, LONDON, W.,
28*th November* 1870.

SIR,—I am directed by Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th ultimo, enclosing a copy of a Resolution of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council, appointing a Central Committee in India to give effect to the wishes of Her Majesty's Commissioners in regard to the International Exhibition of Select Works of Fine and Industrial Art to be held at Kensington in May next.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have heard with much gratification of the important steps which His Excellency the Viceroy has caused to be taken in India to secure a worthy representation of certain classes of the industry of that country in the Exhibition of next year.

Under the circumstances to which you have been good enough to call attention in your letter, Her Majesty's Commissioners direct me to state that they will be prepared to except India from strict adherence to the rules which have been laid down, specifying the dates at which goods should arrive at the Exhibition buildings.

Her Majesty's Commissioners trust that the Central Committee will be in a position to furnish lists of the contributors from India, comprised under the various classes of the Exhibition, and other necessary information for the catalogue, at a date considerably anterior to the 31st of March next.

I am, however, to add that, although the Commissioners desire to receive the goods themselves as much before the 31st of March as possible, they will be prepared to reserve the space allotted to India until that date, in accordance with the wish of the Central Committee, and on the assurance which you have been good enough to convey in your letter that that Committee will make every effort to avoid delay in forwarding to London the contributions from India to the International Exhibition of 1871.

I have honor to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient Servant,

HENRY D. SCOTT, Lieut. Col., R. E.,
Secretary.

This is principally due to the Baree Doab Canal, and is to a great extent the result of the introduction of the new water-rates. Cultivators in the upper part of the Doab have in many cases declined to take water since the new rates were enforced, and the water thus saved passed down the Canal to the drier tracts below Lahore and Umritsur, and was gladly taken and utilized.

CORONERS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN moved that the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the laws relating to Coroners be taken into consideration. He did not know that this Bill was of any special importance, but he would take the opportunity of saying, and he thought the Council would like to hear, something of the progress of the scheme of consolidation of which this Bill formed a part and of which it supplied an illustration. The Bill repealed four Acts and consolidated them into one, and in that way effected a considerable simplification of the law. But besides this it codified or converted into express propositions a considerable body of law which at present existed in a loose, ill-ascertained condition; and had to be discovered by reference to English text-books. The Coroners of the presidency towns were appointed under 33 Geo. III, c. 52, s. 157, which (with much verbiage) gave them the same jurisdiction within those towns as Coroners in England had. The effect of this was to introduce into the presidencies the English law relating to Coroners. Now the English law relating to Coroners was one of the most curiously antiquated, and in some points he would say the worst, parts of the whole body of the English law. A Coroner, as those who were conversant with the matter knew, was one of the most ancient of English legal officers. His jurisdiction was based on a Statute which was passed about six hundred years ago, namely, in the fourth year of the reign of Edward I; though Coroners existed at a much earlier date. At all events they possessed under the Statute of Edward I, and otherwise, powers which they had been discharging in England ever since. Some of these powers were of a very singular nature. One was, that it was the duty of the Coroner to find what were called deodands; and it was singular that, although some years ago deodands were abolished in England, they had legal existence at the present time in this country. The law about deodands was something so strange that one hardly knew how to discuss the matter. The theory of the law of deodands seemed to be that the thing which caused a man's death was more or less a cursed thing; but whatever the reason might be, the rule was that the matter, property, or chattel, which was the immediate cause of accidental death, was to be forfeited to the Crown. There were many other very remarkable rules on the subject of deodands, which prevailed in England up to the year 1847, one of which rules was (though there seemed to be some doubt on this point) that if a man fell from a boat or vessel in fresh water, the vessel and its cargo might be forfeited as a deodand. He did not know how far that was law, or whether the rule had ever been acted upon. This was one of the curious antiquities connected with the law of Coroners. But there was another, which was very characteristic of the strange manner in which legal reforms were carried on in England. The Coroner had to return an inquisition, which had to be drawn up with the strictness of an indictment. Now the strictness of indictments under the English law of former times was one of its greatest scandals; to a certain extent it had been reformed. The way in which this reform was effected was by giving a long list of technical defects, and providing that no one of them should vitiate the indictment. This method had been applied to the case of Coroners' inquisitions, and had been introduced into this country, where at this moment it was law. Act IV of 1848 enacted that a Coroner's inquisition was not to be quashed by the omission of certain forms of words given in the Statute, such as "with force and arms," "against the peace," "against the form of the Statute," and a string of others which filled a page, all of which were not to be objections to inquisitions taken. What was left was bad enough, because, although you might make these mistakes, there were a great variety of others which you might not make. In particular the Coroner was bound to describe the whole matter and the whole way in which the person came by his death in a manner which seemed to MR. STEPHEN extremely absurd.

For instance, the proper way of saying that a man was killed by a railway accident was as follows, first "the jurors aforesaid upon their oaths aforesaid say that a certain locomotive steam-engine numbered , with a certain tender attached thereto and worked therewith, and also with divers, to wit, ten carriages used for the conveyance of passengers for hire on a certain railway called the Railway, and which said carriages were then attached and fastened together and to the tender and were then propelled by the said locomotive steam-engine, were moving and travelling along the said railway." Having made this statement "the jurors aforesaid, on their oaths aforesaid," took breath—as well they might—and then proceeded to swear in an equally cumbrous manner that whilst all this was going on "a certain other locomotive steam-engine numbered with a certain other tender attached," &c., "and also with divers, to wit, five other carriages," &c., &c., "were also going along the railway." They then stated that the dead man was sitting in one of the second set of carriages. Then that "the said first mentioned locomotive steam-engine, tender and carriages" going on, &c., and "the said secondly mentioned locomotive," &c., "being then so respectively moving and travelling upon the said railway in different and opposite directions came into sudden, violent and forcible contact and collision by means whereof the said R. F. then received divers mortal wounds, bruises and concussions, of which said mortal wounds, bruises and concussions the said R. F. then instantly died."

It seemed to him that to say that the man was killed by a railway accident would be as good and more intelligible.

The law as to felo de se was another part of the law relating to Coroners. In England, a felo de se forfeited his goods, and the Coroner's jury had to find whether a man who killed himself was felo de se or not. It had been held that forfeiture for suicide did not exist in this country, but Coroners' juries still found whether or not a man committed felo de se. This practice would be abolished by the Bill. In addition to these, Coroners had a variety of jurisdictions which were no longer required: they had to enquire into treasure-trove and wrecks, to seize fugitives' goods, and the like. In fact, there was a good deal of doubt about the question of the several jurisdictions of the Coroner which were established. In order to do that, the Bill had expressly taken away all jurisdiction from Coroners except what was given by the Bill, and it put into simple rules the jurisdiction which they were to exercise: it took away and abolished the whole of the law of England on the subject, and gave the form of inquisition to be found in cases of death. It was nearly as simple as the forms which would be used in common conversation; for instance, if a man was drowned in the Hughli the inquisition would state that his 'death was caused on or about the day of 1871 by falling out of a boat into the river Hughli whereby he was drowned.'

The effect would be that Coroners in the presidency towns would not have to look beyond the four corners of this Bill to know their duties: they would not have to buy "Jervis on Coroners:" so that the Bill would be equivalent to that book and to the three or four Acts of Parliament and Acts of the Indian legislature, which explained and modified the English law relating to Coroners.

That was the nature of the Bill which he now asked the Council to consider. He wished to take the opportunity of saying a few words on the general subject of the consolidation of the law of which this measure formed a part, because he had noticed that remarks had been made about over-legislation and the undue haste of the Legislative Department. He wished to point out what the real state of the case was. The work of the Legislative Department had been for a considerable length of time substantially directed, not to increasing the law, but simply to repealing the existing law, to putting it into order, and to expressing it in a clear and unmistakeable form. Though that involved the passing of a considerable number of enactments, the effect was very much to shorten, instead of increasing, the law. He would only say with regard to that, that if any one would look at the law of this country before this process was undertaken, he would come to the conclusion that, if it had not been undertaken, and very efficiently carried on for a good many years past, it would have been almost impossible to administer justice, especially when you had a large number of Courts and Judges who were not professionally familiar with law. For instance "Beaufort's Digest," the standard book on Indian Criminal Law before the Penal Code was enacted, consisted of three closely printed quarto volumes. Mr. Mayne's Penal Code, you would find, embodied the substance of those volumes in a comparatively small octavo, rather loosely printed. Mr. Clarke's edition of the old Bengal Regulations, printed seventeen years ago, consisted of two thick quarto volumes containing 1,763 pages. The Bengal Regulations still remaining unrepealed would go easily into a moderate octavo volume.

In order to give the Council ocular demonstration of this, he had brought down two sets of books, and would ask the Council to look at them. This set contained Mr. Theobald's edition of the Legislative Acts of the Governor General in Council. The first five volumes contained the Acts from 1834 to 1867 still unrepealed at the end of 1867; and the other three volumes contained the Acts for 1868, 1869 and 1870: so that the whole of the Acts of the Legislative Council filled five thick volumes and three smaller volumes. The other day Mr. Fagan had published an edition of the Acts which were unrepealed at the end of 1870, so that his work included almost the whole unrepealed portion of the law. It consisted of three octavo volumes about the same size as Mr. Theobald's, though the page was rather fuller. Thus the Acts now went into three volumes, while in Theobald's edition they filled five thick volumes, plus three smaller volumes. The effect of the measures of the last few years was apparent, more in the repealing of old, than in the making of new laws. The result was very much to lessen the labour and to diminish the total amount of the law with which any person had to acquaint himself. The process of reduction was still going on, and he hoped after a certain time that these three volumes would be brought down to a still smaller compass.

He wished at the same time to make another statement with regard to this process of consolidation. He thought that persons not practically acquainted with the law were liable to fall into a very serious error on the subject, an error which might be shared in by many lawyers who had not turned their attention to that direction. It was supposed that, when a law was once made, it ought to last for a hundred years and never get out of repair, and should then be as good as new. It seemed to him that you might as well build a railway to Lahore and expect that it would not require repairs. It was true that the wear and tear, so to speak, of a law were not so rapid as the wear and tear of a public work. But wear and tear there always were and always would be, for the wit of man could not devise any law which would be complete and last for ever, although each successive re-statement of the law would make it clearer and plainer. It must be remembered that there were a vast number of transactions arising under each law, and a considerable number of clever people constantly engaged in criticizing and picking holes in its provisions. And when once you had got holes picked, they were sure to be picked larger and larger until you had got a great mass of cases on the Statute which would make it more complicated than before. The only way to prevent this was by continually keeping the law in repair, just as you kept any other work in repair. You had to keep looking to find where the defects were and what questions had arisen: to repeal one law and make a new one. In that way you might get things into a smaller compass still. But to suppose that it was in the power of any person or any set of persons to put the law of a great country into a small compass, and say that that was the law and that it was never to be altered, was to make a very great mistake indeed, and they would be utterly disappointed in any such expectation. However small the compass might be into which the law was brought, the law would still have to be continually subjected to revision and re-enactment, and that would go on exactly in the same manner as at present. If the law was to be kept in a reasonable form, it would be necessary to have a special department of persons continually working upon it, just as you require to have a sufficient number of plate-layers on a line of railway. He thought the public at large was not sufficiently aware of that fact.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PRISONERS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to Prisoners committed by a Court be taken into consideration. He said that the degree of credit, on the score of usefulness, to which this Bill was entitled as a part of the scheme on which his hon'ble and learned friend (Mr. Stephen) had just dilated would be best understood by a reference to the schedule, from which it would be seen that the Bill purported to reduce to one Act the entire provisions of no less than eight different enactments as well as portions of two others.

The only alteration in the substance of the existing law contemplated by the amended Bill was in regard to the constitution of the tribunal by which persons must be convicted and sentenced for certain offences in Native States, in order to admit of their imprisonment within British territory.

As the law now stood, the British officer who was a member of such tribunal must be duly authorized to act in that capacity by the Native Prince or State. As a matter of fact, however, in the case of many of these mixed Courts, the British officer was not, and from various causes could not be, so authorized.

To bring the law therefore into accordance with the existing practice, the words "or by the Governor General in Council" had been introduced into the last clause of the nineteenth section.

The other proposed changes were merely verbal.

In Part V, the application of sections 30 and 31 had been made general by the omission of the words "not established by Royal Charter" which occurred in the original Bill immediately after the word "Court." This amendment effectuated the fusion of the provisions of the Bill, in regard to the removal of prisoners from one prison to another, with the corresponding provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Bill was thus rendered more complete as a consolidation measure; and the Code was relieved of matter foreign to its natural scope and object.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NOTIFICATIONS.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 26th January 1871.

No. 478.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following advertisement in substitution of the one published under Notification No. 145, dated the 11th January 1870:—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rhea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and, no doubt, might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost—all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included—of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Owing to the delay that has taken place in maturing the preliminary arrangements, the Government of India has decided that the competition will not be held until the 1st April 1872, thus affording a much longer time than was originally intended for the preparation of machines and their transport to the locality appointed for the competition. The Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore, in the North-Western Provinces, has been fixed as the place where the public competition will be held, and the Government of India will provide one or more small steam-engines to work the machines during the public competition.

7. All machinery, &c., intended for trial must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to the Saharunpore Rhea Plantation, and kept ready before the 1st April 1872, to be there worked under their own supervision, or under that of their representatives, for a sufficient length of time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. Arrangements have now been completed for the supply of dried Rhea stems to intending competitors, both in this country and in Europe, to enable them to form a correct idea of the nature of the plant which their machinery will be required to deal with Persons in Europe desirous to obtain small supplies of dried Rhea stems for the above purpose, should apply to the Secretary of State for India. Intending competitors in this country, desirous of obtaining supplies of the article, must submit applications to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, in the Form A hereto annexed, prior to the 1st of March 1871; and those who are desirous of testing their machinery on the fresh Rhea at the Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore during the year 1871, must submit their applications to the same authority, in the Form B hereto annexed, prior to the 1st April 1871. The former will have to pay the expenses that may be incurred in packing and despatching the stems. The latter will have to provide all labor and motive power necessary for, and to pay all expenses connected with, their experiments: the fibre turned out by their machines during such experiments to become the property of Government.

9. In order to enable the Government to arrange for the provision of a sufficient stock of fresh Rhea stems for the purposes of the formal competition in April 1872, it is necessary to ascertain beforehand the number of machines that are likely to take part in it; and intending competitors are therefore requested to submit, prior to the 1st May 1871, and in the Form C also hereto annexed, notices of intention to compete.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Home Department (Public),—under date Fort William, the 2nd February 1871.

No. 649-50.—Read again the following correspondence on the subject of the proposed appointment of a Central Agent for or Director of the Archæological Survey of India:—

Despatch from Secretary of State,		No. 4 of 1870,	dated	11th January.
„ to	„	No. 84 „	„	29th July.
Telegram from	„		„	15th October 1870.
„ to	„		„	1st November „
Despatch from	„	No. 111 „	„	24th November.

RESOLUTION.—In accordance with instructions received from the Secretary of State, measures were initiated in 1867-68 for the conservation of old architectural structures, and for the exploration and systematic record of the numerous valuable and interesting memorials of the ancient civilization of India that occur in so many parts of the country. As an experimental arrangement, four separate parties were organized for Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and the Upper Provinces for taking casts and photographs of all important ancient buildings, the Department of Science and Art in London having undertaken to defray a portion of the expenses that might be incurred in securing authentic descriptions, as well as casts and photographs of "the finest monuments of Indian Art."

2. In his despatch dated the 11th January 1870, reviewing the proceedings taken in this matter by the Government of India since the commencement of the operations, and offering certain suggestions in regard to the further prosecution of the work, the Secretary of State strongly urged the necessity of directing the researches in a somewhat more systematic and deliberate manner than had been attempted at the outset, and of concentrating the supervision of the entire system in one Department, instead of leaving it, without control, to the management of different Chiefs under different Local Governments. The Governor General in Council entirely concurred in the views expressed by the Secretary of State as to the steps that should be taken for the conduct of future researches. But after mature consideration, His Excellency in Council came to the conclusion that it would be impossible to attain the desired object without a Central Establishment to collect the results of former investigations, and to direct and systematize the various efforts and enquiries made by local bodies and private persons, as well as by Government itself.

3. In communicating the above opinion to the Duke of Argyll, it was stated that there was no one so well qualified for superintending the operations as Major General Cunningham, then in England; and that, if that gentleman would accept the post of Central Agent or Director for a few years, it would give an impulse to the study of archæology, and make the future working of the scheme comparatively easy.

4. Major General Cunningham has accepted the offer made by the Secretary of State, and has now assumed charge of the appointment of Director General of the Archæological Survey of India. The Governor General in Council, therefore, considers this a fitting time for deciding on some fixed and definite system of archæological research, which, being commenced on now, may be steadily prosecuted, year by year, in such method as is likely to be productive of the most useful results.

5. Although much has already been done by previous enquirers, still more yet remains to be accomplished, for the efforts of private individuals which are entirely dependent on opportunity and inclination are necessarily unconnected and desultory. What is now required is a complete search over the whole country, and a systematic record and description of all architectural and other remains that are remarkable either for their antiquity, or their beauty, or their historical interest.

6. To carry out these views, General Cunningham's attention should be directed to two principal objects,—first, to the preparation of a brief summary of the labours of former enquirers, and of the results which have already been obtained. Much valuable information exists in the researches and journals of the different Asiatic Societies; but it is so scattered over several hundred volumes, many of which are rare and expensive, that it is now practically accessible only in large public libraries. A brief record of what has already been done would save present enquirers the loss of much precious time in the measurements and description of many of the finest monuments in India. Secondly, to the preparation of a general scheme of systematic enquiry for the guidance of a staff of assistants in present and future researches. The scheme should indicate what has already been accomplished, and what still remains to be done. It should give clear and detailed instructions as to the nature and amount of information, as well as to the style of illustration required for all known remains. It should also lay down the order in which these researches should be followed up, by forming into different compact groups all the places to be visited, so that as little time as possible should be lost in travelling.

7. A report of each year's proceedings should be drawn up by General Cunningham, and submitted before the commencement of the next year's operations. This report need not be accompanied by any detailed drawings or illustrations, but it should indicate clearly the nature and amount of work done during the year, and should state generally the value and importance of the information acquired. The collation and arrangement of the materials contained in these annual reports, with the results obtained by former or independent enquirers, will form another branch of General Cunningham's duties. This work cannot be begun for some time, but the object should be kept steadily in view. It is, therefore, desirable that the efforts of some of the assistants should at once be directed to the completion of our knowledge of the older remains of India, so that the Archæological Survey may be able to publish a volume of Buddhist and other antiquities at an early date.

8. General Cunningham should now be desired to submit, with the least possible delay, a statement of the establishment which he proposes to entertain, together with a careful estimate of its probable cost, and of all other expenses likely to be incurred, e. g., for photographs, casts, excavations, &c., in connection with the survey. This statement should include General Cunningham's own salary and expenses of every kind to be incurred on account of the Department, and should be divided into two parts— the former referring to the current official year, 1870-71, and the latter to 1871-72. As regards the establishment to be entertained, although the services of one or more European assistants may prove indispensable, His Excellency desires that, so far as possible, intelligent Natives may be employed in, and trained to, the work of photographing, measuring, and surveying buildings, directing excavations and the like; while as regards decyphering inscriptions, it seems probable that Natives may be found better qualified to do this work than any European, whose services could be at present secured for such employment in the Department.

ORDERED, that a copy of the above Resolution be forwarded to Major General Cunningham for information and guidance.

Ordered also, that a copy of the above Resolution be forwarded to the Financial Department for information.

No. 806.—His Excellency the Governor General in Council has been pleased to confirm the following rules made by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces in the exercise of the power conferred on him by Act VIII of 1870 (for the prevention of the murder of female infants) and of every other power enabling him in this behalf :—

1. A census shall be taken of the whole adult and non-adult population of the proclaimed clans, tribes or families in the proclaimed tracts or villages.

2. The census shall be made by the Collector who will employ Putwarrees, Bukshees of Chowkeedars, Abkaree Mohurirs, &c., &c., under the superintendence of Peshkars and Tehsildars controlled by Covenanted and Uncovenanted Officers. It will be conducted ordinarily during the cold season, when District Officers on tour will be able to exercise a thorough supervision over the subordinates employed in making the enumeration.

3. The annexed Form (A) shall be uniformly adopted for such census.

4. Copies of the Census Returns, when finally tested, shall be kept at the Tehsil, at the Police Station, and at the Office of the District Superintendent of Police. There shall be a separate return for each village, and these village returns shall be bound up according to Pergunnahs for deposit in the Tehsils, and, according to Police circles of jurisdiction, for deposit at the Police Stations.

5. This census shall be repeated at periods not less than one year, and not exceeding three years.

6. The heads of families in proclaimed tracts or classes shall report all deaths, births, and marriages to the chowkeedar.

7. All head-men of proclaimed villages, or of villages in which proclaimed clans reside, shall be bound to assist in enforcing any rules made for any of the following purposes :—

   For making and maintaining registers of births, marriages, and deaths occurring in the proclaimed District, or in or among the proclaimed class, family or persons ; and for making, from time to time, a census of such persons, or of any other persons residing within such District.

   For prescribing how and by whom information shall be given to the proper officers of all births, marriages and deaths occurring or about to occur, in such District, or in or among such class, family or persons.

8. Chowkeedars of proclaimed villages or clans shall report at the Police Station all births, deaths, marriages, arrivals and removals occurring in the proclaimed families or clans. In the event of the child born being a girl, the officer in charge of the Police Station, or an officer of a grade not lower than Head Constable shall proceed as soon as possible after the birth to the village, shall call for and see the child and warn the father not to neglect it. The inspection shall be repeated as opportunity may occur.

9. When a pregnant female belonging to a proclaimed family is removed from the village, the chowkeedar shall at once give intimation at the Police Station of her removal, and the place to which she has been removed.

10. When a pregnant woman is brought into a proclaimed village, the chowkeedar will be bound to inform the Police of her arrival, and of the place from which she came.

11. The chowkeedar shall also report at the Police Station all pregnancies in proclaimed villages or families where the percentage of girls to the non-adult population is under twenty-five.

12. The following events shall be reported by the chowkeedar immediately :—

    (a.)—Births of female children.

    (b.)—Deaths of female children under six months of age.

    (c.)—Removals and arrivals of pregnant females, other deaths, arrivals and removals, and all pregnancies* and marriages, shall be reported at the ordinary visit of the chowkeedar to the Police Station.

    * When required by Rule 11 to be reported.

13. In proclaimed villages the chowkeedar must not be either a relation, connection, or of the same caste as any of the proclaimed families.

14. When the crime is so prevalent, and the number of the proclaimed villages so great, that the ordinary establishment of the District cannot cope successfully with it, an Officer, with the powers of an Inspector of Police, for carrying out measures for prevention and detection, may, with the sanction of the Local Government, be appointed for a District, or a certain portion of a District, as circumstances may direct.

15. Extra Police, under Act V. of 1861, shall not be imposed except on proof of determined persistence in the crime, or systematic disregard of the rules, and only then on the special report of the District Officers, submitted through the usual authorities, and sanctioned by the Local Goverment.

16. The Officer in charge of a Police Station shall be required to go to the spot and make inquiries in case of death or other suspicious occurrence; to supervise the Mohurir and see that his registers are accurately kept, and the necessary returns submitted; and to take every opportunity of checking the information given at the Police Station by local inquiry in person. He should also periodically visit the proclaimed villages and inspect the children. He shall report at once any event of importance which may occur in his circle.

17. The duties of the special Inspector will be those ordinarily performed by the Police.

18. A register of midwives in proclaimed villages shall be kept at the Police Station.

19. Registered midwives shall not be retained in Government employ, but Magistrates and District Superintendents of Police will report cases in which they consider rewards should be given to them.

20. The midwife shall report immediately to the chowkeedar the fact of a female child's birth in a proclaimed family, and, in case of its death prior to the completion of her services, the fact of death.

21. All expenses incurred in working the system sanctioned by Act VIII. of 1870 shall be borne by the proclaimed clans and families, and shall be recoverable as arrears of land revenue, provided that, when the percentage of girls in any proclaimed village or clan exceeds forty, it shall at once be exempted from any share in such expenses.

22. Each District shall bear its own expenses. The Magistrate shall first submit an estimate of expenditure likely to be incurred in his District, with a list of villages (with the number of heads of families in each) which he considers should be called upon to contribute. On receiving the Government sanction, he shall then proceed to distribute the total expenditure amongst the different villages in proportion to the number of heads of families in each, and these heads of families shall re-distribute according to village custom. If no custom exists, or if the heads of families refuse to apportion the expenses amongst themselves, the Magistrate shall do so by number of heads of families. The cost of extra Police shall be borne by the villages on which they have been quartered.

23. In all proclaimed villages, where the proportion of girls to the non-adult population is under 25 per cent., the midwife shall report, through the chowkeedar, every pregnancy among the proclaimed families at some period prior to the birth. When the fact of pregnancy is marked by any ceremony, the report shall be concomitant with that ceremony. If, after proclamation, the proportion of girls does not rise to more than 25 per cent., the Lieutenant-Governor may direct that every head of a proclaimed family shall be personally bound to report every pregnancy at some period before the seventh month.

24. Pregnancies need not be reported in those proclaimed tracts or villages where the proportion of girls to the child population is above 25 per cent.

25. A register of pregnancies in the Form (B) hereto annexed shall be kept up for all villages in which they are directed to be reported. No abstracts from these registers will be submitted.

26. A register of births, deaths, marriages, arrivals and removals occurring in the proclaimed families or clans shall be kept up for each proclaimed village, at the Police Station to which it belongs, in the Form (C) attached.

27. Abstracts from these registers shall be prepared quarterly by the Police Officer in charge of them, and shall be submitted by the Officer in charge of the Police Station to the District Superintendent of Police in the Form (D) annexed.

28. The District Superintendent of Police shall have the abstracts required under Rule 27 collated in his Office, and shall submit the annual results through the Magistrate, Commissioner of Division and Inspector General of Police, for the information of Government.

29. If, on the occasion of a fresh census, it should appear to the Magistrate that any village or clan had reformed, he should report the circumstance to the Local Government, recommending its removal from the proclaimed list, and await orders.

30. Any percentage of girls to the child population exceeding forty should ordinarily, but not necessarily, be the ground for recommending removal from the proclaimed list.

POLITICAL. INDIA OFFICE;

No. 2. London, 5th January 1871.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

MY LORD,—I have received with the deepest regret the telegraphic intelligence of the melancholy death by an accident of Major General Sir Henry Marion Durand, K. C. S. I., C. B., Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.

2. By this calamity the Government of India at home and abroad has been deprived of the services of one of its best Officers whilst in the performance of his public duties at a time when he had just entered on a new career of utility for which he was eminently fitted.

3. Having entered the Indian Army in one of the scientific branches of the service, he distinguished himself at an early period by his gallantry in the field, and subsequently by his ability and independence of character in different high civil and political appointments, and as a Member of the Supreme Government won for himself the confidence of successive Governors General, until he was selected by your Excellency to fill the high office in which his distinguished career has been so suddenly brought to a close.

4. The life of such a man is an example to the Service, and Her Majesty's Government deeply deplores his death.

I have, &c.,

CHAPTER I.

Definitions.

Section I.—In the following Rules—

"Actual Service" includes the period during which an officer is on duty, also periods spent on privilege and subsidiary leave, and periods during which an officer, not on leave, may be out of employ on subsistence allowance in India.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. "Actual Service" also includes leave within the limits of the late East India Company's charter reckoned as service and residence under the rules in force before the 8th June 1855; also leave on urgent private affairs reckoned as service and residence under former Rules.

2. "Actual Service" also includes "Examination Leave" taken under CHAPTER VII, and not exceeding in the aggregate 12 months.

3. Leave without allowances, and junior furlough taken under medical certificate under the Rules in force before those of 1855, are neither to be credited as actual service, nor debited as furlough taken. (Vide Sections II and III).

"Extraordinary Leave" means any leave granted otherwise than under these Rules.

"Long Extraordinary Leave" means Extraordinary Leave extending beyond a period of three months.

"Long Furlough" means Furlough extending beyond a period of three months.

"Salary" includes acting allowances.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

4. The word "pay" as used in this Code signifies substantive pay; but it includes also the subsistence allowance drawn by an officer who has an officiating, but no substantive, appointment.

5. "Salary" is the sum of pay and acting allowance. It does not include house-rent, tentage, or travelling allowances, whether daily, monthly, or annual.

The rule for the exclusion of these allowances is a general one.

6. Salary does not include "local allowances," which are given in full to the officer performing the duty in respect of which they are given, no part being allowed to an absentee.

This construction applies generally.

An officer's "Station" means that station to which he stands appointed. or such other place as the Government to which he is subordinate may determine,

CHAPTER II.

Conditions on which furlough may be taken.

Section II.—The maximum period of furlough which can be granted to any officer during the whole period of his service, is limited to six years.

Section III.—Subject to the above limit, furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer at the proportional rate of one year's furlough for every four years of actual service.

CONSTRUCTION.—An officer, who has taken leave on medical certificate under Leave Rules prior to those of 1868, shall not, for the purpose of this Section, be debited in his furlough account with such leave, up to the limit of one year. All such leave shall, however, be included in the maximum amount of six years fixed by Section II.

Illustration.—A has completed an actual service of 21 years 2 months and 10 days. He has had 15 months' sick leave under old Rules and 3 years' furlough. Under Section III A has earned by his actual service 5 years 3 months and 17 days' furlough. Against this must be debited 3 years' furlough and 3 months of the 15 months' sick leave, leaving at A's credit 2 years and 17 days' furlough. But as this, added to the 3 years' furlough and 15 months' sick leave already taken, would exceed the aggregate of 6 years by 3 months and 17 days, the excess must be deducted, leaving at A's credit 1 year and 9 months' furlough.

In this illustration sick leave does not include leave within Indian limits, under the Rules of May 1843, which has been declared (by Section I, Construction 1) to be actual service.

Section IV.—No furlough shall be taken before the completion of eight years' actual service, except under Section VIII.

Section V.—Furlough shall not be repeated until three years from the date of the last return from long extraordinary leave, or long furlough, except under Section VIII. Leave taken under CHAPTERS VI and VIII, but no other leave, shall be reckoned as part of the said three years.

SUBSIDIARY RULE.—Examination leave taken under CHAPTER VII (not exceeding 12 months in the aggregate) shall be reckoned as part of the said three years.

Section VI.—The maximum term of furlough to be taken at any one time shall be two years.

Section VII.—Except as hereinafter provided, an officer when on furlough shall retain a lien on his substantive appointment or on an appointment of similar character, and not less salary, and he shall be granted allowances at the rate of 50 per cent. of his average salary for the previous three years, or for the period which has elapsed since his last return from long furlough, or long extraordinary leave if that period be less than three years.

In calculating such average, the time spent and the allowances drawn under any leave, excepting privilege leave under CHAPTER VI, shall be omitted.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. In calculating such average, time spent (not exceeding 12 months in the aggregate) and allowances drawn on "Examination Leave" taken under CHAPTER VII shall not be omitted.

2. The three years referred to in this Section are the three years immediately preceding the date on which the officer taking leave makes over charge of his office whether his appointments during that period have been substantive or acting.

This rule applies also to the case of Military Officers in Civil employ.

3. A period spent without leave and without allowances (as for example when an officer overstays privilege leave or joining-time) is to be omitted from the three years on which the calculation of average salary is to be made under this Section. When any period is thus omitted, the calculation of average salary should be made on the allowances drawn during the remainder of the three years.

4. An officer retains no lien on an acting appointment during absence on any other leave than "Privilege" or "Examination Leave."

5. An officer has no claim to promotion while absent on furlough: but there is no objection to such promotion.

This rule applies generally.

6. If an officer's substantive appointment is changed while he is absent acting in another appointment, it is not necessary that he should join his new substantive appointment in order to obtain a lien upon it.

This rule applies to all officers in Civil employ.

7. The allowances fixed by this Section are granted whether the officer has a substantive appointment or not.

Proviso.—Provided that no officer on furlough shall draw more than £1,000 or less than £500 per annum, unless his salary is less than £500, in which case he shall draw an allowance equal to his salary.

Note.—The limits of furlough allowance originally stood at £1,200 and £300 with an option (Section XXX) of accepting as limits £1,000 and £500.

From 7th August 1869 the £1,200 was reduced to £1,000, and the option was abolished. The result of these orders is that for furloughs taken on or before 7th August 1869 (but not for extensions of them commencing after that date), the limits are £1,200 and £500.

The minimum which after these orders stood at £300 is now raised to £500, or full salary if less than £500.

Section VIII.—Under medical certificate—

(a).—Furlough may be taken on the above-mentioned conditions, without reference to the amount at credit under Section III.

(b).—Furlough for a period not exceeding one year may be taken, even if less than three years have elapsed since the last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance, unless he has completed six months' actual service since his last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough, and there remain some leave to his credit under Section III, in which case the officer will retain a lien on his appointment, and will draw allowances as calculated under Section VII, until that credit be exhausted, but in no case for a period exceeding one year.

(c.)—Furlough taken without medical certificate, or under clause (a) of this Section, may be extended beyond two years for a period not exceeding one year. When on furlough under this clause, an officer will not retain a lien on his appointment, and will be entitled only to subsistence allowance.

(For form of medical certificate, see Appendix A.)

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. An officer who takes furlough under Clause (b) without retaining a lien on his appointment, vacates his office from the date on which he makes over charge of its duties.

2. If the subsistence allowance admissible under Clauses (b) and (c), exceeds the furlough allowance admissible under Section VII, the latter allowance only shall be drawn under this Section.

3. The following are the rates of subsistence allowance for Covenanted Civil Servants throughout India:—

To officers of twelve or more years' standing	Rs. 400 per mensem.
To officers of more than eight, but less than twelve years' standing	„ 320 „
To officers of not more than eight years' standing	„ 250 „

4. The standing of an officer for subsistence allowance is the period of his actual residence in India. So far as regards standing for subsistence allowance, time not exceeding two years, which after the age of seventeen years was bonâ fide spent in the regular course of education at Haileybury College, counts as residence in India.

Section IX.—Furlough taken or extended under Section VIII is subject to the provision of Section II.

Section X.—Furlough taken in India will be reckoned from the date of the officer quitting his station to the date of his return thereto Furlough taken out of India will be reckoned from the date of embarkation to the date of return.

In the event of the furlough being taken partly in India and partly out of India, the commencement and termination of the furlough will be determined by the above Rules, according as the furlough begins or ends in or out of India.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. Days of embarkation and debarkation are counted part of furlough, and furlough allowances only are admissible for such days. The date of embarkation from Calcutta is the date on which a vessel is left by the pilot at sea.

This rule is of general application.

2. An officer may embark or debark at any port in India.

CHAPTER III.

Subsidiary Leave.

Section XI—For the interval elapsing between departure from his station and the commencement of furlough, and between the termination of furlough and the rearrival at his station, an officer shall be allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days. During those periods, his allowances will be calculated in the same way as his furlough allowances, but without limitation as to maximum and minimum. Provided that, if the officer has under these Rules lost his lien on his appointment, he shall draw subsistence allowance of his rank. Subsidiary leave shall count as service and residence.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. Subsidiary leave ceases the day before embarkation, and cannot be extended, on the ground that the vessel in which an officer sails touches at some other port before leaving India.

This rule applies generally.

2. Local Governments may grant subsidiary leave for a period exceeding thirty days, in case of necessity; but such a relaxation of Rule and the circumstances of it, must be reported to the Government of India.

This rule applies also to all Officers in Civil employ.

3. If an officer overstay subsidiary leave prefixed to furlough or special leave by a period not exceeding thirty days, he may, at his option, either forfeit all salary during the period of such overstay, or give up his subsidiary leave and reckon his furlough or special leave from the date on which he quitted office. But if the period of overstay exceed thirty days, such option is not admissible, and the furlough or special leave must be held to have commenced from the date on which the officer quitted office, the subsidiary leave being cancelled. In such case, if the officer was not entitled to furlough or other leave when he quitted office, a special report must be made to the Government of India for orders.

This rule applies in analogous cases to all Officers in Civil employ.

4. An officer may draw full salary for any part of his subsidiary leave before furlough or special leave for which, if he were not about to take furlough or special leave, privilege leave would be admissible to him.

This rule applies in analogous cases to all Officers in Civil employ.

CHAPTER IV.

Applications for Furlough.

Section XII.—Applications for furlough will, in all cases, be submitted to the Government to which the applicant is subordinate, and will be dealt with in such manner as the Governor General of India in Council may from time to time prescribe.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. When an officer applies for leave he should distinctly state under what section of these rules he wants it, and show that he is entitled to it under that section.

This rule applies generally.

2. The following rules have been laid down for the disposal of applications for leave or furlough from officers of the Bengal Civil Service, or from officers of the Madras or Bombay Civil Service, employed in the Presidency of Bengal :—

I.—Subject to the exigencies of the public service, Lieutenant Governors and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces are empowered to grant any leave or furlough authorised by the Rules to officers serving under their respective orders.

II.—If an officer applying for leave or furlough be serving out of his own Presidency, the Local Government or Administration under which he is serving will, if the leave or furlough be granted, inform the Government of India, Madras or Bombay, as the case may be.

III.—All applications for leave or furlough should be accompanied by a certificate from the Local Accountant General, showing that the applicant is entitled to the leave asked for, and should be forwarded, through the usual channel, to the Local Government or Administration under which the officer is serving.

IV.—Except under orders of the Secretary of State, the term of leave or furlough cannot be altered without the permission of the Government or Administration by which it was granted.

V.—Every officer who obtains leave or furlough shall supply himself with a last pay certificate, and with a statement showing the pay which he is entitled to draw while absent. It shall be the duty of the Local Accountant General to furnish these documents, and no leave allowances will be payable without their production.

VI.—A quarterly statement of the officers absent on furlough or special leave with the dates of the grant and expiry of such furlough or leave brought up to the 31st March, 30th June, 30th September, and 31st December of each year, shall be punctually furnished by Local Governments and Administrations to the Government of India in the Home Department.

VII.—From these quarterly returns, a register will be compiled and kept at the Office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, of all grants of leave or furlough, of all extensions of leave or furlough, and of all returns to duty from leave. This register will be published quarterly in the Gazette of India.

VIII.—Every officer returning to duty shall report his return to the Government of India, and to the Local Government or Administration by which his leave or furlough may have been granted.

IX.—If any Local Government or Administration shall see fit to refuse a furlough on the ground of the exigencies of the public service, it shall report such refusal for the confirmation of the Government of India.

Section XIII.—Subject to the exigencies of the service, both as regards the number of furloughs available at any one time, and as regards individual applications, of which exigencies the Government of India, Madras or Bombay, as the case may be, shall be exclusively the judge, furloughs will be granted under these Rules.

Section XIV.—All applications for furlough under medical certificate, in accordance with these Rules, will be granted without restriction.

Section XV.— If, owing to the exigencies of the service, it should be necessary to place any limit on the number of officers who may be absent on furlough at the same time, applications not supported by medical certificate will be granted in the following order :—

The applicant, to whose credit the greatest amount of furlough remains under Section III, shall have the preference

If two or more applicants are on an equality in this respect, the preference shall be given to the applicant whose actual service in India is longest, reckoning in the case of an officer who has not taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of his arrival in India, and in the case of an officer who has taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough, from the date of his last return from such leave or furlough.

If two or more applicants are equal in both respects, the preference shall be given to the senior in the gradation list.

CHAPTER V.

Qualification for Pension.

Section XVI.—The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be 21 years: but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. Examination Leave (not exceeding 12 months in the aggregate) shall count as residence.

2. Actual service for furlough must be held to be residence for pension. All leave which has been actually credited under the old Rules as residence, will remain so credited. This however does not apply to one year of leave on sick certificate, as in this case a compensation or equivalent is provided by this Section in the reduction, by one year, of the period of residence heretofore required.

3. Subject to the exigencies of the State, subsidiary leave may be granted to officers retiring from the service on the same terms as to officers going on furlough (Section XI, and subsidiary rules).

4. An officer may retire from the service while absent in Europe on furlough. It is not necessary that he should first return to India.

Section XVII.—The term of service qualifying for pension shall be 25 years.

CONSTRUCTION.—The service of an officer is held to commence either from the date of the officer's covenant or from that of the despatch of the Secretary of State announcing his appointment, whichever may have been earliest.

CHAPTER VI.

Privilege Leave.

Section XVIII.—Subject to the exigencies of the State, an Officer who has completed eleven months' continuous duty may take privilege leave for one month without deduction from his salary, retaining a lien on his appointment, whether substantive or officiating. Provided that, in the case of his holding an officiating appointment, such lien and his acting allowance will cease on the resumption of charge by the officer to whom the substantive appointment belongs.

CONSTRUCTION.—The lien and the acting allowance of the officer on leave cease when any officer having a prior lien on the appointment resumes charge of it.

Section XIX.—In the same manner and under the same conditions, two, or three, months' privilege leave may be taken when an officer has completed continuous duty of twenty-two or, thirty-three, months respectively.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

Application.

1. An officer, when applying for privilege leave, must declare that he has no present intention of taking any other leave or of retiring from the service within six months after the expiry of the leave for which he applies.

This rule is of general application.

2. An officer is not absolutely debarred by this declaration from taking leave or retiring within six months of the expiry of his privilege leave; but if he subsequently apply for leave or to retire within that period, he may, and probably should, be called upon to account for having changed his mind.

This rule is of general application.

Service counted.

3. An officer returning from leave is held to be on service qualifying for privilege leave from the date on which he reports himself for duty to the Government to which he is directly subordinate, and not from any later date on which he may actually obtain re-employment, unless his re-employment be delayed owing to his own fault.

This rule is of general application.

4. But when an officer first arrives in India, service qualifying for privilege leave does not begin until he takes charge of a particular office.

Allowances.

5. If an officer on privilege leave obtains officiating promotion which, were he on duty, would, without involving any increase or change of duties or responsibility, entitle him to acting allowance or increased acting allowance, he shall draw the acting allowance, or increased acting allowance from the date of such promotion.

This rule is of general application.

6. Acting allowance may be passed to an officer on privilege leave even though another officer be appointed to act for him.

7. When an officer who is temporarily promoted from a lower to a higher acting appointment takes privilege leave on being relieved of the latter, and the Local Government declares that on being so relieved he has reverted to the lower acting appointment, it is not necessary for him to rejoin the lower acting appointment before proceeding on leave; but his allowances on leave shall be calculated as if he had so rejoined.

This rule is of general application.

8. An officer of the Bombay Service may draw house-rent or tentage during privilege leave, provided (1) that he places his house or tent at the disposal of the officer, if any, who is appointed to officiate for him, whether such officer does or does not avail himself of the offer, and (2) that the officiating officer does not at the same time draw the house-rent or tentage attached to the same appointment.

This rule applies also to Military Officers in Civil employ, and to Uncovenanted Officers serving in the Bombay Presidency.

Section XX.—Privilege leave may, at the discretion of the Local Government, be taken in separate instalments. No second instalment shall be taken until after the completion of six months' continuous duty from the expiry of the first instalment. In this case the eleven months qualifying for fresh privilege leave will be reckoned from the expiry of the first instalment, the period of the second instalment being omitted from the calculation.

Provided that the whole privilege leave taken at any one time shall not exceed three months, and that no accumulation of privilege leave beyond that period shall be admitted.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. The meaning of this Section is simply that a Local Government may allow an officer to take any part of the privilege leave at his credit under Section XVIII or XIX without absolutely forfeiting the remainder.

2. When an officer absent on privilege leave is on public grounds recalled to duty, he may be allowed any balance of his leave before the expiry of six months from the date of his return to duty.

Section XVIII.—The construction appended is new.

Section XXI.—If an officer shall overstay his privilege leave, he shall forfeit all salary during the time of his remaining so absent; and if he shall so continue absent for more than one week, his office shall become vacant.

SUBSIDIARY RULE.—The Local Government may exempt an officer from loss of appointment under this Section, if it considers that his default was due to circumstances beyond his control.

This rule is of general application.

Section XXII.—Privilege leave shall be reckoned as residence and service.

CHAPTER VII.

Examination Leave.

RULES.

1. A junior Civil Servant, who is a candidate for one of the rewards offered for the study of Oriental Languages, may be allowed leave on full salary for one month for the purpose of being examined.

2. If he passes the examination, he may be allowed similar leave for another month.

3. Leave under this Chapter (not exceeding an aggregate of 12 months) shall be reckoned as residence and as service for pension, and for furlough or special leave.

4. When an officer passes a successful examination, the leave granted to him for that examination is (subject to the same limit of 12 months in the aggregate) service qualifying for privilege leave.

CHAPTER VIII.

Special Leave.

Section XXIII.—Special leave, on urgent private affairs, may be granted at the discretion of the Local Government for a period not exceeding six months. In respect of retention of a lien on appointment, of allowances drawn during the leave, and of subsidiary leave, the conditions of special leave shall be the same as those prescribed for furlough. Special leave shall not be reckoned as residence.

CONSTRUCTION.—If an officer who has taken leave on urgent private affairs under the old rules, takes leave under this Section, he can only draw allowances for any period by which his former absence may have fallen short of six months.

Section XXIV.—Section XXI shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to an officer overstaying special leave.

Section XXV.—Special leave may be repeated without allowances after intervals of at least six years' actual service.

CONSTRUCTION.—No leave can be granted under this Chapter, until six years have elapsed from the expiry of leave granted under Section XIV of the Rules of 1855 or Section IX of the Rules of 1864.

CHAPTER IX.

Change and continuation of Leave.

Section XXVI.—Furlough, privilege leave, and special leave shall not be taken as such in continuation of each other; but if an officer absent on one of these classes of leave be allowed to change it for another, the whole period of his absence shall be held to be under the class of leave for which it was changed.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

1. Leave may be retrospectively commuted by the authority which granted it, to any other kind of leave which the said authority would have been competent to allow when the original leave was sanctioned.

This rule applies generally.

2. No leave can be taken in continuation of examination leave excepting furlough upon medical certificate.

3. Leave not used may be cancelled by the authority which granted it.

This rule is of general application.

CHAPTER X.

Payment of Leave Allowances.

Section XXVII.—Subject to considerations of State, there is no restriction as to the places where an officer may reside when on leave.

Section XXVIII.—Leave allowance shall be payable monthly, if payment is taken in India, and quarterly, if payment is taken in England.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY ORDERS.

1. An officer on privilege leave cannot draw his allowances in England. But his Agent may draw them in India in the manner prescribed below.

This rule applies generally.

2. The following are the conditions under which allowances may be drawn in India by officers on leave.

(a.) If the officer signs the bill himself, he must either appear in person or furnish a life certificate signed by a Covenanted Civil Servant or by a Magistrate.

(b.) Allowances may be drawn through a properly authorised Agent. But the Agent must execute a bond to refund over-payments.

(c.) When allowances are drawn for the absentee by his official superior, this officer is responsible for any over-charge, and no other security is necessary.

This rule is of general application.

CHAPTER XI.

Joining time.

The rules regarding joining time, which are of general application, are, for convenience sake, inserted in this Code, although joining time is not leave, inasmuch as an officer is considered to be on duty during it.

RULES.

1. Joining time is allowed to an officer transferred from one station to another according to the following calculation :—

For that part of the route for which railway is available, one day for every hundred miles;

For that part of the route for which steamer is available, one day for every hundred miles, or such longer time as the steamer may actually occupy;

Where neither railway nor steamer is available, one day for every ten miles;

And six days in addition to the whole thus calculated.

Sundays are excluded in the calculation of joining time.

2. The full joining time is allowed only if it is spent bonâ fide in preparation for the journey or in progress from one station to another, and no more than three months can be given under any circumstances. The Government also which orders a transfer may limit the duration of joining time.

3. When an officer, while absent on leave, other than furlough or special leave, is transferred from one station to another, he is entitled to joining time in addition to the period of his leave. His joining time in this case will be that allowed in the case of transfer from his old to his new station, or from the place where he receives the order of transfer, to his new station, whichever is least.

4. An officer draws during joining time the following allowances :—

the pay which he drew in his old appointment or that which he draws in his new, whichever is least.

(b) Second, as regards acting allowance :—

(1) if transferred from an officiating appointment to an appointment, officiating or substantive, of not less salary,—the acting allowance of his old appointment;

(2) if, after being promoted from a lower to a higher officiating appointment with retention of lien on the lower one, he is relieved of the higher and returns to the lower officiating appointment, or to another appointment, officiating or substantive, of not less salary,—the acting allowance of the lower officiating appointment;

(c) Provided that no officer can draw acting allowance for any appointment after any one having a prior lien on it has returned to it.

CHAPTER XII.

Last Pay Certificate.

RULES.

N. B.—The rules in this Chapter are of general application.

1. Whenever an officer on leave in England obtains permission from the Secretary of State for India to return to duty, he should bring with him to India a certificate showing the date to which his absentee allowances have been paid in London.

2. An officer proceeding on leave to England or to any place in India beyond the limits of his own district, and intending to draw leave allowances there, must take with him a last pay certificate, and should appear in person at the office in which his certificate is completed.

3. An officer transferred from one station to another cannot draw allowances at the treasury of his new station, without producing a last pay certificate from the treasury where he last drew allowances.

4. The following are the rules and forms prescribed for the issue of last pay certificates in India.

The cases in which these certificates are given are thus classified :—

Case I.—To an officer proceeding on leave to Europe, and embarking at a port in the presidency or province in which he is employed;

Case II.—To an officer proceeding on leave to Europe and embarking at a port in another presidency or province;

(a) if he be employed at, or have to pass through, the station of the Accountant General of his new presidency or province;

(b) if he be not employed at, and have not to pass through, that station;

Case III.—To an officer proceeding on leave from one place in India to another, whether the two places are or are not within the same presidency or province;

Case IV.—To an officer proceeding on duty from one presidency or province to another;

Case V.—To an officer proceeding on duty from one place to another in the same presidency or province.

The rules for each of these cases are as follows :—

Case I.—In this case, the Accountant General of the presidency or province should give the officer a certificate in Form A, Appendix B, and, save in the cases below excepted, forward a duplicate certificate in the same form to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State.

Exceptions.—1. If the officer embark at a port in British Burmah, the Accountant General should forward the duplicate form direct to the Financial Department of the Government of India for transmission to the Secretary of State.

2. If the officer embark at Calcutta, the Accountant General should, in like manner forward the duplicate form to the Financial Department after filling up the blanks in the pilot's certificate at its foot.

Case II (a).—In this case the Accountant General of the officer's presidency or province must pay him up to the date of his departure from his (the Accountant General's) station, and give him a certificate in Form B, Appendix B, leaving the 5th, 7th and 8th spaces blank, and send a duplicate after signing the letter on the reverse to the Accountant General or (if there be no Accountant General) to the officer in charge of the treasury at the port at which the absentee intends to embark for Europe. The Accountant General, or Treasury Officer at the port of embarkation, must obey the letter addressed to him, and return the original form to the officer. If he be an Accountant General, he must, moreover, forward the duplicate received by himself to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and address a letter in the Form E, Appendix B, to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency; but if he be a Treasury Officer, he must forward the duplicate of Form B to the Accountant General of his own presidency, who must forward it to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and send a letter to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency in the Form F, Appendix B.

Case II (b).—In this case the Accountant General must send to the officer a certificate in Form C, Appendix B, leaving the 5th, 7th and 8th spaces blank, and forward a duplicate to the Accountant General or Treasury Officer at the port at which the officer intends to embark for Europe. Before the officer's departure from his station, the officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay must fill up, and attest the certificate at the end of the original Form C. The Accountant General or Treasury Officer at the port at which the officer intends to embark must obey the letter to his address on the back of Form C, and after copying the entries and signature from the certificate at the end of the original form into the duplicate, must return the original form to the officer. If he be an Accountant General, he must, moreover, forward the duplicate certificate to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and for ward a copy of the certificate at the end of the form to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency, with a letter in the Form G, Appendix B; but if he be a Treasury Officer, he must forward the duplicate Form E to the Accountant General of his own presidency, who must send it to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and forward a copy of the certificate at the end of the form to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency, with a letter in the Form H, Appendix B.

But in the case of a Covenanted Civil Servant, or Military Officer in civil employ, whose appointment has been changed within the period, on his average salary for which his furlough allowance is to be calculated, the rate of furlough allowance will sometimes depend on the date on which he may make over charge of his office, and the Accountant General of his presidency will not be aware of that date at the time the last pay certificate is prepared if the officer intends to embark at a port in a presidency other than that in which he is employed, and has not to pass through the Accountant General's station on his way to that port. For cases in which, for these reasons, the Accountant General is unable to specify the rate of absentee allowance, the following rule is prescribed. The Accountant General of the officer's presidency must send him a document in the Form D, Appendix B, leaving the fifth, sixth, eighth and ninth spaces on the face of the form blank, and forward a duplicate of it to the Accountant General or Treasury Officer at the port at which the officer intends to embark for Europe. Before the officer's departure from his station, the officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay must fill up the sixth space on the face of the original form, and fill up and attest the certificate at the end of that form. The Accountant General or Treasury Officer at the port at which the officer intends to embark for Europe must act up to the instructions in the letter to his address on the back of the form, must copy the entry in the sixth space on the face of the original form and the entries and signature in the certificate at the end of that document into the duplicate form, and must return the original form to the absentee. If he be an Accountant General, he must, moreover, forward the duplicate form to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and forward a copy of the certificate at the end of the form to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency with a letter in the Form K, Appendix B; but if he be a TreasuryOfficer, he must forward the duplicate Form D to the Accountant General of his own presidency, who must send it on to the Local Government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and forward a copy of the certificate at the end of the Form D to the Accountant General of the absentee's presidency with a letter in the Form L, Appendix B.

Case III.—In this case, the Accountant General of the officer's presidency must furnish him with a certificate in Form A, Appendix B; but, if the officer is proceeding to a place within the same presidency or province, the tenth space in the form may be left blank.

Case IV.—In this case, the officer should be furnished with a certificate in the Form M, Appendix B. If he be employed at the station of the Accountant General of his presidency, the certificate should be given by that officer. If he have to pass through that station on his way to his new presidency, the certificate should be given by the officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay, and countersigned by the Accountant General. If he be not employed at, and have not to pass through, the Accountant General's station, the certificate should be given by the officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay, and a duplicate of it should be forwarded by the Treasury Officer to the Accountant General for countersignature and transmission to the Accountant General of the transferred officer's new presidency.

Case V.—In this case, the officer should be furnished with a last-pay certificate in Form M by the officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay.

CHAPTER XIII.

Return to duty.

RULES.

1. When an officer's leave or time for joining an appointment to which no substitute or acting officer has been appointed, expires on a Sunday or holiday, and he takes charge of his duties on the forenoon of the first working day following such Sunday or holiday, he shall be treated in regard to his allowances as if he had taken charge on the day on which his leave expired.

This rule is of general application.

2. As a general rule, no officer can draw the salary of any office until he has actually taken charge of it. But if an unemployed officer be appointed substantively to one post, and to act in another, he need not take charge of the substantive appointment, but may draw his pay and acting allowances from the date on which he takes charge of his acting appointment.

(See also Construction 6, Section VII.)

CHAPTER XIV.

Provisions respecting the rules previously in force.

NOTE.—The word "now" in this Chapter must be interpreted with reference to the date of the first publication of the New Leave Rules, i. e., June 1868.

Section XXIX.—Whatever aggregate amount out of the three years' furlough and three years' sick leave, under the rules until now in force, at present remains to be taken by an officer under the said rules, shall remain to be taken by him under the rules now promulgated.

(See Section II, and Construction 3 under Section I.)

Section XXX.—Rescinded, see note to the Proviso under Section VII.

Section XXXI.—Any officer now absent on leave, who has no appointment, may, on his return and until he again holds an appointment carrying equal pay to that of the substantive appointment which he last held, draw the subsistence allowance of his rank, together with 75 per cent. of the pay of any appointment in which he shall officiate. Provided that the total salary so drawn by him shall not exceed the pay of the appointment in which he is officiating. This rule shall apply to any officer who may have already returned from furlough.

CONSTRUCTIONS AND SUBSIDIARY RULES.

This Section shall in no case be applied so as to raise the aggregate allowances of any officer who may return from furlough after the 23rd November 1869, above the present aggregate allowances of the appointment which he relinquished when he proceeded on furlough.

2. An officer may, at his option, decline to accept the special acting allowance provided in this Section, and take the ordinary acting allowance of 50 per cent. in addition to his subsistence allowance. In such case, the limitation prescribed by the preceding rule will not operate.

Section XXXII.—Obsolete.

Appendix A.

The medical certificate to be furnished by an applicant for furlough or sick leave shall be in the following Form :—

I, A. B., Surgeon at, or of, , do hereby certify that C. D., of the Civil Service, is in a bad state of health, and I solemnly and sincerely declare that, according to the best of my judgment, a change of air is essentially necessary to his recovery, and do therefore recommend that he may be permitted to proceed to sea [or to such place as the Surgeon may think proper, expressing it in the certificate].

The following form shall be observed by the principal medical authority at the nearest principal station, in countersigning the Surgeon's certificate :—

We [or I] do hereby certify that, according to the best of our [or my] professional judgment, after careful personal examination of the case, we [or I] consider the state of health of C. D. to be such as to render leave of absence for a period of absolutely necessary for his recovery.

If the applicant for an extension of leave on medical certificate be residing within 20 miles of London, he must produce a certificate from the Medical Board attached to the India Office, showing the necessity for such extension. If residing beyond that distance from London, certificates in the second of the above forms must be produced from two medical practitioners.

Appendix B.

The following are the forms prescribed for the last-pay certificates:—

[In filling up these forms:—

(1). Allowances should be stated in rupees per mensem, and not in pounds per annum.

(2). In Forms A, B, C, and D, the presidency to which an officer belongs should be stated in the title, and the presidency or province in which he is employed should be stated under the first heading.

(3). In the heading "source from which, &c.," the term "Indian Revenues" should be used in all certificates intended to be sent to England, as the term "Imperial Revenues" has there a different signification. If the allowance is not chargeable finally to the Government of India, the Local Administration or fund from which it is recoverable must be expressly stated.

(4). The date of embarkation, it is to be remembered, is the first day of furlough, and not the last day of subsidiary or preparatory leave.]

NOTIFICATIONS.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 20th January 1871.

No. 478.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following advertisement in substitution of the one published under Notification No. 145, dated the 11th January 1870:—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rhea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and, no doubt, might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost—all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included—of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Owing to the delay that has taken place in maturing the preliminary arrangements, the Government of India has decided that the competition will not be held until the 1st April 1872, thus affording a much longer time than was originally intended for the preparation of machines and their transport to the locality appointed for the competition. The Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore, in the North-Western Provinces, has been fixed as the place where the public competition will be held, and the Government of India will provide one or more small steam-engines to work the machines during the public competition.

7. All machinery, &c., intended for trial must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to the Saharunpore Rhea Plantation, and kept ready before the 1st April 1872, to be there worked under their own supervision, or under that of their representatives, for a sufficient length of time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.

8. Arrangements have now been completed for the supply of dried Rhea stems to intending competitors, both in this country and in Europe, to enable them to form a correct idea of the nature of the plant which their machinery will be required to deal with. Persons in Europe desirous to obtain small supplies of dried Rhea stems for the above purpose, should apply to the Secretary of State for India. Intending competitors in this country, desirous of obtaining supplies of the article, must submit applications to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, in the Form A hereto annexed, prior to the 1st of March 1871; and those who are desirous of testing their machinery on the fresh Rhea at the Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore during the year 1871, must submit their applications to the same authority, in the Form B hereto annexed, prior to the 1st April 1871. The former will have to pay the expenses that may be incurred in packing and despatching the stems. The latter will have to provide all labor and motive power necessary for, and to pay all expenses connected with, their experiments: the fibre turned out by their machines during such experiments to become the property of Government.

9. In order to enable the Government to arrange for the provision of a sufficient stock of fresh Rhea stems for the purposes of the formal competition in April 1872, it is necessary to ascertain beforehand the number of machines that are likely to take part in it; and intending competitors are therefore requested to submit, prior to the 1st May 1871, and in the Form C also hereto annexed, notices of intention to compete.

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the Officer in charge of the Custom House, and that the re-export be made within two years from the date of importation, as shown by the Custom House Register, or within such extended term as the Chief Customs Authority of the Presidency or place, on sufficient cause for such extension being shown, in any case determines.

The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare what goods shall for the purpose of this section be deemed to be capable of being easily identified.

No repayment shall be made under this section on account of any article entered in the Export Manifest of the vessel as ship's stores.

Articles on which, though they be not country articles, an Export Duty is chargeable by law, shall not, on re-exportation, be entitled to claim exemption from such Export Duty by reason of their having paid Duty on importation.

But the said Chief Customs Authority may in any such case direct that no reservation of any part of the Import Duty be made on the re-exportation of such articles."

4. This Act shall be read with and taken as part of the Consolidated Customs Act.

Act to be read with Act VI of 1863.

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF BONDED WAREHOUSE WARRANT.

(See section 2.)

I do hereby certify that have deposited in the Warehouse of the undermentioned goods which goods, the engage on demand, after payment of rent and incidental charges and Government Dues or Customs chargeable thereon, to deliver to the said or their assigns, or to the holder of this warrant to whom it may be transferred by endorsement.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to make three amendments in the Consolidated Customs Act VI of 1863.

Section 23 of that Act authorises the Government of India to prohibit the exportation or importation of any particular class of goods. To prevent a doubt which has been raised as to the extent of the power thus conferred, the Bill introduces words 'by sea or by land, or both by sea and by land.'

A new section provides that, when goods are warehoused, a warrant shall be delivered to the person lodging the goods, and that such warrant shall be transferable by endorsement. This is now the law as regards the Bengal Bonded Warehouse. The change has been suggested by the Government of Bombay.

Another section, intended to replace section 137 of Act VI of 1863, provides that the goods on which drawback was allowed shall be easily identifiable; that the Governor General in Council may determine what such goods shall be deemed to be, and that three-fourths (instead of seven-eighths) shall be the amount of drawback, (one-fourth instead of one-fifth) being retained as reserved duty.

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 17th February 1871, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to make their report thereon in a month:—

No. 6 OF 1871.

A Bill to relieve from Incumbrances the Estates of Taluqdárs in Broach.

the Governor of Bombay in Council, may by order published in the Bombay Government Gazette, appoint an officer (hereinafter called the Manager), and vest in him the management of the immoveable property of or to which the taluqdár is then possessed or entitled in his own right, or which he is entitled to redeem, or which may be acquired by or devolve on the taluqdár or his heir during the continuance of such management.

IV.—SETTLEMENT OF DEBTS.

Notice to claimants against taluqdár.

6. On the publication of the order vesting in him the management of the said property, the Manager shall publish in the Bombay Government Gazette a notice in English and Gujaráthí, calling upon all persons having claims against the taluqdár or his immoveable property to notify the same in writing to such Manager within three months from the date of the publication.

Copies of notice to be exhibited.

He shall also cause copies of such notice to be exhibited at the Mámlatdárs' Kachahrís in the District or Districts in which the said property lies and at such other places as the Manager thinks fit.

Claim to contain full particulars.

7. Every such claimant shall, along with his claim, present full particulars thereof.

Documents to be given up.

Every document on which the claimant founds his claim, or on which he relies in support thereof, shall be delivered to the Manager along with the claim.

Entries in books.

If the document be an entry in any book, the claimant shall produce the book to the Manager, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies. The Manager shall mark the book for the purpose of identification, and, after examining and comparing the copy with the original, shall return the book to the claimant.

Exclusion of documents not produced.

If any document in the possession or under the control of the claimant is not delivered or produced by him to the Manager along with the claim, the Manager may refuse to receive such document in evidence on the claimant's behalf at the investigation of the case.

Debt or liability not duly notified, to be barred.

8. Every debt or liability (other than debts due, or liabilities incurred, to Government) to which the taluqdár is subject, or with which his immoveable property or any part thereof is charged, and which is not duly notified to the Manager within the time and in manner hereinbefore mentioned, shall be barred:

Provision for admission of claim within further period of nine months.

Provided that, when proof is made to the Manager that the claimant was unable to comply with the provisions of sections six and seven, the Manager may admit such claim within the further period of nine months from the expiration of the said period of three months.

Determination of debts and liabilities.

9. The Manager shall, in accordance with the rules to be made under this Act, determine the amount of the debts and liabilities due to the several creditors of the taluqdár and persons holding mortgages, charges or liens on the said property or any part thereof.

Appeal.

10. An appeal against any refusal, admission or determination under sections seven, eight or nine shall lie, if preferred within six weeks from the date of such determination, to the Commissioner of Division to whom the Manager is subordinate, and the decision of such Commissioner, or of the Manager if no such appeal has been so preferred, shall be final.

Scheme for settlement of debts and liabilities.

11. When the total amount of such debts and liabilities has been finally determined, the Manager shall prepare and submit to the Governor of Bombay in Council, a schedule of such debts and liabilities, and a scheme for the settlement thereof; and such scheme, when approved by the Governor of Bombay in Council, shall be carried into effect.

Power to return scheme for revision.

Until such approval is given, the Governor of Bombay in Council may, as often as he thinks fit, send back such scheme to the Manager for revision, and direct him to make such further enquiry as may be requisite for the proper preparation of the scheme.

Restoration of taluqdár to his property.

12. When all such debts and liabilities have been discharged, or if, within six months after the publication of the order mentioned in section three, the Governor of Bombay in Council thinks that the provisions of this Act should not continue to apply to the case of the taluqdár or his heir, the taluqdár or his heir shall be restored to the possession and enjoyment of his immoveable property, or of such part thereof as has not been sold by the Manager under the power contained in section nineteen, but subject to the leases and mortgages (if any) granted and made by the Manager under the powers hereinafter contained.

Revival of barred proceedings and debts.

Where the taluqdár or his heir is so restored under the circumstances mentioned in the second clause of this section, the proceedings, processes, executions and attachments mentioned in section three (so far as they relate to debts and liabilities not settled by the Manager), and the debts and liabilities barred by section eight, shall be revived, and any mortgagee dispossessed under section seventeen shall be reinstated unless his claim under the mortgage has been satisfied; and in calculating the periods of limitation applicable to such revived proceedings and to suits to recover and enforce such revived debts and liabilities, the time intervening between such restoration and the publication of the order mentioned in section three shall be excluded.

V.—POWERS OF MANAGER.

Power to call for further particulars.

13. The Manager may, from time to time, call for further and more detailed particulars of any claim preferred before him under this Act, and may at his discretion refuse to proceed with the investigation of the claim until such particulars are supplied.

Power to summon witnesses and compel production of documents.

14. For the purposes of this Act, the Manager may summon and enforce the attendance of witnesses and compel them to give evidence, and compel the production of documents by the same means, and, as far as possible, in the same manner, as is provided in the case of a Civil Court by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Power to administer oaths.

15. The Manager may administer an oath in such form as he thinks fit to any person examined before him touching the matters to be enquired into under this Act.

Investigation to be deemed a judicial proceeding.

16. Every investigation conducted by the Manager with reference to any claim preferred before him under this Act, or to any matter connected with any such claim, shall be taken to be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Statements of persons examined, to be evidence.

And every statement made by any person examined by or before the Manager with reference to such investigation, whether upon oath or otherwise, shall be taken to be evidence within the meaning of the same Code.

Manager to have powers of a taluqdár

17. The Manager shall have, for the purpose of realizing and recovering the rents and profits of the said immoveable property, the same powers as the taluqdár would have had for such purpose if this Act had not been passed.

Power to remove mortgagee in possession.

And if such property, or any part thereof, be in the possession of any mortgagee, the Manager may apply to the Court of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate, and such Court shall cause the same to be delivered to the Manager as if a decree therefor had been made in his favour; but without prejudice to the mortgagee preferring his claim under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Power to lease.

18. Subject to the rules made under section twenty, the Manager shall have power to demise all or any part of the said property, for any term of years not exceeding twenty years absolute, to take effect in possession, in consideration of any fine or fines, or without fine, and reserving such rents and under such conditions as may be agreed upon.

Power to raise money by mortgage or sale.

19. The Manager, with the previous assent of the Governor of Bombay in Council, shall have power to raise any money which may be required for the settlement of the debts and liabilities (other than as aforesaid) to which the taluqdár is subject, or with which his immoveable property or any part thereof is charged, by demising by way of mortgage the whole or any part of such property for a term not exceeding twenty years from the said publication, or by selling, with the previous consent of the taluqdár and of the person (being of full age) who would be his heir if he died intestate, by public auction or by private contract, and upon such terms as the Manager thinks fit, such portion of the same property as may appear expedient.

And no mortgagee advancing money upon any mortgage made under this section, shall be bound to see that such money is wanted or that no more than is wanted is raised.

Manager's receipts.

And the receipt of the Manager for any monies paid to him upon any mortgage or sale made under this section, or for any rents or profits received by him under section five, shall discharge the person paying the same therefrom and from being concerned to see to the application thereof.

The power to mortgage conferred by this section shall not be exercisable until six months have elapsed from the publication of the order mentioned in section three.

VI.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Power to make rules.

20. The Governor of Bombay in Council may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act in all matters connected with its enforcement.

Such rules, when published in the Bombay Government Gazette, shall have the force of law.

Power to appoint new Managers.

21. Whenever the Governor of Bombay in Council thinks fit, he may appoint any officer to be a Manager in the stead of any Manager appointed under this Act; and thereupon the management then vested under this Act in the former Manager shall become vested in the new Manager.

Every such new Manager shall have the same powers as if he had been originally appointed.

Managers to be public servants.

22. Every Manager appointed under this Act shall be deemed a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Bar of suits.

23. No suit or other proceeding shall be maintained against any person in respect of anything done by him bonâ fide pursuant to this Act.

Petitions, &c., under Act exempt from Court fees.

24. No petition, application, memorandum of appeal or other proceeding under this Act, shall be chargeable under the Court Fees Act, 1870.

Saving of jurisdiction of Courts in Broach in respect of certain suits.

25. Nothing in this Act precludes the Courts of Broach, having jurisdiction in suits relating to the succession to or rights of persons claiming maintenance from any immoveable property brought under the operation of this Act, from entertaining and disposing of such suits; but to all such suits the Manager of such property shall be made a party.

Amendment of Bombay Act VI of 1862.

26. And whereas doubts have been raised as to the validity of Bombay Act No. VI of 1862 (for the amelioration of the condition of Talookdars in the Ahmedabad Collectorate, and for their relief from debt) so far as it purports to affect the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, for the purpose of precluding such doubts, it is hereby further enacted that the expression 'Civil Court,' wherever it occurs in the said Act, shall be deemed to include and to have included the said High Court.

The Thákur of Kerwára.
The Thákur of Dehej.
The Thákur of Janiádra.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Five out of the six Taluqdárs of Broach are heavily indebted, and the object of this Bill, which has been prepared at the desire of the Bombay Government, is to provide means for relieving them from their liabilities. The Bill is in substance the same as the measure passed in 1862 by the Bombay Legislature for the relief of the Ahmedabad Taluqdárs. In form it closely resembles the Oudh Taluqdárs' Act (XXIV of 1870). The opportunity has been taken of confirming the Ahmedábád Act so far as it purports to affect the High Court of Bombay.

CIVIL COURTS' (BENGAL) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the District and Subordinate Civil Courts in Bengal be taken into consideration. He said that although several changes in the details of the Bill had been proposed by the Select Committee, yet the measure retained its original character of a purely consolidating enactment aiming at no material alteration of the substance of the existing law. In thus limiting the scope of the proposed enactment, it was not to be supposed that the legislature intended thereby to affirm that the Civil Courts as now established were, in regard either to their constitution or present jurisdiction, as efficient as under existing circumstances they could be, or that no substantial change was expedient or practicable.

Most persons who had experience in the matter and had given to it much careful thought were agreed that our present system of judicial administration was extremely defective; and many valuable suggestions embracing a complete reconstruction of the system had been made from time to time by those who were most competent to advise the Government on the subject.

But the defects to which he had adverted were not peculiar to any one province or the territories subject to any one Local Government; and their remedy could only be applied through a much wider and more comprehensive measure than a Bill purporting to deal only with the Civil Courts in Bengal.

As a first step in a general scheme for increasing the efficiency of our judicial administration, it was desirable that the entire law by which the present system was regulated should be set forth in a readily accessible and intelligible shape. As regards the Bombay Presidency, the Panjáb, the Central Provinces, Oudh, British Burma and Coorg, this had been already effected by the passing of the several Courts' Acts relating to those territories; but in Bengal and Madras, as the law now stood, it was no easy task to ascertain the precise legal basis of the present constitution and jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in those Presidencies. In illustration of this, he might refer to the great difficulty which he knew that his hon'ble and learned friend (Mr. Stephen)—himself an experienced lawyer—found, when his attention was directed to the question of the improvement of the existing judicial agency, in tracing and welding together the piece-meal legislation from which the Courts derived their present constitution and jurisdiction; and he might further point to the schedule as indicating the fact that the substance of the Bill, consisting of only thirty-eight sections, was at present distributed over no less than thirteen different enactments.

The alterations of the existing law contemplated by the amended Bill were confined for the most part to the supply of those omissions which presumably originated in the disjointed and unconnected form in which the provisions of that law had been from time to time enacted.

There was no corresponding provision in the original, to section ten of the amended, Bill. That section had been introduced for the purpose of applying the general provisions of the Bill to the Civil Courts in certain non-regulation districts of Lower Bengal.

As these Courts practically discharged their judicial functions in subordination to the High Court, in the same manner as the Civil Courts of the Regulation districts, they could not conveniently be excluded from the operation of the proposed Act. At the same time the section had been so framed as not to curtail the latitude accorded to the Local Government by the existing law in regard to the establishment of such Courts.

An omission in the original, in regard to the subject of section 18 of the amended, Bill had been supplied by the transfer thereto of the provisions of Act IX of 1844, for determining the local limits of the respective jurisdiction of Subordinate Judges, where two or more such officers were appointed to the same district. The provision had been extended to meet the case of two or more Munsifs' Courts established within the same division of a district.

Under the existing law, the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge commenced at the pecuniary limit at which the Munsif's jurisdiction ceased, namely, one thousand rupees.

To enable a Subordinate Judge, therefore, to adjudicate in any case of which the subject-matter in dispute was within that amount, it was necessary to invest him with the powers of a Munsif. The effect of section 19 of the amended Bill was to avoid this necessity by giving to the Subordinate Judge power to try suits of any amount within any division of a district in which for the time being there was no Munsif.

Appeals from the orders of Munsifs must, as the law now stood, be preferred in the District Court, and could only be tried by the Subordinate Judge on reference from the District Judge. In many revenue districts there was no resident District Judge, and the District Court of such district was amalgamated with the District Court of some other revenue district in which the Judge resided.

In such cases, in order to have the appeal tried in the Court of the Subordinate Judge in the revenue district in which the litigation commenced and in which all the parties thereto resided, the appellant must prefer his appeal in the Court of the remotely located District Judge, who thereupon referred the case for trial to the Subordinate Judge of the district in which the original proceedings in the case took place.

To avoid the public inconvenience and delay occasioned by this procedure, the Bill empowered the High Court, with the approval of the Local Government, to direct appeals from the orders of Munsifs to be preferred direct to any Subordinate Judge instead of to the District Judge.

Section 24 contained a verbal alteration designed to convey a clearer expression of the meaning and intention of the corresponding provision of the original Bill. That provision was an exact transcript of section 15, Regulation IV of 1793, which applied to Lower Bengal, and clause 1, section 16, Regulation III of 1803, which extended the former enactment to a portion of the territories under the Government of the North-Western Provinces. By Regulation VIII of 1795, a special rule was introduced into the Benares Division, to meet cases in which the parties to the suit might be of different religious persuasions; but this rule was abrogated by Regulation VII of 1832, and it was therein enacted—

"Whenever, in any civil suit, the parties to such suit may be of different persuasions, when one party shall be of the Hindú, and the other of the Muhammadan persuasion, or where one or more of the parties to the suit shall not be either of the Muhammadan or Hindú persuasions, the laws of those religions shall not be permitted to operate to deprive such party or parties of any property to which, but for the operation of such laws, they would have been entitled. In all such cases the decision shall be governed by the principles of justice, equity and good conscience" * * * *.

The apparent deduction from the provisions of these different enactments, taken collectively, was—and he might here remark that the decisions of the Courts on this question pointed to the same conclusion—that the Courts were to apply the Muhammadan law only when both the parties to the suit were Muhammadans, and the Hindú law where both the parties were Hindús, and in all other cases were to follow the rule of equity and good conscience.

The section had now been framed so as to give effect to this construction of the law on the subject.

To section 27, a detailed specification of the different classes of proceedings which might be transferred thereunder had been added. A general power of transfer of proceedings pending in the Court of a District Judge was given by the present law; but it had been held that a merely general provision of this sort was practically almost inoperative, as no proceedings held under any special law, which by the express terms of such law were cognizable only by the District Court, could be diverted therefrom under the authority of an indefinite power of transfer.

The section had consequently been amended in accordance with this view.

Lastly, sections 35 and 36 had been so amended as to save the power of intervention by the Local Government in the cases to which those provisions had reference.

The practical effect of these clauses as they now stood was to substitute the general control of the Local Government, over the Judges' action in regard to the appointment and removal of the ministerial officers of the Civil Courts, for the appellate authority heretofore exercised by the High Court.

This provision was viewed with strong disapprobation by a very high authority, whose opinion would necessarily have great weight with the Council, and the Committee had consequently gone very carefully into the grounds of the objection which had been raised.

It was urged that the proposed enactment involved a grave alteration of the existing law and was likely to prove detrimental to the interests of the public service.

In the opinion of the Select Committee the provision which had been objected to was in perfect accord with the present state of the law on this subject. The principle on which this Bill had been framed was adherence to the spirit and intention, if not always the exact substance, of the existing law, and it was believed that there was nothing in these sections which involved any deviation from that principle.

The earlier Regulations in regard to ministerial officers gave full powers in respect to their appointment and removal to the heads of the offices in which they were employed.

By Regulation V of 1804 this power, as regards ministerial officers receiving a monthly salary of not less than ten rupees, was resumed. The appointment and removal of the chief ministerial officers was reserved to the Governor General in Council; and in the case of the intermediate class of ministerial officers, those functions were delegated to the Sadr Adálat.

By Section 7, Regulation VIII of 1809, the power of appointment and removal of all except the lowest class of ministerial officers,—i. e., the class whose monthly salary was less than ten rupees—was transferred to the Provincial Court of Appeal; and on the abolition of that Court in 1832, its functions devolved upon the Zila or District Judge.

Thus it appeared that, previously to 1804, and again subsequently to 1832, the absolute power of appointment and removal of the ministerial officers of the Civil Courts was by law vested in the District Judge.

In practice, the High Court at Calcutta had always exercised appellate authority in these cases. A memorandum of the cases in which that Court had received appeals from the orders of the District Judge had been obligingly furnished to MR. COCKERELL by the Registrar. It showed that, from the time of the Court's establishment to the end of 1868, one hundred and forty such appeals were heard, and in thirty-five, or one-fourth of the total number, the orders of the Judge were set aside.

In some of these cases the appellants were officers receiving a monthly salary of less than ten rupees, whose employment was, as had been stated above, by law at all times dependent solely on the will of the head of the office to which they were attached; in others, the appeal was preferred by candidates for public employment whose claims had been rejected in favour of other applicants for some vacant post.

At a time when the expediency of devising some plan for the relief of the High Courts from the excessive appellate business of an unimportant character which, under the present system, devolved upon them, to the detriment of the efficient and economical administration of justice, was so generally acknowledged, it seemed obviously to be contrary to the interests of the public service that a practice, which tended to the occupation of the valuable time of the Judges in dealing with such petty cases as he had just described, should be suffered to continue.

Moreover, MR. COCKERELL thought much was to be said in favour of the provision of the Bill on the ground of the expediency of strengthening the hands of the District Judge in the control of the officers of his own Court and of the subordinate Courts. It was well known that the conduct of these officers largely affected, and necessarily so, the local administration of justice, and he thought that the security for the good conduct of such officers depended in great measure on the strength of the local control.

There could be no doubt but that the maintenance of discipline was greatly prejudiced by the action of a distant controlling authority, which operated so as to create an indiscriminate right of appeal against the orders of the local functionary.

For these reasons he was very strongly of opinion that the provision of the Bill in this matter was correct and should be maintained. The principle on which it rested was the only intelligible one by which the division of the controlling functions of the Local Government and the High Court could be regulated.

There were no other points calling for special remark. He had already explained that the measure was not to be regarded as finite, or in any way pledging the legislature to the approval or permanent maintenance of the present status of the Courts of civil judicature, but for the limited object which it had in view, he had every confidence that the Bill, if passed into law, would be found useful and complete.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN was glad to find his Hon'ble friend admitted that this Bill was to be considered of a temporary nature. MR. CHAPMAN much wished that Mr. Cockerell had seen his way to deal with the measure in a more general and comprehensive manner.

It was barely two years since the Council legislated for the Civil Courts of Bombay; we were now providing for those of Bengal; and the requirements of Madras in this respect would shortly come under consideration. He believed there would be no great difficulty in enacting a law for the regulation of all the Civil Courts in India under the jurisdiction of the several High Courts. The existing constitution of these Courts was everywhere nearly similar. In all three Presidencies there was the District Judge with two classes of officers of lesser jurisdiction under him; and there were, finally, Her Majesty's High Courts over all.

Such being the condition of affairs, it did seem to him advisable that there should, as far as possible, be no diversity in the relations of the several Governments towards their respective High Courts especially in matters relating to patronage and discipline. If, for example, in the case of Bombay, the Legislature had declared it to be expedient that the appointment of all Subordinate Judges should vest in the Executive Government, it surely did not seem consistent to say that in Bengal the Judges were to have the patronage. Then, again, if in Bombay a University degree was held to be a qualification for office, why should this standard be ignored in Bengal? MR. CHAPMAN might go on repeating points of difference even in the matter of nomenclature, but he thought he had said enough to shew that the present Bill could not be looked upon as final and complete.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN wished to make a few remarks with reference to the observations of the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman, and also to add a few words to the very complete explanation given by the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell of the several provisions of the proposed Act. He did not think that his two Hon'ble friends were speaking of the same thing when one admitted, and the other accepted with satisfaction, the admission, that this Bill was not complete. The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell meant to say (and MR. STEPHEN certainly agreed with him) that he was desirous that the public should understand that it was not the intention of those who introduced this measure that it should be taken as ratifying and approving the existing system of Civil Procedure and the existing system of our Civil Courts; which, of course, was intimately connected with that procedure. No one could have studied the subject without seeing that, although it was difficult to provide a remedy, it was easy to observe the defects of the present state of things. He had no right to dogmatize on the question how those defects might be set to rights; but he could state with some confidence, his conviction that they never would be set to rights until they were fully understood, and that a great step towards their full comprehension was made by stating the law in a plain and unmistakeable form. So much for what had fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell.

He apprehended that this was not what the Hon'ble Mr. Chapman meant when he said that the Bill was not to be taken as complete, but that he intended by that remark to express his regret that a general Civil Courts Bill for the whole of British India, or at least for the whole of the Regulation Provinces, was not introduced. MR. STEPHEN's answer to that was that the project was too ambitious. The difficulty of producing any measure of the kind which would give satisfaction in its arrangement to all the Local Governments was one which would be very well estimated from the observations which fell from the Hon'ble Mr Chapman himself, because he had pointed out in his observations several differences which existed between the system of Bengal and the system of Bombay. The fact was that in every one of the presidencies a system prevailed slightly different from the systems of the other presidencies. The differences were not perhaps very important in themselves, but they related to topics on which there would be most prolonged and animated discussion if any question were raised about them. The arrangements now in existence in Bombay were arrived at some time since, and were enacted into law in 1869. The arrangements which at present existed in Bengal had also been arrived at after great discussion very recently. And the reason why he for one would not advocate having one general Act on the subject was that he did not wish to revive those discussions, which would entail a great waste of time. There was another reason besides this. He hoped that ultimately the Indian Statute Book might be divided into Parts corresponding to the Local Extent of the Acts, many of which had to be local in their extent because under the Indian Councils' Act the local legislatures had not power to pass them. There would be the Acts relating to Bengal, the Acts relating to Bombay, the Acts relating to Madras, the Acts relating to the North-Western Provinces, and the Acts relating to the Non-Regulation Provinces in separate collections of very small volumes, and there would be the general Acts relating to the country at large. That was the scheme on which the greater part of our consolidation measures had gone, and he thought the Council would agree with him that it was a scheme which had considerable recommendations. These Courts Bills were in his opinion emphatically local, and each ought to go into the collection of Acts referring to the province to which it related. Besides this no one said that the administration of civil justice was on any thing like the footing on which we would wish to see it. If it was not on that footing, it was far more easy to have a Civil Courts Bill for each province by itself, because, then, alterations could be made with much greater ease, and with less disturbance of the whole system. It might be said if the law is in such an unsatisfactory condition, why consolidate it at all? His answer to that was—in order that we might know what we were about. In this way you did know what you were about: you had a distinct plan on which to work. If you had no such plan, your alterations would either be sweeping and made in the dark, or else they would be slight and technical, making that which was already technical and difficult to understand, much more technical and difficult to understand. Moreover, when you undertook so large a subject as the alteration and reform of the judicial system of an empire like this, it was necessary to go by steps and proceed with great caution. There were many consents to be obtained, there were many separate Governments to be consulted to whose opinions the greatest deference was due, and sanction must be received from home. All that implied a necessity for great delay. It was much better, while we were about it, to secure what was an undoubted advantage so far as it went.

MR. STEPHEN might, however, make some remarks on the topic alluded to by the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell, in order to show how very necessary the present measure was for the purpose described. The Bill as it stood had at all events the merit of giving in thirty-eight sections a perfectly clear account of the Civil Courts of Bengal, and any one who became a Civil Servant of the Bengal Presidency after the passing of this Act, would have nothing more to do, if he wanted to know what the Civil Courts were, than to read this Act. Now, he would just point out, by reference to the schedule of Acts and parts of Acts to be repealed, the kind of process which a person would have to go through at present if he wanted to get authentic information regarding the Civil Courts of Bengal. First, he would have to go to the year 1793, and to two Regulations, large parts of which had been repealed and amended and re-amended, when he would find that two bits of Regulation III of 1793 and one bit of Regulation IV of 1793 still remained in force, and that these bits, which would not strike anybody as being of any great importance, were the real foundation of the present judicial system of Bengal. A part of Regulation III of 1793 defined the jurisdiction of the Zila Courts, and was law to this day. A part of Regulation IV of 1793 was also the foundation of the Civil Procedure of those Courts. When the student had found out how much of these two Regulations had not been repealed, he would have made the first step towards a general theory upon the subject. These Regulations, however, applied only to the zilas of Lower Bengal, and to the cities of Patna, Dacca, and Murshidábád. The student would next come to the year 1795, and find two more Regulations of which certain portions were unrepealed, and when he discovered what they were, he would find that a similar system applied to the cities of Benares, Mirzapúr, Gházípúr, and Jaunpúr. From 1795 he would go to the year 1803, and would find a similar couple of Regulations relating to the Provinces ceded by the Nawáb Názim of Bengal to the East India Company, and then he would have to consult some historical work to find who the Nawáb Názim was and what Provinces were ceded by him. Then he would have to go to the year 1805, which extended the Regulations to the Conquered Provinces situated within the Doáb and on the right bank of the Jamna and to the territory ceded by the Peishwa. In short, he would have to go through a prolonged course of reading, before he could discover what Civil Courts existed in Bengal. In practice of course no one or hardly any one would take all that trouble. Practically people learned the system by practice and conversation, but he believed the consequence of that to be that the minds of many persons continued throughout their career to be in a confused and uncertain condition on the whole subject. That was a considerable evil in a country like this, where it was absolutely necessary to put young men with little professional experience and training, to the discharge of very important and arduous duties; and therefore it would be a great convenience, if they were enabled to get the necessary information without much trouble.

These were the considerations which had led to the framing of this Bill in its present form. As to the details, they had been so fully stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell that it was not necessary for him to trouble the Council with any further remarks on the subject.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BROACH TALUQDÁRS' RELIEF BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHAPMAN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to relieve from incumbrances the estates of Taluqdárs in Broach. He said that the provisions of the Bill he proposed to introduce were identical with those contained in the Oudh Act passed as recently as September last.

The persons for whose benefit this measure of relief was intended were five in number. They were descendants of the ancient Rájpút family, who were the former proprietors of Gujarát, and some of whom were forcibly converted to Muhammadanism at the time of the conquest.

It was not necessary for MR. CHAPMAN, on this occasion, to enter on the question as to whether it was just and politic on the part of Government to shield from utter ruin the ancient landed aristocracy of this country, and to prevent their estates being swept away by the action of our Courts. In the present instance the Government must be distinctly understood as not committing themselves to any general policy on the subject The idea of protective interference of this kind originated in Bombay, and a local Act was passed for the benefit of the Ahmedábád Taluqdárs. It had been deemed expedient to extend the same kind of relief to the Broach Taluqdárs, whose circumstances were precisely similar and whose estates were situated in the adjoining Collectorate. The Government had already promised to advance the sum requisite to clear these estates from incumbrances in the same manner as had been so successfully done in the case of the Ahmedábád Taluqdárs. The Council were now asked, as a special case, to give the Government the necessary legal authority.

Colonel the Hon'ble R. STRACHEY said, although he had no intention of moving a negative, he desired to take the first opportunity of objecting entirely to legislation of this character. The Hon'ble Mr. Chapman had told the Council that he was not on the present occasion about to discuss the policy of the measure. But COLONEL STRACHEY thought that the only ground on which such a measure should be brought forward was that its policy was such as the Government approved; and if the Government approved of its policy, it would be in a position at some future time to explain it.

The Hon'ble MR. ROBINSON said he viewed with very great regret the extension of the policy of the Oudh Taluqdárs' Act. There was a case in the Madras Presidency where the proprietors of some very badly managed zamíndáris had asked the Government to advance twenty lákhs of rupees for the purpose of bolstering up their badly managed zamíndáris. He thought there was no doubt that the Oudh legislation was leading zamíndárs to look forward to Government help to relieve them from difficulties which were not caused by the action of our Courts, but by their own dissolute and irregular conduct. The Courts were not to blame for such results, and he therefore viewed with very great regret any attempt to extend the legislation that had taken place in regard to the Oudh Taluqdárs. He had not seen this Bill until a few hours before the meeting of the Council, and he understood that it was not allowable to raise objections to a Bill at this stage; he was not prepared, therefore, to enter fully into the question, but had only made the few observations that occurred to him at the time.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

CONSOLIDATED CUSTOMS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR RICHARD TEMPLE moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the further amendment of the Consolidated Customs Act. He said that, as the Council would remember, that Act was passed in 1863, and from time to time various amendments in the details had become necessary. On the present occasion three amendments were proposed, which he would explain in the briefest possible form. As the Council were aware, the Government of India was empowered by section 23 to prohibit the importation or exportation of any particular class of goods. Doubts had arisen as to whether that authorised the prohibition of the importation or exportation of goods by land. It was very necessary that those doubts should be removed, and he therefore proposed to insert the words "by land or by sea, or both by land and by sea."

Again, in the Calcutta Bonded Warehouse there was a very important rule, that when any person lodged goods in the Warehouse he received a certificate which was transferable by endorsement. We proposed to extend that rule to the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay.

The third amendment proposed was this. Certain parts of India, especially Bombay, had become what were called entrepôts of commerce, that was to say, goods were imported into these places and then again re-exported. Of course such goods had paid import-duty; but when they were re-exported, a drawback was allowed. That was to say, the import-duty was refunded to the importer, a certain portion being reserved as a security to the State. Well, it became, as experience showed, of great importance that goods once imported in order to be re-exported should be easy of identification, and also that the Government should have the power of specifying what those goods should be. We, therefore, now proposed to enumerate the classes of goods which could be so re-exported. Also we proposed that the proportion of duty retained by the State in cases of drawback should be somewhat enlarged. This appeared necessary for securing the just dues of the State. Three-fourths (instead of seven-eighths) would be the amount of drawback, and one-fourth (instead of one-eighth) would be retained as reserved duty.

It was possible that, when the Bill went into Committee, one or two further points would arise in which an amendment of the law might appear desirable.

The Hon'ble MR. STEPHEN was sorry that the present measure should be introduced as a mere amending Bill, because it was much better to consolidate the Acts on a given subject than to amend them piecemeal from time to time. And as the Consolidated Customs Act had already been more than once amended, it would have been better to have a comprehensive measure than to pass another amending Act. But our hands were tied in this matter, and that was the justification of this Bill. The Consolidated Customs Act contained several sections relating to the coasting trade of India. Now, there was an English Statute (32 & 33 Vic., cap. XI) the fourth section of which forbad the legislature of any British possession to bring into force any law relating to the coasting trade until Her Majesty's pleasure thereon had been publicly signified. The effect of this would be that if we were to consolidate the various Customs Acts into one, we should have to get the Secretary of State's previous consent to the measure, and before that could be obtained, there might be considerable changes in the system which we should have to administer. For the present, therefore, the consolidation measure must stand over.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 17th February 1871.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 26th January 1871.

No. 478.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following advertisement in substitution of the one published under Notification No. 145, dated the 11th January 1870:—

ADVERTISEMENT.

1. The Government of India, after communication with various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in India, and with persons interested in the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that the only real obstacle to the development of an extensive trade in the fibre of Rhea or China-grass is the want of suitable machinery for separating the fibre and bark from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, the cost of effecting such separation by manual labour being great.

2. The demand for the fibre is now large, and, no doubt, might be extended with reduced prices, and there is a practically unlimited extent of country in India where the plant could be grown.

3. The requirements of the case appear to be some machinery or process capable of producing, with the aid of animal, water, or steam-power, a ton of fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £50 per ton in the English market, at a total cost—all processes of manufacture and allowance for wear and tear included—of not more than £15 per ton. The said processes are to be understood to include all the operations performed, after the cutting and transport of the plant to the place of manufacture to the completion of the manufacture of fibre of the quality above described. The machinery must be simple, strong, durable, and cheap, and should be suited for erection at or near the plantations, as the refuse is very useful as manure for continued cultivation.

4. To stimulate the invention or adaptation of such machinery or process, the Government of India hereby offers a prize of £5,000 for the machine and process that best fulfils all the requirements named above.

5. Rewards of moderate amount will be given for really meritorious inventions, even though failing to meet entirely all the conditions named.

6. Owing to the delay that has taken place in maturing the preliminary arrangements, the Government of India has decided that the competition will not be held until the 1st April 1872, thus affording a much longer time than was originally intended for the preparation of machines and their transport to the locality appointed for the competition. The Government Rhea Plantation at Saharunpore, in the North-Western Provinces, has been fixed as the place where the public competition will be held, and the Government of India will provide one or more small steam-engines to work the machines during the public competition.

7. All machinery, &c., intended for trial must be brought by the competitors at their own charge to the Saharunpore Rhea Plantation, and kept ready before the 1st April 1872, to be there worked under their own supervision, or under that of their representatives, for a sufficient length of time to enable the judges appointed by Government to determine whether all the conditions named have been complied with. The prize machine is to be transferred, if required, to Government at 5 per cent. above cost price; the patent right in any such machine to be also transferred, if required, to Government, on the latter securing to the patentee a royalty of 5 per cent. on the cost price of all machines manufactured under the patent during its currency.
